ALDERMEN VOTE $75,000 SPECIAL FUND FOR RELIEF

Residence of One Year in City Required of Beneficiaries—No Time Limit on Expenditure.

OTHER LIMITATIONS ARE DEFEATED

Proposal That Only Taxpayers and Registered Voters Be Aided Loses, 14 to 12.

The emergency appropriation of $75,000 for relief was passed unanimously yesterday by the Board of Aldermen after it had rejected, by a vote of 14 to 12, an amendment which would have restricted use of the funds to assistance for "taxpayers and registered voters."

Mayor Dickmann is expected to sign the measure tomorrow, and since the bill carries the emergency clause, it will become effective as soon as he signs it.

The St. Louis Relief Administration, anticipating passage of the appropriation, which supplements the city's regular relief contribution of $147,000 a month, began spending the money several days ago, drawing on a revolving fund to restore to the relief rolls some of the 12,000 men, women and children who were dropped last month for lack of funds.

Few "Taxpayers" on Relief.

Alderman Walter Ziegenbalg offered the amendment which would have made "taxpayers and registered voters" the only beneficiaries of the appropriation, and his amendment had the support of 12 members of the anti-Dickmann faction within the board. Alderman Emmett Golden, floor leader, opposed the amendment on the ground that it would invite the suggestion of mixing politics with relief.

Among the destitute on the relief rolls there are, of course, few "taxpayers," unless all who pay a sales tax of one mill whenever they buy a loaf of bread may be so designated. Ziegenbalg's amendment, however, received serious consideration.

He argued that unless the amendment were adopted there would be an influx of needy persons to St. Louis from other parts of the State. Alderman Hubert Hoeflinger said he was inclined to agree with Ziegenbalg.

A new note was introduced into the discussion when Alderman William Warnick proposed that the money be used to take care of people who were hungry. It should make no difference, said Warnick, whether they were taxpayers, registered voters or residents of the city for a year or for six months.

Year's Residence Required.

Warnick was the only member of the board who opposed an amendment added to the bill at the suggestion of the Ways and Means Committee, fixing a residence requirement of one year in the city for those entitled to help with the money. That amendment was adopted, along with two proposed by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, one requiring that none of the money be used for administrative expenses, the other specifying that there shall be no time limit within which the money is to be expended.

Just before the final vote Golden announced that several Aldermen had requested him to make it clear that the board was not influenced by "duress" or "intimidation" in passing the appropriation, and that its action was not to be regarded as establishing a precedent for similar steps in future.

"Alleged Workers' Union."

In mentioning "duress" and "intimidation" Golden referred to "the alleged American Workers' Union" and to "residents of St. Louis County."

Members of the American Workers' Union have participated in three recent demonstrations demanding additional relief appropriations, and Golden previously had criticised the Emergency Committee of 100 formed Tuesday night at the Sheldon Memorial for the purpose of creating public sentiment for additional relief appropriations on the ground that several members of the committee's executive board were residents of the county. Dean Sidney E. Sweet of Christ Church Cathedral is chairman of the committee.

ITALIAN SENATE RATIFIES ANNEXATION OF ETHIOPIA

"Let None Think He Can Falsify Victory," Marconi Says—Plaque Commemorating New Empire Dedicated.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, May 16.—Decrees annexing Ethiopia to Italy under the rule of Victor Emmanuel III as Emperor of Ethiopia, were passed today by the Senate.

"Let no one delude himself into thinking he can damage or falsify Italy's victory," declared Senator Guglielmo Marconi, wireless inventor, in presenting the bill. "Whoever still seeks to thwart Italy falls into the gravest injustice and most dangerous folly."

Cheers greeted the announcement of the vote for ratification.

Final ratification was made a week after Mussolini, standing on the balcony of the Palazzo Venezia, proclaimed the conquest of Ethiopia and claimed sovereignty over it.

The Chamber of Deputies approved the bill earlier in the week.

Crown Prince Umberto was the first voter. Other Princes of the ruling house of Savoy, all Senators, followed him.

Following the Senate session, Premier Mussolini and the royal Princes dedicated a marble plaque at the Senate entrance to commemorate the founding of the new empire.

All of the 337 Senators present voted in favor of the empire decree. A total of 108 were absent, but it was suggested many probably were serving with the Italian armies in Ethiopia.

The board of directors of the semi-official Public Works Finance Corporation, meanwhile, voted 100,000,000 lire ($7,000,000) to set up a corporation for Ethiopian public works.

Prince Ernst Rudiger von Starhemberg, whom Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria has removed from power as co-dictator, was here ostensibly to attend a football game, but reported to be seeking Mussolini's support. He attended the session of the Senate.

Only today, however, Mussolini sent Schuschnigg a telegram, expressing "best wishes for the continuance and success of your work."

Tonight Premier Mussolini formally received Starhemberg. A one-line communique said they had a "cordial conversation.."

7 KILLED WHEN AUTO SPEEDS INTO SIDE OF FREIGHT TRAIN

Impact So Violent That Box Car's Trucks Are Knocked From Rails in Ohio.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., May 16.—Seven men and boys, speeding from a wedding, died today when the new automobile in which they were riding crashed into the side of an Erie freight train at the West Austintown crossing. Four were almost instantly killed while three died in the hospital.

The dead: Dominic Pachell, 10 years old; Peter Pachell, 29; Patrick Pachell, 24; Sam Carrozino, 18; John Carrozino, 12; Guy Peters, 25; Carl Pachell, 24.

Henry Henning, whose home borders the tracks, said, "I saw the car coming down the road a whizzing. The car started to put on its brakes. The tires screeched. It almost turned over just before it hit." So violent was the impact that a freight car's trucks were knocked from the rails.

John and Sam Carrozino were brothers of the bride, Marjorie, who had just married Augustine Patrous. Patrick and Peter Pachell, brothers, were uncles of the bride, and of Dominic and Carl Pachell. Guy Peters was cousin of the bride.

HINDENBURG STARTS SECOND TRIP TO U. S.

Leaves German Field After 9 Hours' Delay—16 Americans Aboard.

By the Associated Press.

FRANKFORT - ON-THE-MAIN, Germany, May 17. — (Sunday) — The Zeppelin Hindenburg took off at 5:35 a. m. today on its second flight to Lakehurst, N. J., after being held here for nine hours by unfavorable winds. Sixteen Americans and more than 20 Europeans were aboard as passengers.

Dr. Hugo Eckener, the Zeppelin pioneer who blazed a new trail across the Atlantic on the Hindenburg's first trip, decided to stay behind this time, and the craft was under the sole command of Capt. Ernst Lehmann. It was said that Dr. Eckener's decision not to make the second flight had no connection with his controversy with the Propaganda Ministry.

Before the Hindenburg was taken from its hangar, Ludwig Duerr, its chief constructor and designer, predicted that better but not bigger airships would be built. "We must improve the quality, rather than the size," he said. "For instance, the Hindenburg relatively is a show ship. As the motors improve, we shall learn from experience just which streamlined form is most perfect. We expect to achieve faster time than at present."

The names of 16 Americans aboard the Hindenburg were announced as follows: Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Cowles Jr. of Des Moines, Ia. (Cowles is executive director of the Des Moines Register and Tribune); Miss Maud Ethel Manfred of New York; John Banta and Henry Mann, both New York bankers; Fred Winter, Denver, Colo., merchant; R. L. Hopkins, banker from Miami, Fla.; Lieut. Howard Thomas Orville of Lakehurst, N. J.; John Murray, Thornton, naval officer from Norfolk, Va.; Dr. Matthew Taylor Mellon of Pittsburgh, Pa.; E. Bartley of Chicago; Einar Beyer, Seattle consul; Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Plitt of Baltimore; P. MacHall of Highland, N. Y., and Harold J. Dick of Akron, O.

EX-PREMIER TSALDARIS OF GREECE DIES AT 68

His Cabinet Overthrown in 1935; When Royalists Seized Power Before King's Return.

ATHENS, May 17.—(Sunday)—Panayoti Tsaldaris, former premier and long a leader of the Greek Royalist party, died at 1 a. m. today of heart disease at his home in Athens. Tsaldaris was 68 years old. He died after returning from a political meeting. His wife was at his bedside. His funeral will be held tomorrow.

Some sources said he never fully recovered from the overthrow of his cabinet in October, 1935, when Royalist officers seized the government before the recall of King George II to the throne.

Tsaldaris was forced to resign from the premiership although he had expressed himself in favor of the restoration. In the election which was subsequently held the national approved the restoration of George II, who returned from exile in London.

Tsaldaris was premier in 1934 when Samuel Insull of Chicago fled to Greece. Tsaldaris insisted at first Insull must leave the country, but later announced he might retain his temporary residence in Greece indefinitely.

SENATORS' NEW TAX PLAN RUNS INTO OBJECTIONS

Views of Committeemen on Handling Undivided Corporation Profits Are Still Divergent.

ELECTION YEAR FEAR OF GENERAL BOOST

Proposal to Raise Rate of All Income Levy Payers Considered Certain to Stir Up a Fight.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 16. — The Senate Finance Committee was informed by the treasury today that its latest compromise revenue plan would produce the required $622,000,000 permanent revenue, but halted its drive to redraft the House tax bill to await more accurate calculations.

At the same time some support originally accorded the new plan appeared to be wavering.

In seeking to break a deadlock over revision of the House measure, the committee late yesterday alighted tentatively on an arrangement for taxing corporation income at 18 per cent, undistributed corporation earnings at 7 per cent, placing corporate dividends under the normal income tax and increasing the basic income tax rate from 4 per cent to 5 per cent.

Several Senate committeemen who were originally agreeable to such a revision indicated today however, that after studying the new plan carefully, they were not overly enthusiastic about it. Some of them said privately that business would like it no better, perhaps not as well as the bill which passed the House.

Widely Divergent Views.

It developed that the committee still had greatly divergent views as to taxing undivided corporation profits—the major one of President Roosevelt's tax suggestions. Some Senators objected that the proposed seven per cent rate was too high and should be chopped down to at least 5 per cent. Others favored an even higher rate.

Further complicating the situation was the fact that a proposal to boost the rate of every income taxpayer in an election year was almost certain to encounter trouble on the Senate floor and again in conference with the House. The latest proposed income tax increase would affect perhaps as many as 2,000,000 persons.

Nevertheless, most committeemen appeared to take it for granted that some program would be adopted embracing a flat tax on corporation income, with additional surtaxes on any earnings not converted into dividends to stockholders.

House and the President.

The bill, as passed by the House, would levy on corporate profits at rates graduated according to percentages of total earnings withheld from distribution. Dividends would be placed under the normal income tax. The present corporation tax of 12½ to 15 per cent would be repealed at once, and capital stock and excess profits taxes ultimately would be abolished.

The President, in his tax message, recommended a levy on undistributed profits which would equal the tax which would be paid if the profits were distributed. Treasury experts estimated this would average 33⅓ per cent. In the House this was modified to a graduated tax up to 42½ per cent on all corporate income, depending on how much of it was withheld from dividends. The House adopted the President's proposal for repealing all existing corporate levies. It was this repealer which met with most opposition in the Senate.

Other Features Tackled.

The Treasury's rough estimate of the new Senate committee plan yield was around $625,000,000, which is $2,000,000 more than the administration requested from undistributed corporate income. The Department's tax experts said they would be unable to submit an exact computation until Monday

So the committee tackled some of the comparatively minor features of the bill, including the 80 per cent "windfall" and refunds on floor stocks, with a view to clarifying and perfecting them.

Chairman Harrison (Dem.), Mississippi, said no definite agreement was reached, but asserted that some changes of a technical nature would be worked into these angles of the measure. He said, however, he thought there would be no change in the rate of the "windfall."

31 HURT AT PIER IN STRIKE RIOT AS LINER SAILS

1000 Pickets and Sympathizers in New York Driven Off With Clubs by 120 Policemen.

SIX OFFICERS AMONG INJURED

Five Persons Arrested — Disturbers Walked Out in Defiance of Union's Settlement.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 16.—Thirty-one persons were hurt and five were arrested when 1000 pickets and sympathizers in the Seamen's strike fought more than 100 policemen at noon today when the Panama Pacific liner Virginia sailed today.

The pickets and their partisans surged toward a passenger entrance at the liner's North River pier just as it was leaving her mooring. Three mounted policemen were forced backward.

One hundred patrolmen on foot and 20 more mounted men then met the crowd and dispersed it with nightsticks. When the strikers reformed lines across the street, the police advanced again.

Six of those hurt were policemen, a mounted officer said. A one-armed rioter attacked him with a steel hook attached to his stump. Another mounted officer was hit with a piece of concrete. None of the injuries was reported serious, although many were treated at hospitals.

The fighting blocked an arriving taxi in which was Dr. Ferdinand Veverka, Czechoslovakian Minister to the United States, who boarded the Virginia for Havana.

The nucleus of the strikers was a picket of members of the International Seamen's Union. Since March they have conducted a strike against shipping here, in defiance of their union officers, as a protest against terms of a recently approved wage contract.

The demonstration at the pier, however, included many outsiders who said they represented the League of Women Shoppers, the American League Against War and Fascism, the American Student Union, the International Labor Defense, and the Citizen's Committee for the Aid of Striking Seamen.

Joseph Curran, strike chairman who recently was expelled with 19 others from the sailor's branch of the International Seamen's Union because of the unauthorized strike, had protested that the Virginia was inadequately manned.

A. J. McCarthy, vice-president of the International Mercantile Marine of which Panama Pacific is a subsidiary, termed the charges "ridiculous."

Nineteen men describing themselves as members of the crew of the freighter Massmar of the Southern Pacific line today walked ashore on the vessel's arrival from Boston. They said they would not return until the strike had been settled.

MAN FIRES ON THEATER CROWD IN JERUSALEM; 3 JEWS KILLED

Assailant Said by News Agency to Be Young Arab Who Escaped in Auto.

By the Associated Press.

JERUSALEM, May 16. — Two Jews were killed and a third was fatally wounded today when an unidentified man emptied his revolver into a crowd leaving a motion picture house. The wounded man died in a hospital. Two others were slightly wounded. The Palcor News Agency reported the assailant was a young Arab who escaped in a waiting automobile. Troops were called out to reinforce the police.

The shooting followed a day of comparative quiet after demonstrations yesterday coincident with the opening of an Arab civil disobedience movement directed at stopping Jewish immigration.

Two Arabs were killed and about 40 wounded in yesterday's disorders. A police cordon was thrown around the strip of territory between the cities of Arab Jaffa and all-Jewish Tel Aviv. Fire destroyed some of the crops of Jews in Atlit today and police were reported by the Jewish Telegraphic agency to have killed one Arab.

DEFENSE OPENS TOMORROW IN FLOGGING TRIAL

Only 5 Defendants After Judge Orders Acquittal of Tampa Ex-Chief and Former Policeman.

HIS RULING LIMITS SCOPE OF EVIDENCE

Confined to What Happened to Victim Between Questioning and Handing Over to Assailants.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

BARTOW, Fla., May 16.—The Florida flogging trial, which opened six weeks ago with seven defendants and a variety of charges, all relating to the kidnaping of Eugene F. Poulnot, one of the victims, has reduced itself to five defendants charged only with the kidnaping.

Defense testimony will begin Monday. It is expected that it may be concluded Tuesday unless arguments, which have repeatedly halted the proceedings thus far, intervene.

Action of Judge Robert T. Dewell today in granting a directed verdict of acquittal for R. G. Tittsworth, former Tampa chief of police, charged as being an accessory after the fact, and for Robert Chappell, a former policeman, also served to limit the scope of evidence which the jury may consider, since the Judge ruled out sections of the information which he deemed did not sufficiently allege the statutory crime of kidnaping.

Judge Dewell explained, out of court, that the only evidence falling within the scope of the kidnaping charge would be what happened to Poulnot between the time of his questioning at Tampa police headquarters and the time when he was turned over to floggers who waited in cars on the outskirts of Tampa.

Substance of Judge's Ruling.

In effect the Judge held that the warrantless raid on the "Modern Democrats" meeting in a private home did not constitute kidnaping nor could their arrival at police headquarters be construed as "secret imprisonment" since they were docketed for "investigation as to Communistic activities" and no attempt was made to conceal them from passersby.

What happened to Poulnot after he was turned over to the floggers is not at issue in this trial, the Judge has held, since there is no charge that the five remaining defendants participated in the actual beating.

Poulnot, however, has related his experiences to the jury as has Sam J. Rogers, the other surviving flogging victim. The third man who was flogged, tarred and feathered, was Joseph A. Shoemaker, exponent of the "Modern Democrats," who died of his injuries.

All of the five defendants remaining in this trial, regarded as a test case, are under indictment for second degree murder in the death of Shoemaker as are Chappell and three men from Orlando, who had previous to the crime served as "special police" at one of Tampa's elections.

Tittsworth, the former Chief of Police, is under indictment as an accessory after the fact in the murder of Shoemaker. It is extremely doubtful, however, if he will go to trial since the evidence against him is similar to that presented at this trial. The same situation applies to Chappell.

Those Still on Trial.

Defendants still on trial are C. A. Brown Jr., leader of the raiding party; John P. Bridges, Sam Crosby, F. W. Switzer and C. W. Carlisle.

Although only 30 or so persons were in the courtroom today as Judge Dewell read his ruling, the atmosphere was tense, the defendants leaning forward anxiously. All obviously had anticipated being freed forthwith and had been in buoyant spirits for several days.

The Judge read the following ruling:

"The Court is of the opinion that counts one, two and three of the information do not sufficiently allege the statutory crime of kidnaping and will, therefore, take the consideration of these counts away from the jury. The Court is further of the opinion that the fourth count of the information sufficiently alleges the statutory crime of kidnaping and will accordingly leave this count for consideration of the jury.

"The motion for directed verdict is well taken as to the defendants, R. G. Tittsworth and Robert Chappel and the Court will grant the motion as to the defendants, R. G. Tittsworth and Robert Chappell,

THREE KILLED IN FIRE AT AMUSEMENT PARK

Blaze Breaks Out in "Jungles" Concession; Four Injured at Detroit.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, May 16.—Three persons at a Detroit amusement park were burned to death tonight when flames swept four concessions. Firemen continued a search of the ruins after a report a child also might have been trapped by the flames.

The three bodies were taken from the dimly-lighted "jungles," a maze of passages overhung with grass, in which mechanical animals with lighted eyes were concealed.

Two of the dead were identified tentatively, as Al Miller and Wanda F. Dward, both of Detroit. The other body was that of a man.

Four persons were taken to a Detroit hospital, one, Mrs. Frances Zomkowski, seriously burned on the face and arms.

The flames spreading swiftly to adjoining concessions threw the electric plant of the park out of commission, and halted a giant Ferris wheel.

John Durkoth of Hamtramck, who with Helen Orlop, was carried unconscious from the burning concession and treated at the hospital, described the spread of the flames.

"I thought the smoke was just an additional thrill," he said. "Then I saw the flames, and even that didn't startle me until the lights went out.

"I shouted 'That's the real thing,' there was some screaming, and Miss Orlop and I turned to start back. It was dark, and we stumbled along not knowing which way we were going. The smoke was choking me. The next thing I remembered I was being carried away from the place."

Crowds milled about in front of the "Jungles" as smoke poured up from the burning grass.

A fire warning was shouted through a public address system to the crowds jamming the amusement center.

In addition to the "Jungles," a doll concession, a wagon grocery and a ball tossing concession nearby were destroyed. The damage was estimated at $10,000.

The amusement park is in Macomb County, about 12 miles northeast of Detroit. Fire apparatus frob Detroit and Roseville responded to the alarms. The cause of the fire has not been determined.

LOSES JOB, KILLS HIMSELF

Pharmacist Ends Life in Forest Park.

Russell E. Hughes, a pharmacist, 4028 Cora avenue, was found dead of poison last night about 9:30 o'clock in his parked automobile on Union drive near McKinley drive in Forest Park. He left a note addressed to his wife in which he told of his intention to end his life because he had lost his job.

Park policemen found the body when their attention was attracted to the automobile because it was parked without lights. The doors were locked and it was necessary to break a window to open them. On the floor beside the front seat there was a broken vial which had contained poison.

Hughes was 39 years old. His wife and a son, Russell Jr., 10 years old, survive.

CIVIL WAR THREAT BY AUSTRIAN HEIMWEHR

SCHUSCHNIGG SEES GERMAN MINISTER

Chancellor Who Forced Fascist Prince Out Turns to Trade Problems; Monarchist Activity Is Revived.

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, May 16.—A pledge of loyalty and obedience to Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, ousted Vice-Chancellor, was sent to him tonight. Starhemberg is in Rome for an audience with Premier Mussolini.

The pledge, a telegram signed by Vice-Chancellor Eduard Baar-Baarenfeld, said: "Provincial leaders of the Austrian Heimatschutz, gathered in accordance with your command under my chairmanship, declare in their own name and in the name of all their comrades that they remain firm in their loyalty and unconditional obedience to you. We remain united and true in constant discipline. Heil Starhemberg!"

Baar-Baarenfeld became Vice-Chancellor early Thursday, when Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg ousted the Fascist Prince from that post.

A leader of the Prince's Heimwehr, or private army, in a private conversation with the Associated Press correspondent, used the words: "Civil war." Heimwehr circles at the same time disclosed that provincial units were massing guns in their barracks.

"This is only a friendly demonstration, or rehearsal," a Heimwehr leader said. "Some 200,000 organized Heimwehrmen are ready to be called to arms at a moment's notice. We hope, however, a general alarm will not be necessary, for Austria knows what civil war means."

Confused Situation.

The provincial leaders, in conferences here, displayed agitation over word passed among them that "Schuschnigg is trying to reach an agreement with Germany and wants to sell out Austria to the Nazis." A report that Mussolini had "dropped" the Prince circulated through the capital.

Newspapers display messages from Mussolini and Julius Goemboes, the Hungarian Premier, to Chancellor Schuschnigg, stressing friendship and good wishes.

Friends of the Chancellor call the Heimwehr declaration merely strong words in an attempt to keep up courage. They said the regular army is ready for any contingency.

A Heimwehr spokesman declared:

"Schuschnigg is Dictator by Starhemberg's grace. The new Cabinet can be overthrown whenever Starhemberg so decides. Starhemberg ordered the Minister of Interior and the Minister of Finance (both Heimwehr men) to remain in the Cabinet to prevent Schuschnigg and his wicked Democrat friends from declaring the Heimwehr illegal.

"That was the real purpose of Schuschnigg's miscalculated Cabinet putsch on Starhemberg. Starhemberg will have a chance to discuss the situation with Mussolini. The conferences here with Baar-Baarenfeld were aimed at preventing Schuschnigg from dissolving the Heimwehr."

Monarchists Stirring.

Meanwhile the monarchist move to hand the Austrian throne back to the Hapsburg family appeared to have been revived. Archduchess Adelaide, elder sister of Archduke Otto, pretender to the throne, arrived in the capital on a reported mission to sound out the attitude of the Little Eentente concerning actual presence of a member of the former royal family in Austria.

Yugoslavia's reaction was unfavorable, recalling previous statements that "return of the Hapsburgs means war."

JOINT FELLOWSHIP BAPTIST SESSIONS BEGIN TOMORROW

Second Held Since Northern and Southern Branches Split Over Slavery 91 Years Ago.

SPECULATION OVER SUBJECT OF UNION

The joint fellowship meeting of the Northern and Southern Baptists, the second held since the two denominations split over the slavery question 91 years ago, will begin tomorrow afternoon, when the Southern Baptist convention meeting closes, and will continue through Tuesday night. The Northern Baptist convention meeting, the first ever held in St. Louis, will start next Wednesday and continue through next Sunday evening.

The planned merger of the three groups of the Methodist Church, has aroused some speculation over whether the Baptists ought to follow suit, particularly as the Methodist Episcopal Church, North, approved the merger of the branches of its church, at its conference in Columbus, O.

Two Views on Merger.

Although there has been no official expression from the Southern Baptists, the consensus of leaders seems to be that it is up to the Northern Baptists to propose any such merger. The Southern denomination has 4,389,417 members and is the largest Protestant group in the country. There are 1,475,540 Northern Baptists.

"Missions," the Northern Baptist convention's monthly magazine, is of a liberal trend and in the May issue strongly suggests that the Methodist example might be followed: "Are the joint sessions only localized gestures in fellowship?" it asked "Do we come together merely to listen to stirring speeches and to accentuate our Baptist vanity by some joint theme like "The Historic Baptist Principle for Today," as announced for St. Louis?

"Do we then return home making little effort to support our words with deeds? Or have we started something that years hence will be looked back upon as the beginning of an organic fellowship, a more intimate relationship, a more united purpose in making our Baptist contribution to the Christian solution of the world issue of our times."

One Publication Against Union.

The Northern Baptist weekly magazine, The Watchman Examiner, is strongly conservative however, and has frowned on suggestion of merger.

There will probably be about 2100 Northern Baptist delegates, so with the 3600 Southern Baptist delegates, some of the 2100 delegates to the Woman's Missionary Union who have remained after their meeting last week, and visitors, 9000 or 10,000 persons are expected to meet in Convention Hall.

"The Historic Baptist Principle in the Affairs of State" will be discussed at 7:30 p. m. tomorrow. James G. McDonald, member of the staff of the New York Times who recently resigned as High Commissioner for the League of Nations for Refugees Coming From Germany will speak on "The Separation of Church and State as Illustrated in the Life and Work of Roger Williams."

Race relations, economic justice, and world peace will be discussed Tuesday morning, and missionary work Tuesday afternoon.

Dr. Toyohiko Kagawa, Japanese Christian leader and economist, and the Rev. Dr. George W. Truett of Dallas, Tex., president of the Baptist World Alliance, will speak Tuesday at 7:30 p. m.

Reports Next Week.

Highlights of the Northern Baptist meeting in the Opera House are expected to be: a report on exemption from military service Thursday afternoon; the reports of the Committee on Social Service, the Commission on Christian Social Action and members of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, which will be followed by an address by the Rev. Dr. Ivan Lee Holt of St. Louis, president of the Council, on Friday afternoon; the report of the Committee on Resolutions and consideration of the Christian Social Action report Saturday morning; and addresses on Communism and Fascism as opposed to Christianity Saturday afternoon.

The reports are expected to provoke conflict between liberal and conservative elements.

Receipts Show Gain.

In spite of the discontinuance of gifts to the Northern Baptist Church last year by John D. Rockefeller Jr., receipts for the fiscal year ending last Tuesday were $100,000 more than for the preceding year, it was announced yesterday. A total of $2,300,000 was received from 8000 churches in 34 states, and the increase was due to a large number of members enlarging their gifts rather than to big gifts from a few individuals.

Rockefeller announced last November that he would discontinue his annual gifts of from $250,000 to $1,000,000 to the Northern Baptist Church because of the missionary policy of the denomination. He said he preferred to support inter-denominational and non-denominational causes. For a time it was feared that, because of the loss of his financial support, drastic reductions would have to be made in the denomination's program.

Visiting Pastors Preach Today.

Fifty-three Southern pastors attending the Southern Baptist Convention will preach from the pulpits of Methodist, Presbyterian and Baptist churches here at 11 a. m. today. Twenty-three Sunday School workers attending the convention will speak at Baptist Sunday Schools at 9:30 a. m.

An evangelistic service, open to the public, will be held by the convention at Municipal Auditorium convention hall at 2:30 p. m. today. The Rev. Dr. M. E. Dodd of Shreveport, La., former president of the convention, will deliver the sermon.

The Rev. Dr. J. Frank Norris, red-baiting Baptist fundamentalist, will hold a rival meeting at the Coliseum at 3 p. m. at which he will deliver one of his favorite orations, "Sovietizing America Through Colleges, Churches and Consumers' Co-operatives."

Special Service Tonight.

Tonight all local Baptist churches will omit their services so that members may attend services in the Auditorium convention hall at 7:30 p. m., at which home and foreign missions will be discussed. It will be preceded by a mass meeting of the Southwest Baptist Training Union, a young people's organization, at 6 p. m.

At last night's meeting, the Rev. Dr. Charles E. Maddry of Richmond, Va., executive secretary of the Foreign Mission Board, reported the board had 400 missionaries in Africa, Argentina, Brazil, Chile, China, Hungary, Italy, Japan, Jugoslavia, Mexico, Palestin, Syria, Rumania and Spain.

Total receipts of the board last year were $1,294,613 an dexpenditures were $1,293,426. The $165,000,000 goal of the Woman's Missionary Union at the last Christmas offering was exceeded by $75,000. The budget for 1936 has been fixed at $723,662, of which $471,754 goes directly to the missionaries for salaries and expenses. A program to pay off the total debt of the board, $444,000, by 1938 was announced.

Next year's Southern Baptist meeting, it was decided, will be held at New Orleans, May 13-16.

WOMEN MANHANDLE JUDGE

Pull Him From Courtroom at Juarez, Mexico.

By the Associated Press.

JAUREZ, Mexico, May 16.—Federal Judge Joaquin Silva, 52 years old, was pulled from his courtroom today by more than 500 angry women after he refused to address them on the court's church policy. Two spokesmen for the Catholic churches later quieted the mob. The judge was not harmed.

The women forced their way into the courtroom after the Rev. Salvador B. Uranga, rector of the Juarez Guadalupe Mission, and two other priests attempted to interview Judge Silva. They sought a Federal injunction restraining application of a decree passed by the Chihuahua legislature limiting the number of officiating priests in the state to one. The judge said he would rule later. Mayor Jose Quevedo Jr., announced services will be barred in Juarez tomorrow under the law.

SENATORS' NEW TAX PLAN RUNS INTO OBJECTIONS

Predicts Early Action.

Harrison predicted to reporters that the bill would be out "about the middle of the week" and added that it might be rushed to the Senate floor before the close of the week. Whether the bill, if reported out of the committee, gets to the floor for debate next week will hinge on the deficiency-relief appropriation measure. This second major adjournment hurdle still is tied up in the Appropriations Committee, whose members are wrangling over whether funds should be appropriated specifically for the Public Works and Resettlement administrations. Senate leaders, however, hoping to push Congress to adjournment by June 6, plan to take up immediately whichever bill comes out first.

As the Chamber Sees It.

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States today interpreted the variety of tax plans pressed before the Senate Finance Committee as "an apparent change of front on the part of the Administration." It said this was "encouraging" even though "the objectionable surplus tax theory" had not been scrapped.

An "avalanche of opposition" to the House bill in the committee, the Chamber said, "foreshadows drastic revision, perhaps complete abandonment."

"The main significance of the current developmnets," it added, "is that they furnish grounds for hope that the revenue bill eventually evolved will have as its primary objective the raising of additional revenue instead of dubious reform of the nation's economic system."

CIVIL WAR THREAT MADE IN AUSTRIA BY HEIMWEHR LEADER

believe their chances of recalling Prince Otto measurably improved since Schuschnigg assumed sole control of the government. Their hopes are based on previous assertions by Starhemberg supporters they wished to name the then Vice-Chancellor Regent with "the possibility that soon thereafter he might be proclaimed king."

(Friends of the Prince had argued he would be preferable to Otto because the Hapsburg pretender favors a democratic kingdom which "is repulsive to the Fascist spirit of New Austria." The Little Eentene, moreover, regards Starhemberg more favorably than Otto because its statesmen believe the Heimwehr leader would not seek to expand Austria beyond her present borders.)

While Von Starhemberg attended an international football game in Rome, his private army leaders grumbled at home over the loss of power suffered by the former codictator and Schuschnigg's latest dictum that only Austrian militiamen will be allowed to bear arms as volunteers.

Schuschnigg, disposing of the military question, turned his official attention to economic problems related to foreign markets. He and Franz von Papen, German Minister, conferred. It was reported Austria asked Germany to suspend the 1000-mark ($400) visa to stimulate German tourist trade.

and the Court will deny the motion as to the defendants, C. A. Brown Jr., Sam G. Crosby, John P. Bridges, F. W. Switzer and C. W. Carlisle."

Tittsworth's Comment.

Court recessed while defense attorneys conferred with the Judge. Tittsworth, who had hastened to his wife, observed that he shouldn't have been on trial at all, described the charges against him as inspired "by pure politics—a desire to get my job and prevent my running for office."

Brown, who had remarked several times that he expected to be granted a directed verdict, walked to the window, gazed out of it somberly.

The feeling that constitutes part of the background of the floggings exists unabated in Tampa. This was indicated yesterday while court was in recess.

Two of the defendants, Brown and Bridges, were talking to the writer on that city's principal street, opposite the Courthouse, when Poulnot was observed half a block away on the other side of the street.

The two defendants barely commented on his presence but one of their friends rushed from a nearby group, pointed to Poulnot and cried, "There he goes—let's get him."

"I don't want anything to do with him," Brown replied, turning away.

He was greeted by political leaders, candidates and publishers. There will be a reception tomorrow for which a number of Republican Senators and Represenatives are to come from Washington. Hoover fished early today at Catoctin-Fumace, Ind., catching 10 trout, which he cooked for breakfast.

SUIT TO DISBAR EX-PROSECUTOR IN BARTON COUNTY

Roth H. Faubion Accused of Having Prison Commitment Altered From Ten to Three Years.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., May 16.—Disbarment suits against two Southwest Missouri lawyers were filed today in the Springfield Court of Appeals.

An information, charging Roth H. Faubion of Lamar with misconduct while Prosecuting Attorney of Barton County was filed by the Bar Committee of the Twenty-sixth Judicial District.

Disbarment of H. A. Gardner of Monett on grounds of misconduct and unprofessional practices was asked by the Advisory Committee of the State Bar Committees which ended tonight a two-day closed session, during which it examined witnesses in other cases which had been referred to it.

Faubion, as Prosecuting Attorney in 1933, it was alleged, instructed Circuit Clerk Lee Van Pelt to issue a commitment to the penitentiary showing that Kenneth Summers, who had received a 10-year sentence when he pleaded guilty of first-degree robbery, had been sentenced only to a three-year term for second-degree robbery.

It was charged that Faubion knew that the commitment was false and that he knew Summers never had been charged with second-degree robbery.

With Husband in Jail.

Faubion's conduct with the wife of Ernest Schenck, while Schenck was held in jail on a charge of driving while intoxicated, followed an automobile accident Dec. 23, 1933, was the basis of another charge against him.

The conduct of Faubion and Mrs. Schenck, the Bar Committee alleged, was "of such a nature that he could not press the prosecution of charges filed against Schenck."

The case was continued from term to term until after the expiration of Faubion's term of office. Later, when the case was tried, Faubion appeared as a witness for Schenck, it was asserted, contradicting testimony of State witnesses.

Charges Against Gardner.

Specific charges against Gardner were that he obstructed the processes of the Probate Court and solicited and paid for damage suit cases through a runner.

The principal charges grew out of the 52-year-old damage suit lawyer's conduct in the case of Miss Alyce Schutt, 20 years old, an orphan, who suffered a broken neck Jan. 27, 1935, when an automobile in which she was riding collided with a truck.

The owner of the truck carried liability insurance and Gardner's runner, who testified before the Bar Committee, obtained her signature to a contract employing Gardner to represent her.

The runner did not know, however, that Miss Schutt was a minor and that Fred W. Carden, Springfield attorney, had been appointed guardian when her parents died, leaving her a share in a small farm near Springfield. Immediately after she was injured, Probate Judge John Fairman authorized Carden to protect the girl's rights in any claim she might have against the owner of the truck.

Gardner's Alleged Suggestion.

Exhibiting the contract with Miss Schutt, Gardner called on Carden and Judge Fairman, contending that he legally represented her. Judge Fairman told him Carden needed no assistance and that the contract with the minor was worthless.

Carden testified before the Bar Committee that Gardner later called on him at his office, expressed the opinion that a $5000 fee should be obtained in the case and suggested that they handle it together. Carden said he refused and that Gardner then said he could take the girl from the State until March, 1936, when she would be 21 years old and no longer require a guardian.

As her guardian, Carden filed a damage suit ir behalf of Miss Schutt but a week before it was to be tried last October, she disappeared. Gardner asserted he knew nothing of her whereabouts but Miss Schutt's brother, some days later, told Carden she was living near Fort Smith, Ark. Physicians who had treated her were deeply concerned since a plaster cast still was being used in treatment of her injury.

50 Pct. Fee Provided.

When Miss Schutt reached the age of 21, Gardner filed a damage suit for her at Joplin and had the suit filed by Carden dismissed. The second suit providing for a 50 per cent fee for Gardner, is pending.

Gardner, examined by the Bar Committee, denied that he knew where Miss Schutt had been taken. Letters in his files, which were subpenaed, showed that he had been i ncorrespondence with her however. He was denounced by Boyle G. Clark chairman of the Advisory Committee.

"Mr. Gardner you have lied to this committee" Clark said after the letters had been read. "It is provoking to have you sit here for an hour and go on misrepresenting the facts and then produce letters here which convict you of false representations."

Gardner's files disclosed that he had corresponded with Miss Schutt for several months and had had her return to Springfield secretly in order to prepare the damage suit field after her twenty first birthday.

Suspended 3 Years Ago.

The examination of Gardner was conducted at a closed hearing April 14 and a transcript was filed with the disbarment suit today. The information also charged that a runner for Gardner solicited the damage suit of Mrs. Alta Sloan, whose husband, George Sloan, had been killed in an automobile accident.

Gardner told the Bar Committee that he had been suspended from practice for six months for attempting to corrupt a jury at Columbia three years ago.

Members of the Advisory Committee who examined Gardner, besides Clark, were Grover S. Sibley, J. D. James, John C. Grover and James A. Parks.

ITALIAN CONVICT-SOLDIERS CUT PRISON TERMS BY VALOR

Those Once Cited Serve Half of Sentence; Two Decorations Wipe Out Punishment.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, May 16.—Italian convicts who prove themselves courageous in battle are assured of shortened prison terms by a new Cabinet regulation. The ruling considers that all men decorated or promoted for valor in the army have won their right to "early rehabilitation" to citizenship. This means reduction by half of the prison term of men so honored.

Those cited twice for bravery may be pardoned at once on the theory that they have shown themselves "completely rehabilitated."

In addition, every soldier in Africa with an unfinished prison sentence behind him now wins, by doing his duty there, a reduction of his term amounting to three months for every year or fraction of a year he serves in the army. Also, convicts who win civil medals for valor are ruled eligible for the same clemency as war heroes.

RIVERFRONT MEMORIAL OPPONENTS PLAN SUITS

Paul O. Peters Says New Actions Will Name Bond Purchasers and City.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
201-205 Kellogg Building.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Following official assurance that the city had provided its share of the $9,000,000 allocation for the proposed Memorial to Thomas Jefferson and the Western Pioneers on the St. Louis riverfront through the sale of $2,250,000 of riverfront bonds, National Park service officials said that preliminary steps were being pushed preparatory to clearing the site.

The park service has opened headquarters in St. Louis in charge of John L. Nagle and a survey is to be started at once to determine the price of the land and whether owners are willing to sell or whether condemnation proceedings will be necessary. Park service engineers will also make a study of the layout of the land preparatory to clearing it.

At the same time Paul O. Peters, executive director of a citizens' nonpartisan committee opposed to the memorial, announced here that a series of suits would be instituted in Federal Court in St. Louis on Monday, naming the purchasers of the bonds as defendants along with the city. Members of the committee have already challenged the validity of the bonds in litigation in several courts.

Statement by Peters.

Peters' statement contained a "warning" to purchasers of the bonds as follows:

"We invite the attention of all possible purchasers of the Memorial bonds to a study of city ordinance No. 40,952. Under the terms and conditions o fthis ordinance the city of St. Louis, having been previously authorized by the State of Missouri to incur an indebtedness up to $8,000,000 for a public and improved park or plaza, was authorized to issue its bonds for a project of specific benefit to the city of St. Louis That this was the sole intent of the ordinance was supported by the opinion of the Supreme Court of Missouri, rendered in the Vrooman case.

"Furthermore, the legislative power being vested solely in Congress, and the Congress never having appropriated any money toward the acquisition of so-called historic sites, the allocation and use of any fund set aside by executive order for acquiring the site will be contested to the highest court.

Historic Sites Act Quoted.

"Under the emergency relief appropriation act of 1935 the President was definitely limited in the allocation of funds to certain classes of work relief projects, and it can in no way be shown that the purchase of 37 blocks of improved property for the avowed purpose of preserving two historic sites, comprising less than one-fourth block, can be said properly to come under any of the classifications mentioned in the act.

"The historic sites act, under which the land would be condemned, stated: 'There is authorized to be appropriated for carrying out the purpose of this chapter such sums as Congress may from time to time appropriate.' Up to this date Congress has not appropriated any funds for the project in St. Louis and we feel assured this Congress is in no mood to do so."

Peters, who has been in Washington lobbying against the project for many months, said he was also making an effort to have a rider attached to the second deficiency bill, containing the relief appropriation for the coming year, providing that no funds should go to the Jefferson Memorial, the Passamaquoddy power project in Maine or the Florida ship canal. Congress has refused specific appropriations for the latter two projects, both started with funds allocated by executive order.

ARCHBISHOP DEFIES VATICAN OUSTER ORDER

Prelate at Rouen, France, Refuses to Give Up Residence to His Successor.

By the Associated Press.

ROUEN, France, May 16.—Archbishop Andre Debois de la Villerabel, 72 years old, has defied a Vatican order deposing him as apostolic administrator of the Rouen diocese and naming Mgr. Jean Chollet, archbishop of Cambrai, in his place.

Secrecy surrounds the case but residents of this historic city have pieced together these facts:

The Archbishop some time ago discovered his vicar-general, Mgr. Bertin, was involved in financial irregularities as administrator of diocesan convents. Mgr. Bertin, 63, had risen to high position as a result of instruction in church matters supervised by the Archbishop personally. The facts and figures laid before him, the Archbishop allowed Government agents to audit Mgr. Bertin's books, thus putting the matter into the civil courts.

News of the investigation reached the Vatican, where the order deposing the archbishop was issued.

Mgr. Chollet appeared in Rouen May 2 to assume his new duties, met with his subordinate officials and prepared to move into the episcopal palace, but Archbishop Villerabel refused to move—an action which under French law is technically legal because the lease of the residence is in his name. He dispatched a personal appeal to Pope Pius and maintained his position pending a reply.

Meantime, at least one Government official is reported to have interceded with the Holy See on Archbishop Villerabel's behalf.

The Foreign Office at Paris said it was unable to confirm a report that Francois Charles-Roux, French Ambassador to Vatican City, had discussed the Archbishop's difficulties in an audience with the Pope May 9. The sole official pronouncement of the case was a communique published in the religious bulletin, which said:

"Mgr. Jean Chollet, archbishop of Cambria, having been named by a decree of the sacred congregation of the consistory apostolic administrator of the Rouen diocese, a vacant See, went to take possession on May 2.

"He met the Vicars-General and confirmed them in their respective powers. He bespoke the prayers of the clergy and the faithful, and assured them of his solicitude and his devotion through the duration of his temporary charge."

Government officials, including the magistrate conducting the civil investigation of Mgr. Bertin's affairs, declined to disclose the status of the case. It was reported the inquiry was about completed.

YEAR SUSPENSION FOR HULLVERSON IS RECOMMENDED

HOLDS ALL GUILTY OF TWO OF 9 COUNTS

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 16.—Suspension from law practice for one year of Everett Hullverson, St. Louis lawyer who has specialized in silicosis damage suits, was recommended to the Supreme Court of Missouri today by Special Commissioner John S. Farrington.

The commissioner recommended the same penalty for Eugene J. Schmick and Robert L. Pribble, office associates of Hullverson. He held that the three were guilty under two of the nine counts of the charges brought by the Bar Committee of the Eighth (St. Louis) Judicial Circuit, a disciplinary group appointed by the Supreme Court, and not guilty under the other seven counts. Dismissal of the seven counts was recommended.

The commissioner recommended dismissal of the disbarment proceeding against Francis O. Curran, fourth defendant in the case, on the ground that the evidence did not substantiate the charges against him.

Hullverson, one of the most active damage suit lawyers in St. Louis, who became the outstanding counsel for persons filing silicosis suits because of his study of this occupational disease, denied the allegations of unprofessional and unethical conduct at the hearings conducted in St. Louis by Farrington.

Subsequent Procedure.

In reaching a final decision in the case the Supreme Court will consider the commissioner's report and recommendations. The case will be docketed for argument before the court, under the usual procedure, in the same manner as appeals from the lower courts in civil cases. The commissioner's findings can be upset only if counsel for the defendant lawyers succeed in convincing the Supreme Court that his report is not justified by the evidence. They would have to convince the court a fair hearing was not had if the case were to be remanded for rehearing, a very rare occurrence.

Counts which the commissioner held were sustained as to Hullverson, Schmick and Pribble duplicated each other in terms to a considerable extent. They charged conspiracy to engage in the unprofessional and unethical practice of law; that the defendants became common barrators by inciting and soliciting claims and suits, personally and through paid agents and runners; that they agreed to pay costs of litigation; that they advanced money to persons who employed them, and that they employed and used agents and runners to solicit damage suit clients for them.

The commissioner said testimony "unmistakably points to the conclusion that there was solicitation and incitement to bring lawsuits."

Seven Counts Not Sustained.

Seven counts not sustained charged that the defendants accepted employment to prosecute claims which they had reason to believe were fraudulent; that they divided fees with persons who were not licensed as lawyers; that they directed clients to feign illness or other disability; that they undertook to file claims and act as attorneys for persons who had not employed them; that they falsely represented two associates, not lawyers, as licensed attorneys, and that in two instances they induced clients to give false testimony in damage suits.

As to Curran, the commissioner said he was merely a salaried employe of Hullverson's office, taking statements of clients and witnesses, preparing some pleadings and briefs, and doing other clerical work as directed.

With his report, the commissioner, a former Judge of the Springfield Court of Appeals, filed the 1,700-page transcript of the evidence at the hearing, held in St. Louis last November and December, and the 239 exhibits of the Bar Committee and 74 exhibits of the defendants.

"Irrelevant Evidence."

Commissioner Farrington said the evidence offered on the nine counts covered a wide range and that much of it was "irrelevant and incompetent."

"Particularly is this true," he said, "concerning much testimony that was introduced describing the dust conditions that prevailed in the sand, lead and cement plants in which clients of respondents had worked, and that, owing to the fight which had been made on them by these attorneys for their clients while representing them in damage suits, caused that bad dust condition to be remedied.

"However much they may have remedied a serious condition that prevailed, such result is not a legal answer to the charges filed against them in this proceeding, and I hold that such evidence is irrelevant and incompetent in this proceeding, and so recommend to the Court."

He said the evidence tended to show that the respondents, Hullverson, Schmick and Pribble, "did employ solicitators and runners, who in turn did incite those who might have claims or law suits to place their cases with the respondents." He pointed out that Hullverson had admitted that he had advanced money, which Hullverson said was expense money, to persons who knew of prospective clients, and who would bring them into his office to sign contracts.

Money Paid Out.

"I find that it is unethical and unprofessional to advance expense money to someone to go out and find a person and suggest to them that they should bring a law suit, and that they should employ a certain attorney for that purpose," the commissioner said. "Many of those who were solicited testified that they had no thought of bringing any law suit until it was suggested to them by people who were being paid money by Hullverson, as he says—expense money—or money paid by him to them to bring people in for medical examination and to his office."

The commissioner said there was an overwhelming amount of evidence that this practice "was indulged in on a large scale."

Counsel for the Bar Committee declared in the hearings that Hullverson's office records were not complete. In this connection the commissioner said "there was no book which respondents were able to produce other than an admittedly made-up ledger." Hullverson testified this ledger was made up by his sister, not a regular employe in his office, from cards and data furnished by Hullverson. Some of the work was done, the commissioner said, after Hullverson knew the Bar Committee was conducting an investigation.

"Made-up" Ledger.

"It was shown in evidence that the business carried on in that office ran in 1934 close to $200,000," the commissioner said, "and it is unthinkable that a complete set of books showing all of the money transactions, salaries, expenses, advances and loans would not be accurately kept, and if accurately kept would not have been preserved. It is admitted that from the ledger which was produced that there could not be identified to whom so-called expenses were paid or loans made. And this, to repeat, was from no original record, but an admittedly made-up ledger after trouble had started."

Commissioner Farrington pointed out that Hullverson had not produced as witnesses his bookkeeper, or his sister, or any one else in his employ who was familiar with his books and records.

"The evidence in this case does not show occasional or sporadic instances of solicitation, he said, "but rather presents a picture of a mass move to get contracts signed up."

"Wholesale Soliciting."

He said it was against common experience to argue that clients and friends, "impoverished as many of them were, would be so loyal on account of suits pending or won for them," that they would put in their time bringing to Hullverson's office as many as 10 to 100 contracts.

The commissioner said the courts had gone far in holding that an attorney may advance living expenses and medical aid to clients who are in indigent circumstances, "but no case is cited, and I have been unable to find one, which justifies a lawyer in advancing expenses to runners, clients and friends for the purpose of going out to find a client and bring him in."

"The evidence here presents a case not where an attorney goes out occasionally and solicits a case, which, while unethical and unprofessional, would probably call for no more than a reprimand," Commissioner Farrington said. "But here we have paid laymen soliciting in a wholesale way. We find them going to people who had no thought of bringing a suit and advising that it be done, and that a certain lawyer will take his case on a contingent basis, and that to try to get something by suit will cost him nothing, not even expenses for a visit to the lawyer's office."

ALDERMEN VOTE $75,000 EMERGENCY FUND FOR RELIEF

Workers' Union on relief matters, offered a resolution calling on the Mayor to ask business men to join with him in a campaign to collect delinquent taxes so that more money would be available for relief appropriations. Couplin estimated the total of delinquent taxes at about $10,000,000. His resolution was referred to the Resolutions Committee.

A bill introduced yesterday by Couplin would require the relief administration to certify to the Board of Public Service the names of those on the relief rolls who are capable of working. Couplin has spoken of a plan to put these to work on city jobs, but there has been no discussion of how to finance such a works program.

Three Workers' Union Members Arrested as Disturbers.

Joseph Hoffman, secretary of the city committee of the American Workers' Union and a leader of its recent protest demonstrations, was arrested with two other members of the organization yesterday at the application office of St. Louis Relief Administration, Twenty-first and Olive streets, and booked to appear tomorrow in Police Court No. 2 on charges of disturbing the peace.

Those arrested with Hoffman are Ted Dorris, and Hadley Vineyard. Police said the arrests were made at the request of Miss Charlotte Ring, supervisor of the office, because the men were making speeches there.

Hoffman said he had gone to the relief station with 25 members of the American Workers' Union whose applications were being considered for restoration to the relief rolls and who had been told to "come back next Friday." The purpose of their visit, he said, was to demand that relief be afforded immediately to those who were in need.

ALLEGED LEADER LINKED WITH VICE RING BY WITNESS

Man, Who Booked Women Into Houses Says Luciano Was to "Take Care" of Any Trouble.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 16.—The name of Charles (Lucky) Luciano for the first time was linked by testimony today with organized vice in New York City.

Luciano, indicted as the ringleader of the vice business, is one of 10 defendants being tried on indictments for compulsory prostitution.

Special Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey was able to obtain from an underworld witness the admission that Luciano was directly connected with the traffic in women and collected a share in their earnings.

The witness was David Marcus, who admitted that for a commission he booked women into the various houses the State charges were controlled by the Luciano syndicate.

On one occasion, Marcus testified, he had been so bold as to inquire who "would take care of me if anything happened." He inquired this, he said, of one of the higher-ups.

He Means "Charlie."

"Oh, we'll take care of you," Marcus testified he was answered.

"Go on," demanded Prosecutor Dewey, "Who do you mean?"

"Charlie," the witness replied, his voice scarcely audible. "Charlie" is the name by which Luciano was known among his underworld associates.

He smiled when Marcus mentioned his name.

Marcus said that in August, 1933, he was warned to leave New York or pay $10,000 to keep his job.

He said he stayed in New York and tried to explain to his associates that he was unable to pay $10,000. He phoned his lawyer to make out his will.

Six Shots Fired at Car.

"A week later a guy known as Six Bits phoned me to meet him," Marcus continued. "I left the house and just got in the car when a machine passed and six shots were fired. I dropped to the floor and wasn't hit."

A few days later Marcus and his wife left for California. He returned to New York in March, 1935, and testified that he regained his booking job by paying a commission for it.

Only 15 of the 90 women and 30 men seized in a series of raids on Feb. 1 have testified thus far.

Most of them, claiming promised immunity for their testimony, have told freely of the inner workings of the traffic in women and of how they were forced to pay tribute to the combination.

Paid Alimony with the Money.

Another witness was Sam (Spike) Green, an underling, who acknowledged that his only source of income since 1932 had been from women.

"Did you also pay your wife's alimony with money obtained from this source?" a lawyer asked.

"That's right," said Green.

Green identified James Frederico and Abraham Wahrman, two of the defendants, as members of the combination.

Green said he was born on the waterfront 30 years ago and did odd jobs at anything to which he could turn his hand, until 1932, when he met one "Charley Spinach" who, he said, operates a restaurant and at times booked women into houses. He used to drive "Charley Spinach" around on his route while he was collecting his 10 per cent commissions.

Green lamented the fact that last February, because of a few slight disputes in the organization, he found himself operating a bonafide cigar stand in a hotel. This was all right, he testified, but just two days after he started his change of ways the police arrested him and he has been in jail ever since as a material witness in the vice case.

Luciano a Quiet Observer.

Throughout the week Luciano has sat quietly watching the prosecutor who pictured him as living luxuriously on the money that came from disorderly houses to his lofty apartment.

His lawyer contends that Luciano had no connection with organized vice.

The 39-year-old Luciano, who dropped out of sight after the murder of Arthur (Dutch Schultz) Flegenheimer in Newark, N. J., last fall, was seized in Hot Springs, Ark., on April 1 and extradited three weeks later.

JURY DISAGREES IN DOCTOR'S TRIAL AT MARSHFIELD, MO.

Vote Was 7 to 5 for Conviction of Man Accused of Plotting Killing for Insurance.

By the Associated Press.

MARSHFIELD, Mo., May 16.—A mistrial was declared tonight in the case of Dr. William F. Schlicht, Niangua physician and former State Food and Drug Inspector, charged with plotting the murder of Robert Robertson, Webster County farmer. After five and one-half hours of deliberation the vote stood at 7 to 5 for conviction. The jury was discharged shortly after 8 p. m.

Judge C. H. Skinker said the case probably would be retried at the September term of court.

State's attorneys rested their case after sending a parade of rebuttal witnesses to the stand in an attempt to prove that Dr. Schlicht was in his office at Niangua May 11, 1935, the date on which Mrs. Robinson, wife of the murdered man, is alleged to have visited him there to discuss plans for the crime.

Dr. Schlicht's attorneys introduced witnesses yesterday who swore the physician was in Kansas City May 11.

Homer G. Chaffin, Webster County Prosecutor, told the jury the crime was "a murder for profit, a murder for insurance money."

Lloyd Robinson, 19-year-old son of the murdered man, and his mother, both of whom testified against Dr. Schlicht, are serving life terms for their parts in the crime.

SEEKS CUSTODY OF CHILDREN FROM EX-WIFE, NOW IN JAIL

Dr. W. F. Dutton Files Plea in Springfield, Mo., Against Mrs. Norwell Grimm.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., May 16.—Dr. W. Forrest Dutton, 60 years old, Amarillo, Tex., physician, appeared in Circuit Court here today in an effort to get custody of his three children, 12 to 15 years old, from his former wife, now Mrs. Helen Grimm. Mrs. Grimm is now serving a year in a Wisconsin jail on a morals charge, and her present husband, Norwell Grimm, is serving a term for third degree manslaughter in connection with the death of a man with whom she was said to be involved.

Opposing Dr. Dutton's plea, Mrs. Grimm charges her former husband is "addicted to the excessive use of alcoholic stimulants." The children now are in the care of her mother, Mrs. Anna Tucker. Dr. Dutton in court today admitted he formerly got drunk but produced witnesses to show he has not been intoxicated in the the last three years, or since his wife left him. He asserted a part of his drinking formerly was caused by his wife's conduct.

Dr. Dutton charges that his wife used for herself money he had sent for the support of his children; and that the children now are undernourished and in poor physical condition.

EIGHT PROBATION OFFICERS FIRED IN JUVENILE COURT

At Same Time Naming of Eight New Aids in Domestic Relations Division Is Announced.

Eight new deputy probation officers were appointed in the Court of Domestic Relations and eight of the present staff of Juvenile Court were given notice of dismissal yesterday by Circuit Judge Eugene J. Sartorius, in charge of Juvenile Court.

Last February, when candidates for places on the probation staff were examined by a special committee, Judge Sartorius stated no change was contemplated and that the test was for the purpose of making up an eligible list to fill possible vacancies. Civic, religious and welfare groups indorsed a statement urging that no dismissals be made for political reasons. The special committee examining the candidates was appointed by Judge Sartorius and was composed of Mrs. Lawrence McDaniel, George J. Dohle and K. G. Hermann.

The shakeup did not affect the chief probation officers, Jesse B. Smith in Juvenile Court and Gilbert Weiss, Court of Domestic Relations. The new members of Weiss' staff were named by the Court as follows: Felix A. Chopin, Edna Faulkner, Julius Feist, Ann Hornburg, Helen C. Moynihan, Michael A. Murray, Agnes Jane Tucker and Mrs. Mamie Weisman.

Those leaving the staff of Juvenile Court on June 1 are: Mrs. Emily F. Runge, widow, who has been a deputy probation officer 30 years; Mrs. Katherine Anderson, Miss Jennie Mincke, Herbert F. Roessel, Miss Mildred L. Calhoun, sister of former Circuit Judge John W. Calhoun; Miss Sadie Tucker, Mrs. Marie Ammon, former Republican Committeewoman in the Twelfth Ward, and Beauford Miller.

Four veteran probation officers were ordered transferred from the Court of Domestic Relations to Juvenile Court duty, where all have had prior experience. They were: Mrs. Florence Carr, Mrs. Theresa Davis, Miss Laura Sherman and Miss Anna Koenecke.

The officers dismissed were paid $2000 a year each, except Miller, whose salary was $1800. It was understood that the new members of the staff would begin at $1500 each a year, and that the saving would be used to employ needed additional help.

Mrs. J. Hardin Smith Jr., president of the St. Louis League of Women Voters, said last night she had invited representatives of several civic and other organizations interested in the Juvenile Court situation to attend a meeting at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning at the Kings-Way Hotel to discuss the new appointments.

SERGT. PHILLIPS TURNS IN HIS POLICE BADGE

Pistol Expert Retires Under 70-Year Regulation but Insists He Is Only 68.

Still contending he was but 68 years old, with two remaining years of eligibility as a member of the Police Department, Serg. Nary H. Phillips, pistol instructor, walked into the office of Chief of Police McCarthy yesterday, glanced about at the walls adorned with plaques and medals won by those under his tutelage, and turned in his badge.

Sergt. Phillips resigned from the department only because he was required to do so by the Pension Board which was of the opinion he had reached the age of 70, when retirement on half-pay—$108 a month for a sergeant—becomes mandatory. When he joined the force in 1898, he contended he was but 30 years old.

In an effort to convince the board that he was not yet of retirement age he referred it to t he family Bible in possession of relatives in Chicago. The Bible contained the names and dates of birth of his brothers and sisters, but made no mention whatever of him. So the board remained unconvinced.

Distinguishing himself as a pistol marksman, Phillips was sent to headquarters as an instructor in 1928 and was made a sergeant the following year. In a small room above the police gymnasium he conducted what became known as the "pistol hospital," where he, the "gun doctor," made repairs for members of the department and loaded cartridges for service and target use, until recent months when factory loaded cartridges were purchased.

Sergeant Phillips likewise presided over the target range where recruits and veterans alike were taught the fine points of pistol firing and championship squads went through a rigorous course of training justified by their showing in national matches in recent years.

In 1930, Sergeant Phillips obtained permission from the Board of Police Commissioners to sell his patent rights to a port hole for bullet proof glass which facilitated firing from an automobile.

FURNITURE MEN DENY CHARGE OF MONOPOLY IN CITY

Retailers' Association Members File Answers to Allegations of Federal Trade Commission.

NO PRICE-FIXING RULE, THEY SAY

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
201-205 Kellogg Bldg.

WASHINGTON, May 16. — Members of the St. Louis Retail Furniture Dealers' Association, charged by the Federal Trade Commission with an unlawful conspiracy to monopolize the sale and distribution of furniture in the St. Louis and East St. Louis trade area, have filed answers with the commission denying the charges.

Virtually every answer coming from more than 30 furniture firms contained a blanket denial of the charges together with a request that hearings on the charges be held in St. Louis rather than in Washington.

The commission in making public the charges some weeks ago set May 15 as the final date on which the association and its member firms might show cause why an order to cease and desist from the practices alleged should not be issued. The commission charged that the association was a combination designed to suppress unreasonable competition and to deprive the public of advantages in prices and services which it would otherwise receive.

Charges Against Association.

It was alleged in the Trade Commission's complaint that the association fixed prices at which furniture, electric refrigerators and radios are retailed in St. Louis; discrimination against small business enterprises; "freezing" competing companies out of business and injuring the public, manufacturers, dealers, distributers and others who do not conform to the program of the association.

Martin Lammert III of the Lammert Furniture Co., a member of the Executive Committee of the association, in making a blanket denial of the charges also denied specifically that there was any practice or requirement enforced by the association fixing retail prices of merchandise.

The answer filed by Joseph Hellrung of the Hellrung and Grimm firm, a former vice-president and treasurer of the association, admitted that "occasionally in bulletins issued by the association to its members there were set forth the names of certain retail dealers who did not observe practices advocated by the association," but avers that such information did not purport to be, and was not intended as, a blacklisting or attempt to boycott such retailers.

Hellrung also admitted "that the association sought and obtained promises of co-operation by manufacturers and wholesalers to the end that ultimate consumers of merchandise should be refused the advantage of buying wholesale and should be required to purchase merchandise only through retail stores."

One Firm Denies Participation.

Peter N. Igoe, responding for the Igoe House Furnishing Co., stated that his firm "did not actively participate in the aforesaid activities of the association or give an affirmative consent or indorsement or approval thereto." This approval was implied, however, in membership in the association, Igoe added.

Many of the answers filed by smaller firms were identical.

Among the firms filing answers to the commission's charges besides those already mentioned were the following:

Manne Brothers Furniture Co., Union May Stern Co., Goldman Bros., Inc., M. Stein Furniture Co., American Furniture Co., Rhodes Burford House Furnishing Co., Gregson Furniture Co., Dau the House Furnisher, Inc., Ideal Furniture Co., Hess Dickman Furniture Co., Mosley Thuner Furniture Co., John Alt Furniture Co., Arnold Furniture Co., Buettner Furniture Co., J. THREE HELD FOR INQUEST INTO KILLING IN BRAWL Three men were held pending an inquest tomorrow in the death yesterday of Michael Orlowsky, 62-year-old laborer, who suffered a fractured skull in a brawl last Sunday at his home, 7215 Bulwer avenue.

A son, Henry Orlowsky, told police his father was struck with a hatchet by Joseph Murphy, 1857A North Market street, one of the men held. Mrs. Orlowsky related that she and her husband met the men, with whom they were acquainted, on North Broadway and the group walked to the Orlowsky home. All had been drinking, she said, and the men started to beat her husband. The son went to his father's assistance with an automobile crank, but it was taken away from him and he was beaten. Mrs. Orlowsky said one man hit her with a mop handle, breaking her wrist, and dislocated her elbow by twisting her arm.

Besides Murphy those held were his half-brother, Frank Burkett, 7210 North Broadway, and Clinton Staggs, 1917 Sullivan avenue. Staggs and Murphy told police that Michael Orlowsky called them names in a North Broadway tavern, and they took him home and tried to quiet him. Henry Orlowsky mistook their intentions, they explained, and started the fight. Burkett said his efforts were directed toward separating Murphy and Henry Orlowsky.

SUPREME COURT CONSIDERS PWA HYDRO-ELECTRIC CASE

Decision Thought to Have Been Reached; Other Rulings Possible Monday.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—A decision on whether to pass on the constitutionality of PWA loans for publicly-owned hydro-electric projects was thought by observers tonight to have been reached this afternoon by the Supreme Court.

The court's decision will not be announced before Monday at least when they hand down opinions. The rulings at that time may include decisions on constitutionality of the Guffey Coal Act and the Municipal Bankruptcy Act, two New Deal measures.

Twenty-six cases will be decided on the next three Mondays and the Court will adjourn for the summer on June 1. The Court has been in recess the last two weeks devoting its entire time to preparing opinions.

TWO MORE SEIZED IN PRISON BREAK AT M'ALESTER, OK.

Pal of Ringleader One of Those Captured but Claude Beavers Fires at Officers and Escapes.

By the Associated Press.

McALESTER, Ok., May 16.—Two more fugitives in Oklahoma's prison break were captured today but Claude Beavers, ringleader, escaped after an encounter with officers in the Kiamichi Mountains. Two other convicts are still at large.

Claude Fugate, Beavers' companion, surrendered after being surrounded in underbrush near Antlers. But Beavers, rushing out of the thicket, fired at officers and escaped. Later he appeared at a farm house, displayed a rifle, seized food and continued on his way. An Indian farmer seized as a hostage by Fugate and Beaver was released.

Earlier in the day Jess Cunningham, convict who was wounded in the prison break, was trapped in a farm house near Antlers.

Beside Beavers, Julius Bohannon and A. C. McArthur are still at large of the gang of 24 which tried to escape from the penitentiary Wednesday, killing C. D. Powell, prison employe, and wounding W. W. Gossett, a guard.

Late last night officers captured Claud Pugh near Savana. Bill Anderson and Archie Herring were taken earlier.

Cunningham, a life-termer, was the first of the captured fugitives to make a show of resistance. When officers entered the farm home where Cunningham took refuge the wounded fugitive reached for a rifle.

As officers covered him he dropped the weapon. Cunningham, shot in the hip, was feverish and a doctor who examined him, said infection had set in.

The captured convict said he spent all day yesterday hiding in Beaver Creek, southeast of here. Early today he forced his way into the farm home, which was unoccupied.

Officers think one of Cunningham's companions was Bohannon, who was thought to have escaped into the mountains of northern McCurtain County, his home.

Gov. E. W. Marland denounced the prison guards today for throwing down their guns to the convicts at the time of the break.

"In my opinion," said the Governor, after hearing at Tulsa the Board of Affairs' report on the outbreak, "any man working as a guard in the penitentiary should as a first qualification be willing to sacrifice his life to preserve the discipline of the prison."

The board relieved two guards, Harry Dotts and George Cheek, who threw down their guns when the convicts threatened to kill Tuck Cope, another guard.

The board recommended no change in the wardenship.

COMMITTEE VOTES PRESIDENT A HAND IN FLOOD PROJECTS

Senate Group Writes in Authority for Him to Select Jobs to Be Started First.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Over Republican opposition, the Senate Commerce Committee today wrote into the $384,000,000 omnibus flood control bill authority for President Roosevelt to decide which projects should be started first. The committee limited to $50,000,000 the amount that could be spent during the next fiscal year maximum recommended by the administration.

Republican members of the committee announced they would carry to the floor of the Senate, when the bill comes up Tuesday, the fight against giving the President power to select the projects. They contended this took the authority from the War Department engineers where it belonged.

The President recently expressed the view that flood control work for the present should be confined to those Eastern areas recently stricken by floods and to habitually endangered sections in the West. Authority for more than 200 projects in 40 states is given in the bill.

UNION ELECTRIC WANTS VALUATION INQUIRY DROPPED

Asks State Public Service Commission to Discard Work in Progress Eight Years.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 16.—Dismissal of the rate and valuation investigation of the Union Electric Light & Power Co. of St. Louis, to determine the fair value of the company's Missouri property for rate-making purposes, which has been in progress in various phases for nearly eight years, was asked for by the company in a motion filed today with thet Missouri Public Service Commission.

The company asserted that the rate reduction purposes for which the proceeding was instituted by the City of St. Louis could not be effected consistently with the facts which have been developed so far and that, in the public interest, the proceedings should be terminated. It suggested that it was presenting the dismissal motion "to the end that the considerable amount of trouble and expense which further proceedings in this matter would entail, may be avoided."

If sustained by the commission, the motion in effect discard the results of nearly eight years of investigation by the Public Service Commission since the case was instituted in 1928, and would defer, until some future time, a revaluation of the Missouri properties of the company for rate-making purposes.

Last Valuation in 1915.

Since the last valuation of the company by the commission, as of Dec. 31, 1915, the estimated value of the property, according to appraisals made by commission engineers, has increased nearly five times.

The motion to dismiss was filed at a time when the commission engineers and accountants had completed an appraisal of the property and audit of the books. The long delayed hearings on the valuation are scheduled to begin here on June 15.

Appraisals of Value.

The motion pointed out that appraisals made by the commission's staff as of April 30, 1935, adjusted by net plant additions to Dec. 31, 1935, showed the following estimates as to the company's Missouri property:

Electric property: Investment cost, $104,336,955; reproduction cost, less depreciation, $114,686,890.

Steam heating property: Investment cost, $3,555,408; reproduction cost, less depreciation, $3,687,965.

Total property: Investment cost, $107,892,363; reproduction cost, less depreciation, $118,374,855.

Under court decisions, the commission considers both investment cost and reproduction cost, less depreciation, in arriving at its finding of fair value. The figures reported by the commission staff, however, do not include allowances for going value and certain other allowances for other intangible elements of value.

The motion stated the company's net revenue for 1935, adjusted in the same manner as in the audit of the commission's accountants, was $6,162,227 for the electric department and $110,981 for the steam heating department, a total of $6,273,208.

Figures Its Return.

Based on these figures, it was said, the return for the electric department, on the estimated investment cost base, would be 5.91 per cent and on the basis of reproduction cost new, less depreciation, would be 5.37 per cent. For the steam heating department, it was said, the return would be 3.12 per cent on the estimated investment cost basis, and 3.01 per cent on the basis of reproduction cost new, less depreciation.

In the past the commission has fixed the fair rate of return for public utility companies at figures ranging from 6.5 per cent to 8 per cent.

"It is apparent, therefore," the motion stated, "that the companies are not now earning an excessive return, nor from all indications will the return be excessive within the next few years. In fact, the return is considerably less than thata to which they are legally and morally entitled."

Declares Rates Are Low.

It was declared in the motion that the Union Electric's rates were the lowest in Missouri, and were among the lowest in the United States, and that the Union Electric, since 1931, had made rate reductions aggregating about $2,000,000.

The commission has taken no action on the motion, and members of the commission said they did not know when it would be taken up for consideration.

Counsel who filed the motion included the St. Louis law firm of Igoe, Carroll, Higgs & Keefe; Forrest G. Ferris Jr., former associate city counselor of St. Louis, and James P. Aylward of Kansas City.

Ferris, while associate city counselor, handled public utility matters for the city legal department and was active on behalf of the city in early stages of the rate and valuation investigation of Union Electric. Aylward, a leader in the Pendergast Democratic organization of Kansas City, heretofore has been few appearances before the Public Service Commission.

SALE OF BOMBING PLANES ABROAD UP 14 PER CENT

War Department Reports on Purchases in Last Two Years by Five Powers.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 16. — The War Department has found that foreign nations bought 14 per cent more bombardment planes in the last two years than they had been buying before.

Major-General Oscar Westover, chief of the Army Air Corps, said today this had been shown by an analysis the department had made on plane construction and purchases by foreign countries. The present average ratio for the five chief air Powers was placed by Gen. Westover at 56 bombardment to 44 pursuit planes.

The planned status of the Army Air Corps for June 30, 1937, is 55 bombardment to 45 pursuit planes.

Gen. Westover said available data showed that 71 per cent of Germany's planes, 65 per cent of Great Britain's, and 48 per cent of Italy's were bombers.

Only 39 per cent of the French planes and 34 per cent of the Japanese planes are bombers, Westover said, but "it is believed that both France and Japan have programs calling for an increase in their bombardment airplanes."

The average unit price of the big planes has risen from $64,000 to $115,000 during the last 10 years.

$16,000 AWARD AGREED IN PERSONAL INJURY CASE

Julius Ludwig, Laborer, was struck on Head by Brick from Star-Times Building.

Judgment by agreement was entered for $16,000 yesterday before Circuit Judge Harry F. Russell in favor of Julius Ludwig, 1214 Monroe street, on account of personal injuries suffered by him when he was struck on the head by a brick which fell from the fourth floor of the Star-Times Building, Twelfth and Delmar boulevards. The accident happened Jan. 4, 1934, when the building was in course of construction.

Ludwig was employed as a laborer by the Fred Schmitt Contracting Co. and was at work in the basement when injured. The judgment was against the E. A. Koeneman Electric Co., which will be reimbursed by its liability insurer under the Workmen's Compensation Act. Ludwig's employer and its insurer are to receive a total of $3224 from the award to reimburse them for sums advanced on account of his injuries and medical treatment.

FORMER U. S. SENATOR DILL SUED BY NEPHEW'S WIFE

Charged With Alienation of Affections by Trying to Break Up Marriage.

By the Associated Press.

MOUNT VERNON, O., May 16.—A young stenographer's $25,000 alienation of affections suit against her uncle by marriage, former United States Senator Clarence C. Dill, and his sister-in-law, charged they arranged an illegal operation for her, pleadings filed today disclosed.

An answer by Dill, of Spokane, Wash. and Washington denied the charge. The suit was brought by Mrs. Margie Heaton Dill wife of his nephew Wendell Dill of Washington. The sister-in-law, Mrs. Grace Margie Dill, also denied the charge and said in her answer that she did not believe the young wife of her son underwent such an operation. Mrs. Margie Dill filed the suit last Feb. 6. A jury trial is scheduled to start in Knox County common pleas court Monday.

Mrs. Margie Dill alleged the operation was performed in Washington, June 19, 1934, and was arranged in order to break up any family ties with her husband. Former Senator Dill described the suit in his answer as "an attempt to extort money" from him.

COMMISSION APPROVES NEW CONSTITUTION FOR SOVIETS

Document Would Enfranchise All Except Those Barred by Courts; Up to Central Committee.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, May 16. — A special constitutional commission approved today the final text of a projected new Constitution for the Soviets which will extend voting rights to all citizens regardless of their social origin, except those disfranchised by the courts.

The commission, which is headed by Joseph Stalin, Soviet leader, has been working on the project for more than a year.

The proposed Constitution would introduce a system of direct, secret, equal balloting. It will be submitted to the next session of the Central Executive Committee, highest governing body in the country, for final approval.

PHYSICIAN CALLS ATTENTION TO MENACE OF DIPHTHERIA

Dr. Joseph C. Willett, Laboratory Chief in St. Louis, Urges Immunization for Children.

Dr. Joseph C. Willett, laboratory chief of the St. Louis Health Division said that the record for diphtheria in St. Louis in past years was "a blot on the public health of this community," in a radio address yesterday, made in the interest of the current anti-diphtheria campaign.

"We know that one-fourth of the cases of diphtheria occur in children under five years of age," he said. "Consider that 41 per cent of the deaths from diphtheria occur i nthis group and realize how necessary it is that something should be done. Many children, too, who recover from the illness, suffer irreparable damage, and are seriously impaired for the remainder of their lives."

Dr. Willett pointed out that while adults usually are immune to diphtheria, the child from six months to six years of age is highly susceptible and without protection unless immunized by toxoid.

In 1924 the city had 1800 cases and 79 diphtheria deaths, he said. Ten years later, with increased immunization, the figure declined to 961 cases with 38 deaths. Even last year, however, due entirely to failure of persons to take advantage of immunity obtainable from toxoid, there were 665 cases and 24 deaths.

Reserve Officers' Election.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 16.—Maj. Robert W. Reed, news editor of the Kansas City Star, today was elected president of the Missouri Reserve Officers' Association, in annual convention here. The reserve officers also passed a resolution recommending the construction of an R. O. T. C. armory at the University of Missouri. Other officers elected included Lieutenant-Colonel W. Carter Bliss, St. Louis, second vice-president; Maj. George H. Desloge, St. Louis, treasurer; Maj. Alphonse Schwittalla, St. Louis, chaplain.

DELINQUENTS GREETED BY MRS. ROOSEVELT

60 Play on White House Lawn —She Enlists Interest of Congress.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Sixty delinquent girls from a Federally owned training school played today on the White House lawn. Mrs. Roosevelt smilingly received the car loads of girls as they came rolling around the curving driveway to park and assemble in cottage units by the south portico. There are 11 white girls in an institution predominantly Negro. The Negro girls arrived first, and remained most of the time under a separate marquee.

Except for a jolly bunch that volunteered to ride the school truck, their chauffeurs were the League of Women Voters.

Indignant over the antiquated culinary and laundry plant at the school, Mrs. Roosevelt had said she would show them the shiny modernity ofg the new White House kitchens.

As a sample of the home life of the girls, Mrs. Roosevelt said: "In the most modern cottage, it was most economically arranged that they eat in the kitchen, and the washing was also done in the kitchen, and the laundry was hung in the kitchen to dry, so that they ate with laundry waving over their heads drying."

She said the girls went from cottage to cottage by underground passages almost entirely, in the winter time, because of scant clothing.

Congress has now voted at $100,000 appropriation for the place, and Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith, the new superintendent who enlisted Mrs. Roosevelt's interest in the school, told how it would be spent: "There will be a complete renovation of the old buildings; turning of some of their rooms into a vocational school with a complete course in domestic science, a commercial course, a course in salesmanship with practice experienced in a school store fitted up like a country store, a course in cafeteria and waitress work, and a course in personal maid service."

French-Soviet Pact in Effect.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, May 17.—The French-Soviet mutual assistance agreement was promulgated today with publication in the official journal. This was the last formality connected with the pact, which, however, had been effective since an exchange of copies between the two nations March 27. The treaty provides for assistance by one power in case the other is the victim of an "unprovoked attack" by a European nation.

Robinson's Own Story of Flight After Kidnaping Mrs. Stoll; Why Ransom Bills Were Never Traced

Never Disguised as Woman, He Says—Met Only One Acquaintance—In St. Louis Last August.

By FREDDIE RUSSELL.
(Copyright, 1936 by Nashville Banner.)

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 16.—Ten years ago Thomas H. Robinson Jr. wasn't a public enemy, but a tennis-playing friend of mine who was preparing to enter Vanderbilt University School of Law. I knew his parents then. I accompanied them to Louisville Wednesday for his hearing and sentence. It was natural then that Robinson, who had closely guarded every word for almost two years and now was headed for the Atlanta penitentiary, should open up and talk to the only old friend, outside his family, he had seen since that autumn afternoon in 1934 when he kidnaped Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll, wife of a wealthy oil executive, near Louisville, Ky. He collected $50,000 ransom.

Where did Robinson go immediately after the ransom money was delivered to him in Indianapolis on the late afternoon of Oct. 16, 1934? In his automobile, a Ford V-8 with the license tag changed, he headed for Springfield, O., driving through Newcastle and Richmond.

"By reading the papers I knew they were scouring that section for me," said Robinson. "I decided to leave my car in Springfield. I took the late night bus for Toledo."

The next morning, Oct. 17, Robinson went directly to the railroad station and waited there, reading newspapers and magazines, until it was time to board a train for Cleveland. He stayed at Cleveland two days, attending movie after movie, before going by rail to New York. There he went first to the Knickerbocker Hotel, registering under an assumed name. "I don't remember what named I used there," he said. "It must have been either John Ward or Thomas Kennedy."

Spending the Ransom Money.

Within a week he moved to the fashionable Waldorf-Astoria on Park avenue. There he spent the first of the ransom money. He changed a $20 bill at the desk. There was nothing else to do. He was out of honest money. He was willing to take that chance early. Anyway, the newspapers stories hinted that he was in the middle West.

It was misery, unbearable misery, for two days. Every walk around the city had its dreaded return to the hotel. Would officers be waiting in his room? Was he being shadowed at that very moment?

Robinson had to do something to break the tension. So he took to the night clubs. That necessitated more money—more ransom money. He spent it freely, even carelessly. That was the start of a 19-month spree in which Robinson spent more than $45,000. To this day, not $10 of the Stoll ransom money has been traced.

Why Bills Couldn't Be Traced.

The money couldn't be traced, and for the first time ever published, I'll tell you why. The source of my information cannot be revealed.

When the package containing $50,000 in $20 and $10 bills was expressed to Nashville in October, 1934, the numbers of the bills were recorded at Louisville. But that was all. Just the numbers. Virtually all those bills were National Bank notes and some one neglected to record the name of the bank along with each number. Eleven thousand National Banks in the United States have issued paper money and there are hundreds of duplicate numbers in all denominations of bills. These bills can be distinguished only by the name of the bank, and they didn't have the name of the banks that issued Robinson's currency.

Robinson didn't grow over-confident, though. By the middle of January, he took a train to Philadelphia and from there went by plane to the West Coast. He landed in San Francisco.

Robinson's intention was to take a boat to Honolulu and perhaps proceed to the Orient. He had overlooked the little matter of a passport necessary to go to the Orient, and, of course, that was too dangerous to tackle. He abandoned the idea of an ocean voyage.

Instead he stayed around San Francisco for awhile. After a few weeks, he moved to Los Angeles and stayed there most of the spring. He stayed always in the larger hotels where there was less chance of being noticed.

"I made it a point never to form any real acquaintances," said Robinson. "I believe those people in California thought I was a wealthy young fellow who just liked to travel."

The wandering spirit moved him in the summer to visit Reno, Nev., for a few weeks.

"I believe Reno was the easiest place in the country for a fellow like me to get by," he said. "The city is always full of visitors and strangers. No one notices anyone else."

In July he returned to Los Angeles for another stay at the same hotel at which he had previously been quartered. Frequently he attended a movie premiere to get a glimpse of some star in person. He wanted to visit a movie studio but deemed it unwise.

In St. Louis Last August.

In August he took a train to St. Louis. That city was the nearest point he came to Nashville, his home. He never was in Memphis as was reported many times.

"I can't tell you where this happened," Robinson said, "but last summer a sheriff showed me his hat with a bullet hole that Dillinger shot in it. He even tried it on me and never realized who I was."

From St. Louis Robinson went to Cleveland by train. Late in September, almost a year after the kidnaping, he went to Topeka, Kan. He read the newspapers daily and knew that the trial of his wife and father was being held in Louisville.

"I bought a radio and put it in my room at Topeka," Tom said. "I listened for the news reports each night. When I heard that they had been acquitted, I really got tight."

Robinson insists that his relatives were innocent of any connection with his crime.

In October he went to New York, staying at another fashionable hotel.

"I walked the streets of New York and Brooklyn every day," he said. "I had no disguise. Nothing ever happened. I worried less and less about being caught."

Met Only One Acquaintance.

Robinson was asked if in the entire 19 months he ever saw anyone he knew.

"Just one time," he answered. "It was on my last visit to New York. It was on Broadway one night and I almost bumped into him, but he never did recognize me. He was from Nashville."

"I often thought of home, but it would have been crazy to write," he said. "I had no idea of going near Nashville again."

It was in New York that Robinson met the girl who was with him at the time of his capture in Glendale, Cal. He said she never knew his real identity.

"She was a good kid, absolutely all right," he declared, at the same time refusing to give her name. "I was hungry for home cooking and she liked to cook. We left New York in January and drove all the way to California."

After a brief stay in Los Angeles, they rented a small house in Glendale.

"We took a lot of trips in my car but always came back home at night," he said, describing his Glendale days. "She always bought the groceries and I didn't stir around town much."

Capture in California.

He grew ill at ease in Glendale. "The first premonition came on my birthday, May 5," he said. "I was 29 years old that day. For some reason I was unusually nervous all day. My teeth were hurting me a lot—the pain was awful—and I realized I could get no relief. I wouldn't think of going to a dentist.

"Last Sunday, Mother's Day, I had thought about my mother all day. I really had some kind of feeling that I would see her soon. I sure didn't think it would be in just three days though."

Robinson says he intended to leave Glendale around the fifteenth of the month to go back East. The Government agents made their surprise call on him on the night of May 11.

"I have no idea in the world how they were tipped off," Robinson said. 'I'll never know. I'll swear that's wrong, though, about any Pasadena drug clerk tipping them off. That's impossible. Since this thing has happened, I never once have disguised as a woman. This is a real mustache," he added, pointing to it. "I couldn't have grown one like it in three weeks. You know that."

Then he pointed to his feet. "How could I have bought women's slippers for these number 11's?" he laughed. "The shoe salesman would have nabbed me before I could have laced 'em up."

EX-SOLDIERS URGE BIGGER VETERANS' HOSPITAL FOR CITY

BUILDINGS CROWDED, SAYS RESOLUTION

Committee Asserts Precautions Should Be Taken Against Admitting Those Able to Pay.

A report of a committee of the Veterans' Welfare Council, recommending enlargement of Veterans' Hospital, Jefferson Barracks, and precautions against admission to the institution of persons able to pay for treatment in cases not arising from military service, was approved unanimously by the Commanders' Conference of the American Legion, meeting Friday night at 4622 Olive street.

The committee consisted of Dr. Solon Cameron, representing the American Legion; Carl F. Hammer, Spanish-American War Veterans, and Dr. John C. Cornell, Veterans of Foreign Wars. Its report, based on a visit to the hospital Wednesday, will be taken up by the other organizations later.

It was recommended by the committee that the facts about the place be called to the attention of Senators and Congressmen from this area and of the Veterans' Administration, with the object of gaining the following things: Construction of a unit for tuberculosis cases; erection of a unit for mental and nervous cases; expansion of the present general hospital so that it can accommodate all general medical and surgical cases of the area; enlargement of the social service department to permit of more diligent inquiry as to the means of patients not under treatment for reasons connected with their military service.

Some Patients Able to Pay.

The committee found, it reported, "that patients who are financially able to pay for their medical care and hospitalization are, at the expense of the Government, being provided with this service without cost to themselves; this practice places the Veterans' Administration under the critical estimate of the medical profession and the local hospitals."

Other findings of the committee included:

The hospital has been taking care of more patients than its rated bed capacity.

Only emergency care is given tubercular patients, who afterwards are sent to other institutions of the administration.

Nervous and mental patients are transferred to other hospitals of the administration, outside Missouri.

Applications for admission on file would fill immediately the beds vacated by mental and nervous patients.

No immediate building plan to meet present and anticipated future needs is under consideration, although $195,000 has been appropriated.

Relatives and friends of patients transferred to hospitals elsewhere must pay the expense of traveling in order to visit them.

Results of Survey.

"A survey," the report said, "now shows that patients are being quartered in solariums and that the facility is pitifully inadequate to accommodate the number of applicants at present. We believe that the action of the Veterans' Administration in sending patients to facilities remote from their homes is doing an injustice to the families and relatives of the unfortunate veterans afflicted with tuberculosis or mental diseases.

"We further believe that the area served by the facility at Jefferson Barracks should be equipped to care for the proportion of veterans living in this area who may require attention or hospitalization."

The report pointed out that the Government paid the transportation expense in transferring patients whose condition was of the "service-connected" category, but not those whose condition did not grow out of their service.

COCHRAN HAS NOT REPLIED TO CHARGES, SHORT SAYS

Republican Alleged Political Use of Federal Relief and Says Democrat Promised Answer.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Congressman Dewey Short (Rep.), Missouri, said today that Congressman Cochran (Dem.), Missouri, asked him May 8, when he charged political use of relief funds, if he would object if Cochran printed a reply in the Congressional Record. Short said he told Cochran he would not. Cochran's reply is not yet in the Record.

"Down in my home town they not only threatened to take the people off relief if they did not vote the Democratic ticket, but on the morning of the last election they hauled the voters in at the expense of the taxpayers," Short said on the floor of the House May 8. "They even violated the election laws by taking these people into the polling room and seeing that they voted the Democratic ticket, then handed them relief slips and we had to have bloody fist fights before we put an end to this damnable and inexcusable practice." Short lives in Galena, Mo.

Short's attack included a letter R. Newton McDowell, Kansas City contractor, wrote to Matthew S. Murray, Missouri WPA Director, complaining of "red tape and delays."

"As a life-long Democrat," McDowell wrote, "how in the name of the Lord can I be expected to support an administration or a Congress that can produce no better plan for men on relief or the unemployed than one to blindly turn over to Harry L. Hopkins and his crowd of theoretical star-gazers three billion dollars of the people's money to continue what is obviously a mess?"

RFC AIDING STOCKHOLDERS TO INCREASE BANK HOLDINGS

Agency Transferring Its Investments in Depositories to Them by 5-Year Loan Plan.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 16.—Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, said in an interview today that the RFC was transferring its investment in banks by financing small individual stockholders.

He said that while the RFC is making no particular point of having banks retire notes or preferred stock held by the RFC, "we are willing to co-operate with these banks at their request."

Jones mentioned the decision of the Manufacturers' Trust Co. of New York to retire $25,000,000 of capital notes held by the RFC as an example. This will be merely a bookkeeping procedure, he indicated, as far as the RFC is concerned. The governmental agency will finance the purchase of preferred stock by the bank's shareholders.

Stockholders borrowing from the RFC will be permitted to pay off the loans over a period of five years, 10 per cent to be made in a down payment and 10 per cent every six months. Interest will be at the rate of 4 per cent annually, the chairman said.

TWO MEN ARRESTED HERE TO BE TRIED IN DETROIT

Waive Extradition on Charge of Extorting $750, Posing as Federal Agents.

John Murphey, 44 years old, and John Grablick, 32, arrested Thursday night by police and later identified as two men accused of extortion, waived a removal hearing yesterday and were ordered returned to Detroit, Mich., by Federal Judge George H. Moore.

The men were arrested by detectives, who noticed an automobile with New York licenses parked double on Kingshighway, near West Pine boulevard. Murphey was arrested as he approached the car, but Grablick drove away and was captured after a short chase, in which three shots were fired by policemen. Police said the men were accused in Detroit of extorting $750, posing as Federal agents. The men were unable to furnish bond.

MISSIONARIES ESCAPE UNDER FIRE OF ETHIOPIAN LOOTERS

Nine Britons Arrive in Addis Ababa in Flight From Provincial Town.

By the Associated Press.

ADDIS ABABA, May 16.—A story of the burning and looting of Aspa Tafari, capital of Chercherr Province, 200 miles south, was brought to Addis Ababa tonight by nine British missionaries, who brought with them Theodore Martin, son of the Ethiopian Minister to London. The party was headed by six and a half-foot Colin Mackenzie.

Fitaurari Tecli Hawariat, former Ethiopian envoy to Geneva, commanding the town and its garrison, fled at the same time former Emperor Haile Selassi left Addis Ababa, they said. Soldiers joined peasants in looting stores and soon all were drunk. Then fires were started which burned for three days while the town was pillaged.

Bands of natives began organizing for an attack on the mission. Three of the missionaries were women. Then men got runners through to the one Government official who remained. He sent them a truck. They piled their possession in it and made a dash for safety in the face of bullets. Nobody was hit. The group raced to Miesso, 15 miles from the railroad, just as the Italians entered the city. Then they came on to Addis Ababa by train.

Native runners from Southern Ethiopia reported tonight all American and foreign missionaries were safe.

TWO BROTHERS ADMIT ROBBING WOMAN IN CONFECTIONARY

Howard Vandable, 24-year-old chauffeur, and his brother, Chester, 18, an electrician, have admitted to police of the Wyoming Street Station that they held up Mrs. Ellen Kahle, Wednesday, in her confectionary at 2356 Menard street and robbed her of about $25.

Descriptions furnished by Mrs. Kahle and her daughter, Anna, 14, resulted in the arrest of the Vandable brothers and their subsequent admissions. Both Howard, who said he lived at 1031 Lami street, and his brother, who gave his address as 5805 Julian avenue, have been convicted previously for burglary and larceny. The elder brother also has three convictions for auto theft.

Mrs. Kahle told police the younger Vandable came to her store about noon Wednesday, made several purchases and then used the telephone. During the telephone conversation he said, "Come in about a half hour." He left but returned about 1:30 o'clock with another man, who Mrs. Kahle identified yesterday as Howard Vandable.

They tied Mrs. Kahle's hands with a rope and tied her daughter's hands with a scarf. One robber watched them in the bedroom while the other ransacked the confectionary, then both fled.

HOUSEWIVES have preferred to COOK WITH GAS!

In grandmother's day, and even when mother was a bride, the housewife needed every hour of the day to complete the big job of home-making. Today the job is just as big and more complicated, but it takes less time and effort for science has given the modern home-maker new hours for leisure and relaxation, hours to enjoy with her family and friends, to use in self-improvement, reading, entertaining and fostering new friendships.

The modern bride expects a new gas range, whether it's given by generous and thoughtful parents or bought from her own household budget. She's wise, too, for nothing will add more to the job of home-making than an automatic gas range. Its modern design harmonizes with her idea of attractiveness and the automatic features make her immune from the old joke about the bride's biscuits, for good cooking is easy on a fully-equipped gas range. The oven heat regulator and the new top burner, with a thousand variations of heat, make cooking a pleasure and a success, even for inexperienced cooks. When she's stumped for ideas and recipes, she can call the gas company's Home Service Department.

Wise, indeed, is the bride who follows in her mother's and grandmother's footsteps and cooks with gas, the preferred method of cooking wherever and whenever good food is desired.

FEWER DAMAGE SUITS IN CIRCUIT COURT

877 In First Four Months of 1936, Decrease of 334 From Total in 1935 Period.

A steady decrease in damage suits filed in Circuit Court was shown in a report made public yesterday by Circuit Clerk H. Sam Priest.

From January to April of this year there was a decrease of 365 suits, in all kinds of actions. During the first four months this year 2827 suits were filed as compared with 3192 suits during the corresponding period last year.

The Circuit Clerk's report set forth that a smaller number of damage suits accounted for most of the present decrease. From January to April, inclusive, 877 such suits were filed, a drop of 334 in comparison to the number in the 1935 period.

Divorce Suits Increase.

While the damage suit litigation has fallen off divorce suits have shown an increase, according to the report. For the first four months last year 1001 divorce suits were filed. In the period this year there were 1053 actions, an increase of 52.

Priest said that the figures followed the trend of litigation for the last two years.

In 1934 the number of divorce suits was 2179, but last year they increased to 3020, with the first four months of this year indicating an increase over the figures of both previous years. Damage suits filed in 1934 totaled 6154 actions, or about 60 per cent of the litigation in Circuit Court. Last year, however, this classification of suits declined to about 4689 and constituted only 50 per cent of the total actions in the courts.

Amounts Sought and Awards.

The total amount sought in damages in suits filed during the four-month period this year was $8,794,513, the report set forth. A record furnished to the Circuit Clerk disclosed that from last Sept. 9 to yesterday the amounts sued for in damage cases which went to trial before juries totaled $3,989,308, while the juries awarded a total of $603,070. The trial of these cases resulted in 126 verdicts for plaintiffs and 89 verdicts in favor of defendants.

Yesterday was the last day for issuance of writs in suits for the ensuing June term. The filing of these cases began March 22. The June term filings totaled 1035 actions, a decline of 326 lawsuits as compared with the total filed for the term last year.

A year ago the motor of Pugh's express plane cut out over the English Channel. A fishing boat rescued him.

His bride in 1926 became the first woman to fly from England to Australia. She made the flight with Capt. W. N. Lancaster. In 1932 she was a witness in Lancaster's trial for the murder of Haden Clarke in Miami. Lancaster was acquitted.

She set a woman's trans-American air record in 1930, and in the same year turned up safe in the Bahamas after being missing three days.

MRS. WILL ECCENTRIC, WITNESSES TESTIFY

Depositions in Suit Over $288,000 Estate Set for Trial Tomorrow.

Testimony concerning eccentricities of Mrs. Frieda Will, who left an estate valued at $288,000, is contained in depositions filed yesterday in Circuit Court where a suit to set aside her will is docketed for trial tomorrow.

The depositions were filed by counsel for George T. Kollas, a real estate dealer, of 2107 South Grand boulevard, and his sister, Mrs. Hazel Hartig of Washington, to each of whom Mrs. Will bequeathed $5000. Kollas is a grand-nephew and Mrs. Hartig a grand-niece, of Mrs. Will. Should her will be set aside, they would divide the estate as the only heirs at law.

Mrs. Anna C. Bohnn, of Los Angeles, her daughter Mrs. Frieda B. Horner, also of Los Angeles, and Dr. Louis W. Schreiber of Santa Monica, Cal., all former St. Louisans, were the witnesses whose depositions were filed.

Testimony on Eccentricities.

Mrs. Bohnn testified she had known Mrs. Will, daughter of Carl Klaussman, a wealthy St. Louis brewer, and widow of Louis Will, for many years, and that after the death of her husband in 1898 Mrs. Will suffered a nervous breakdown. Mrs. Will, Mrs. Bohnn said, "would do funny things, such as try to make her pet dog play the piano."

Mrs. Horner testified that she had known Mrs. Will since she was a little girl, but that in the later years of her life Mrs. Will suffered from a nervous ailment and did not recognize her when they met.

Dr. Schreiber testified he treated Mrs. Will for insomnia and melancholia. The last time he saw her, he said, was in June, 1934. The disputed will was drawn in February, 1934, 10 years before Mrs. Will's death at the age of 84.

When Dr. Schreiber last saw Mrs. Will, he said, "she was unfit not only to draw a will, but I thought her unfit for other business."

The physician said Mrs. Will, despite her comfortable means, was habitually worried about money. "So much so," he added, "that I didn't charge her what I felt was really the fee for a person well fixed to pay. Her whole actions led one to believe she was much concerned about having enough to live on."

Founder of Altenheim.

Julius T. Muench, counsel for the executor, Fred A. Hammel, a real estate dealer, developed in cross-examination that Mrs. Will was one of the founders of the St. Louis Altenheim, the principal beneficiary under her will. The attorney sought to show that the provisions in the will were consistent with Mrs. Will's character as a frequent contributor to the Altenheim and other charitable institutions.

The will named 52 beneficiaries, including friends, relatives and various charitable organizations. The bequest to the Altenheim was $180,000. Kollas and Mrs. Hartig, in seeking to have the will set aside, allege that Mrs. Will was of unsound mind and was subject to undue influence when the will was executed.

$2,364,000,000 BILL NOW WAITS ON ICKES' TESTIMONY

Republicans on Senate Committee Want His Views on Transfer of Funds.

WASHINGTON, May 16. — A Republican demand to know more about Administration plans for spending relief money today put over until next week a final decision by the Senate Appropriations Committee on the $2,364,229,712 deficiency bill.

Republicans called for testimony from Secretary Ickes and Comptroller-General McCarl on PWA spending and the legality of transferring funds from the Works Progress Administration to the Public Works Administration and the Resettlement Administration.

The Committee is considering whether to appropriate $250,000,000 directly to the PWA. Senator Hayden (Dem.), Arizona, has an amendment to give Ickes' unit $700,000,000 to carry out projects already approved. Ickes has a revolving fund of about $250,000,000 for loans to states and municipalities. The plan is to make this available for grants and allow the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make the loans.

The Committee today received an amendment from Robinson (Dem.), Arkansas, to give the Smithsonian Institution $200,000 to develop long range weather forecasting and another from Dieterich (Dem.), Illinois, to pay the Illinois Central Railroad $2,700,000 for locomotives sold the Mexican Government but never paid for due to a change in administration.

LOUISIANA, Mo., May 16—Five thousand home folks and visitors attended an old-fashioned barbecue today for Major Lloyd C. Other Democrats who spoke were Davis Benning, chairman of the Pike County Stark-for-Governor Club; Thomas Anderson, St. Louis excise commissioner; Richard Nacy, State treasurer, and Judge J. D. Hostetter and Judge Edward J. McCullen of the St. Louis Court of Appeals.

EFFECT OF MOVIES ON CHILDREN REPORTED

American Youngsters Remember Large Proportion of Things on Screen.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, May 16.—American children absorb and remember a large proportion of the information presented in motion pictures, and Greta Garbo and Mae West are not favored by English school children, who prefer adventure films, thrillers, and "Western" drama. These are conclusions presented to the League of National Child Welfare Committee by an American and an English observer.

Research by American experts indicates that children tend to accept as true what is presented, Prof. Dale of the Ohio State University told the committee.

"Their 'social' attitude may be markedly changed by films (for example, attitude to foreign peoples, toward criminals or criminal behavior, towards peace and war)", he said. "They are affected by the portrayal of an unreal life of luxury or by the representation of crime going unpunished."

Dr. Dale said the movies are not playing too large a part in the recreative life of the child, but it is important that the films should be produced specially for children.

One promising development in the United States, which might be recommended to other countries, was the teaching of motion picture discrimination as part of the regular curriculum of study in secondary schools, he reported. "It is my conviction that we shall more frequently turn in the future to publicly supported recreational activities for children and youth and that the cinema will occupy a place in such a scheme," he said.

Alan Cameron of the British Film Institute told the committee his conclusions were based on an analysis made from essays written by 2500 English school children which showed they preferred the adventurous and realistic thrillers. He regretted that since the invention of "talkies," Western stories and even Mickey Mouse were growing more sophisticated. English children, he said, didn't like Greta Garbo or May West, because they portrayed a life quite foreign to them.

Cameron thinks films, to fulfill the child's needs, should be quick moving, containing action and suspense which should not necessarily relate to crime. "The one sin in the eyes of the child is sentimentality," he said. "Broad comedy set against a background of every-day life pleases them. Such films might have as their central figures airpilots, firemen, engine drivers, racing motorists, sailors and explorers."

SNYDER HEIRS SEEK TO REOPEN HAHATONKA DAMAGE SUIT

Foreman of Jury That Made $200,000 Award, Testifies He Was Approached.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 16.—A new trial was sought in Federal Court here today by heirs of Robert M. Snyder Sr., who last year were awarded $200,000 by a Federal Court jury for their claim that construction of the Bagnell Dam ruined the Beauty of Snyder's Hahatonka estate in Camden County. United States District Judge Merrill E. Otis took the request under advisement.

Reviewing the claim against the Union Electric Light & Power Co. of St. Louis, builder and operator of the dam, former United States Senator James A. Reed, counsel for the Snyder heirs, called George W. Jackson to testify in the motion for a new trial.

Jackson, 73 years old, foreman of the jury that made the award in February, 1935, testified he had been approached by a man before the start of the trial last year. Jackson said he had reported the matted to United States Ditrict Judge Merrill E. Otis at the time. The man, Jackson said, was Frank J. Collins, an employe in the City License Collector's office here.

Asked by Reed to tell of the visit, Jackson said: "After I got the summons, Collins came to my home and mentioned that I was on the jury in the Hahatonka case. He wanted to know my religion. He asked me about my politics. I told him I voted for whom I liked. I opened the door and as he started to leave, the man said: 'You know Jim Reed is bad to our President; he talks awful bad.'" Jackson said he told Collins "That's Jim's business, not mine." Collins, on the stand, denied making the statement about Reed.

Caravan Carrying Messages to Texas Due Here Thursday

Among Oldsmobile Cars in It Is First Auto to Cross U. S. Under Its Own Power.

An automobile caravan, carrying message of good will to the people of Texas for the success of their centennial exposition at Dallas, is expected to reach St. Louis at 2 p. m. next Thursday.

The messages are on scrolls bearing the signatures of thousands of Oldsmobile employes, car owners and their friends, and are to be delivered to Gov. James V. Allred of Texas on the exposition grounds June 1. In St. Louis, the caravan will pick up a message from Mayor Dickmann for delivery to Mayor George Sergeant of Dallas, as well as scrolls signed by Oldsmobile employes and owners in this region.

There will be a parade of the caravan and Oldsmobile cars driven by dealers and salesmen from the city limits to City Hall and then to the showrooms of the dealers.

In the parade will be two old Oldsmobiles, one a curve dash model, which was the first automobile to cross the American continent. The other is one of the largest cars ever built, the 1910 Oldsmobile limited. The old Oldsmobiles are being transported between cities on two of the new General Motors trucks.

The curved dash model was built in 1902. It was the first automobile to travel across the continent under its own power, making the trip in 1905. Twenty five years later, the same trip was again made by "Old Scout," as the car is known to Oldsmobile executives.

The 1910 Limited was operated on the highways from that year until 1935, when it was repurchased by Oldsmobile. This big six-cylinder car was considered the acme of style and efficiency when it was constructed.

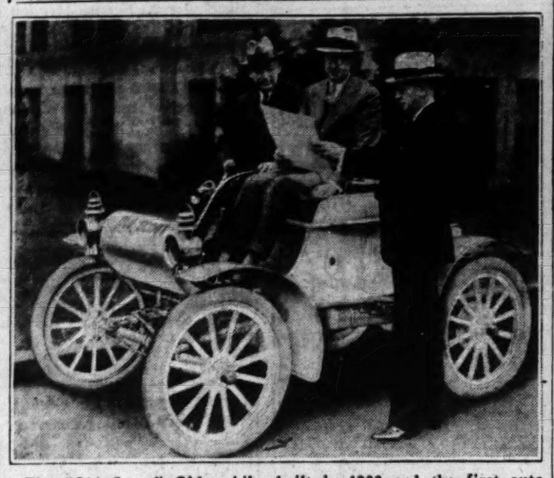
A special free moving picture show has been planned for Thursday evening at the Oliver Cadillac Co., Oldsmobile dealer at Sarah and Laclede avenues.

In St. Louis the caravan will be joined by five Oldsmobile "Voice of Safety" cars, equipped with speaker systems. These cars to be turned over to the police of Dallas for directing traffic and spreading the message of safety to visitors to the exposition.

On June 6, for the opening parade, Oldsmobile will provide 18 of these "Voice of Safety" cars to broadcast the parade to the half-million people expected to view it.

After a stay in Dallas, the caravan will be routed through the principal cities of Texas.

A Real Pioneer Automobile



The "Old Scout" Oldsmobile, built in 1902 and the first auto to travel across this continent under its own power, which will be in a caravan, carrying messages of good will to Texas for the success of its centennial exposition in Dallas, which is expected to arrive in St. Louis at 2 o'clock next Thursday. In the picture, Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald of Michigan, is giving a message of greeting, written to Gov. Allred of Texas, to D. E. Ralston, vice-president and general manager for Oldsmobile. At the wheel, is C. L. McCuen, president of Oldsmobile.

Trunk Models Lead In Automobile Sales

Ninety per cent of the purchasers of Chevrolet sedans and coaches select trunk models, according to figures given out by the company on 1936 sales. Most buyers now demand trunks, even if they have no intention of using them for luggage.

The trunks afford better protection of the spare tire from thieves and from damage caused by sunlight and weather, and make tire changing easier. The modern built-in trunk is more commodious than the attached trunk of a few years ago.

Setting World Production Record

250,000,000th Tire Made by Goodyear Co. in Its Akron Factories

World's Record for Production Set —First Tire Made by Company 38 Years Ago.

Production of 250,000,000 tires, a mark unequaled in the rubber industry, was reached in the Akron factories of Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. last week, according to information received by C. M. Van Epps, manager here for Goodyear Service.

"The tire to bear the number, 250,000,000, was a Double Eagle Airwheel, the super tire recently announced by Goodyear, and was size 6.00-16, used on popular-priced cars," Van Epps said. "Back of the production of 250,000,000 tires is the experience of 38 years, during which the company rose from a small concern to the world's largest rubber company. As the tire was being built, company officials assisted in the ceremony, President Paul W. Litchfield applying the tread and inspecting the tire as it came from the molds.

"If the 250,000,000 tires made by Goodyear were stacked one on top of the other, they would reach a height of 17,750 miles. Laid side by side they would encircle the globe four and one-half times, or would reach nearly half the distance to the moon.

"Converted into tire mileage, the 250,000,000 tires would equal 3,000,000,000,000 miles, or more than enough for 60,000 round trips to the moon. If a single motorist averaging 10,000 miles a year, would try to wear out this enormous production, it would take him 75,000 years.

"Production of the tires consumed approximately 1,200,000 pounds of cotton, or 2,400,000 bales, and approximately 2,750,000,000 pounds of crude rubber. On the basis of present production, this would use up all the rubber the world could produce for a year and a half.

"If placed in box cars, the tires would make up a train that would stretch more than two-fifths the distance across the United States.

"The first tire out of the molds as the company started production of its second quarter-billion tires was an all-traction tractor tire for farm use—also regarded as significant by Goodyear officials in view of the company's pioneering work in adapting pneumatic tires for farm use."

'Cannonball' Baker Does 28 M. P. G. on Canada-Mexico Run

A stock Graham Crusader, driven by "Cannonball" Baker, has just completed a safety economy run from Vancouver, Can., to Agua Caliente, Mex., a 1639 miles journey.

Baker drove into Agua Caliente having covered the entire route with an average gasoline consumption of 28.15 miles per gallon. On one lap of the journey, between Seattle and Portland, he averaged 32.16 miles per gallon. The lowest gasoline average, between Portland and Eugene, Ore., was 25 miles per gallon. This variation was due to rain, winds and a low visibility. Baker recently established a record in the Graham Crusader of 27.3 miles per gallon for 4744 miles from Boston to Los Angeles.

Total of 1,067,736 Miles of Test Driving Of Pontiacs in Year

The Pontiac Motor Co. experimental division maintains a year-round force of 25 to 30 test drivers for the sole purpose of driving and checking new Pontiac cars on the General Motors proving ground at Milford, Mich.

Experimental division records of Pontiac for 1935 show that more than 100 cars were used; that 888,822 miles of test driving were run on the proving ground and 278,914 miles off the proving ground, making the total number of test miles in that one year of 1,067,736.

Five of 10 Pontiac cars always are on test, trying out some new part, assembly or process. Each car averages 25,000 miles in test work before being replaced, although some of them are driven up to 50,000 miles. Rain, snow, thunderstorms or sub-zero weather seldom cause a break in the daily routine of the testers.

Tests are run by Pontiac drivers and engineers at the proving ground to cover durability, performance, economy, cooling, splash, brakes, axles, frames, steering, ride, engine mountings, bearings, carburetors, transmissions, engines, noises and mufflers.

Pontiacs also undergo several hundred thousand miles of testing away from the proving ground, generally with staff engineers at the wheels.

"Puncture Vine" Annoys Motorists.

Tours in Interest of Big Race

Rickenbacker, driving a Pontiac car, as he has for the past two years on this tour, stopped off in St. Louis.

Predicts Record Attendance May 30 At Indianapolis Race

A. W. Rickenbacker, Visiting St. Louis, Tells How Track Has Been Made Safer.

A. W. Rickenbacker, brother of Capt. "Eddie," the World War ace, stopped in St. Louis recently on his annual tour of the East and Middle West in the interest of the Indianapolis 500-mile race on Memorial day. He predicted that all attendance records would be broken at the race.

Rickenbacker, who is a director of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Corporation, came here in his official Indianapolis motor speedway 1936 Pontiac car with which he is making the 10,000-mile trip.

"The Indianapolis track has been remodeled to anticipate future speeds," says Rickenbacker. "The vertical banks on the north and south turns have been removed and replaced by a 10-foot concrete apron.

"Rough parts of the track are being evened up. Also, the inside walls are being removed and a 40-foot apron built into the inside of both turns. This will give drivers plenty of space for maneuvering and handling their cars in case they get into trouble or go into spins of one kind or another. They won't be in danger of hitting the inside wall any longer.

"Advance sales of tickets are 100 per cent ahead of last year at this same time, which leads to the belief that there will be a record-breaking crowd.

"The gasoline limit for the 500 miles will be 37½ gallons, which will mean an average of 13.3 miles per gallon or better at speeds of more than 100 miles per hour.

"That is not impossible, because it already has been done.

"In 1934, the winner, Bill Cummings, set a new record for the race using only 37½ gallons of gas. Then last year, at least one driver who finished well up in the money was within the gasoline limit."

Car in Death Valley Gives 'Stunt' Driver Thrills Not Expected

Used in 120 Degree Heat for Making Movie Dramatizing Automobile Ruggedness.

"Bobby" Nolan, a professional "stunt" driver, found new thrills when he put a 1936 model automobile over the bumps in Death Valley recently.

The purpose was to film a motion picture which would dramatize the ruggedness of the car and its performing ability in the hottest temperatures on the North American continent. The film has been released under the title, "It's a Great Life."

The scenario called for taking a standard stock 1936 De Soto completely off the roads onto the rough terrain of Death Valley. Rock-strewn river beds, borax flats, sage-brush-dotted desert and rocky hillsides were the car's unusual testing ground.

Nolan raced it through sagebrush that hid sun-baked ruts in the hard desert floor. He drove it over ramps for flying leaps and tests of springs, frame, wheels and the car's entire construction.

Through rock-strewn arroyos and over uneven river beds, with temperatures at more than 120 degrees, the De Soto concealed the shocks to such an extent that the first scenes had to be made over again. Instead of "dramatizing" the riding quality of the car, they made the feat look easy. Nolan hadn't counted on that.

He repeated the tests at higher speeds until the impact against ridges and stones set up a plunging motion of the car necessary to suggest a true idea of the ruggedness of the ground.

The car also concealed at first the "drama" of other trials, such as ploughing through sagebrush and sand across the choppy desert floor. Again the De Soto was forced to such speeds that a rocking motion was obtained as the car leaped 18 inches off the ground from hidden mounds in the brush.

Then Nolan hurled the car at 60 miles per hour up a ramp, only to have the De Soto land safely on four wheels.

The valley was a furnace when the De Soto test party entered. At times film stuck inside the cameras and could not be cranked through.

Some parts are required to be within one ten-thousandths inch of specified size before acceptance for use in the car. This is a measurement about 30 times finer than the diameter of a human hair.

For the engine alone there are 850 applications of measurements within one one-thousandth inch, and over more than 1000 more within five one-thousandths inch, the Ford lecturer states.

Each postcard carries a number of stamps in German, among them "Hindenburg and Graf Zeppelin use exclusively Veedol motor oil" and "With airship to North America."

Piston Fit to Limit Of Seven 100,000ths of Inch by Cadillac-La Salle

"It is necessary to imagine a Cadillac more than 60 miles long to explain the standards of precision observed by Cadillac-La Salle craftsmen," says Guy W. Oliver, president of the Oliver Cadillac Co.

"For instance, it is almost impossible to visualize such a measurement as 7-100,000ths of an inch. That is the widest variation permitted when pistons are fitted into the cylinders of Cadillac and La Salle motors. Incidentally, it is one of the reasons why Cadillac and LaSalle cars require no breaking in period."

Fewer Accidents With Less Horn Tooting.

The enforced silencing of automobile horns except in cases of extreme emergency is credited with reducing traffic accidents in Sweden.

Students Inspect Engineering Design of New Cord Cars

Opportunity to inspect the mechanical and general design features of the new Cord front-drive car have been given to students of engineering by a number of distributers and dealers throughout the country, according to George Hutchings, sales manager for the Auburn Distributing Co. in St. Louis.

The lowness of the car particularly attracted the attention of the students and they were amazed to find that it had more room than the average car or cars of even longer wheelbase, Hutchings said. The unit power plant and driving unit was also studied. In the Cord, the motor, transmission and differential are all a single unit, and the power is delivered direct to the front wheels, so there is no long drive shaft to the rear wheels.

Placement of the differential and transmission on the chassis frame eliminates approximately 200 of unsprung weight.

The students found that the new Cord's front compartment is completely free of levers, the gear shifting being by electrical remote control.

The car is scientifically streamlined, which not only cuts down wind resistance but minimizes wind noise. Interiors are luxuriously done and there are many refinements in design.

In a conventional motor car, a passenger must step up on the running board, then to the floor of the car, and then sit down. With a Cord, he simply opens the door and sits in the seat as he would in an easy chair.

A Personal Safety Plan.

William Janes of Knoxville, Tenn., invited other motorists to follow him in making this declaration: "If anybody sees me driving an automobile faster than 45 miles an hour he has a right to list me as a public enemy."

Waste of Gasoline Largely Result of Bad Driving Habits

"Don't try to beat all the other fellows away when the light changes if you want good gasoline mileage," W. A. Hilman, service manager of the Chrysler sales division of the Chrysler Corporation, advises.

"It undoubtedly is a source of satisfaction to know that you have a car that is fast on the getaway. But it wastes gasoline to demonstrate this ability. The engine needs a lot of fuel when in first or second gear and the economical driver will go through these gears as fast as possible and get into high as soon as he can.

"The nervous habit of giving the accelerator a kick or two while the car is standing at a light is also wasteful. I suppose that modern engines are so quiet that some drivers step on the accelerator just to make sure that they are still running. But it wastes a lot of gas when you do so because it injects a large charge of fuel.

"The engine, should be shut off when a car is going to remain stationary for some time, as when waiting at a railroad crossing for a long train to pass or when talking at the curb. Even an occasion five minutes of useless running of the engine means considerable gasoline wasted in a month. It is easy to turn the switch off and restart the engine when desired.

"Tires should be kept inflated to the designated pressure as another means of saving fuel. The softer the tire, the more road contact there is, and the more road contact, the greater the power required to move the car. Besides saving gasoline, properly inflated tires also save rubber and make steering easier and safer.

A driver should judge his pace so that when he knows he is going to have to stop at a light or stop-street, he will coast up to it gradually instead of holding his speed until the last moment and then jamming on the brakes. Modern hydraulic brakes are quick and positive, but that does not mean they should be constantly used for what amount to emergency stops."

Service Men Guests At Dinner Given By South Side Chevrolet

Mechanics of South Side Chevrolet, Inc., 3645 South Grand boulevard, were guests of Joseph E. Burger and Marvin P. Yates, owners of the firm, at a dinner at the Coronado Hotel the past week. The affair was given in recognition of performance by the firm's service department in the first four months of this year that Burger and Yates had been outstanding.

During the course of the evening it was proposed by one of the mechanics that the men in the service department organize the "Do It Right the First Time" Club in accordance with the firm's slogan. It was voted thmat this be done, and the club was formed immediately.

OWNERS REPORT Saving

up to 6 Barrels of Gas in a Year with DODGE

"Dodge certainly is a money-saver. I have 8,500 miles on my 1936 Dodge and I know I can go about 21¾ miles on a gallon of gasoline. My previous car averaged about 14 miles per gallon. This represents a tremendous saving, and over a period of a year it runs into big money."—Leo H. Lipscomb, Kansas City.

"I don't believe I have ever heard of a car as economical as my Dodge," writes Hilda Watson, New Rochelle, N. Y. "It is giving me close to 23 miles per gallon. This is considerably more than I got from my previous car. If it keeps up this way I'll be saving between 330 and 350 gallons of gas the first year."

AMAZED BY SENSATIONAL GAS ECONOMY OF AMERICA'S BIG, MONEY-SAVING CAR

THINK of it! Owners say that the way the big, new Dodge economizes on gasoline, it is saving them up to six barrels of gasoline a year!

Twenty miles . . . 21 miles . . . 22 . . . 23 . . . and even more miles to the gallon! That's what Dodge owners from coast to coast report they are getting right out on the highways—right in city traffic—in average, everyday driving!

Here's a typical example—a letter from Martin Brady, Valley Stream, L. I., New York. Read how Mr. Brady figures it out! He says: "I drive my new Dodge on the average of 15,000 miles a year. It is giving me 21 miles to the gallon. On this basis I'll use only about 714 gallons of gas this year. In my old car I used about 1,070 gallons. In other words I'll save about 356 gallons—or more than six large-size barrels of gas—a year!"

No wonder owners report that the big, new Dodge is actually costing them less to own and operate than any car, big or small, they ever owned before! No wonder more people buy Dodge cars than any other make, with the exception of the three lowest-priced cars!

DODGE
Division of Chrysler Corporation

"My small car gave me only 13 miles to the gallon of gas," says O. M. Feuerbacher of St. Louis, Missouri. "My big Dodge is giving me over 21 miles to the gallon. Considering the number of miles I drive each year, I expect to save about 350 gallons of gas with my Dodge."

"This invention showed me how I can save up to $50 in gas expense this year," says F. I. Peterson, Waukegan, Ill. "It's the gasometer, and it registers the miles per gallon a car will go. My old car was giving me about 12 or 13 miles per gallon. A friend told me about the gasometer test. I took this test and saw a Dodge go 21¼ miles per gallon. That's why I bought a Dodge."

METHODISTS ADOPT MIDDLE OF ROAD PLAN

"Peace Pact" of Conference Attacks Communism as Well as Fascism.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., May 16.—A statement of policy termed "the peace pact of Methodism" was approved by the quadrennial Methodist Episcopal Church conference today. The statement was hailed by conference leaders as a step toward healing a threatened cleavage between Liberals and Conservatives.

Drafted by a sub-committee headed by Bishop-elect G. Bromley Oxnam of Depauw University, the declaration upheld the right of the church to be heard on social and economic questions, but rebuked any attempt to encourage Communism or Fascism.

"In the presence of hunger, injustice and exploitation we insist it is not only the right of the church to speak but its bounden duty," the statement declared.

"We refuse to submit to a state of affairs wherein grasping interests seize the contributions of science and prostitute them," the recommendation said. . . . We as Methodists do declare in favor of a personality-making economy . . . to this end our ministers and laymen should face this task together.

The statement went no further toward supporting demands of the Liberal Methodist Federation for Social Service, which had asked the church to recommend substitution of a planned social economy for the profit system.

"Within the membership of Methodism there is a difference of opinion both as to causes that have produced these conditions and the proper method of solving the problems," the statement said.

"We are unalterably opposed to any method of economic change that is based upon war or that condones violence. We repudiate the entire concept of class war. The fact that class consciousness exists is a challenge to remove it, not accentuate it. . . . Believing in both democratic form and the democratic ideal, we propose to resist every form of dictatorship, whether it comes from the Left of Communism or the Right of Fascism."

A resolution was adopted that the next meeting place of the conference be in a city which would guarantee to provide hotel and restaurant accommodations where intoxicants were not sold. "Where could we find such a place? asked a delegate fro mthe floor. Kansas!" came back the answer from a dozen persons.

The resolution was adopted.

20 PENNSYLVANIA DELEGATES PLEDGED TO VOTE FOR BORAH

Those Promising to Support Primary Choice to Do So While He Has a Chance.

PHILADELPHIA, May 16.—The uninstructed Pennsylvania delegation to the Republican national convention voted today that delegates who pledged themselves to support the popular choice for President in the recent primary should stand by their pledge on the first ballot or until it became manifestly impossible that their choice could win.

The only name officially entered on the ballot at the April 28 primary was that of Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, who received more than 300,000 votes, according to unofficial totals. It was unofficially estimated at the caucus of the delegation today that approximately 20 delegates had pledged themselves to support the popular choice, a pledge not legally binding.

The names of Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, Senator A. M. Vandenberg of Michigan, former President Herbert Hoover and Frank Knox of Illinois, among others, were written in on the ballot, but they did not receive a large vote compared with that given Borah.

The delegation took action today on the motion of former Senator David A. Reed, who will be Pennsylvania's representative on the committee on platform. In making the motion, Reed said: "Many signed the pledge inadvertently without realizing its purport."

The State Committee selected State Senator G. Mason Owlett of Tioga County as the National Committeeman to succeed Reed, who said younger men should take up the burden of party management.

FIRE IN OLD TIRES SPREADS, CAUSES DAMAGE OF $9000

Employes of Rubber Concern Tried to Check Blaze; Smoke Visible for Many Blocks.

Fire of undetermined origin damaged the one-story brick building of the F. Bierman & Sons Metal and Rubber Co., 3628 North Hall street, yesterday. The blaze broke out in a pile of old automobile tires and spread quickly through the structure, fanned by a brisk breeze.

Three alarms were turned in when it appeared that the flames were getting beyond control. The contens of the building, consisting chiefly of old rubber goods, tires and inner tubes, caused a large column of smoke, which was visible for many blocks. A crowd of several hundred gathered.

Isaac Bierman, president of the company, said the fire was discovered while about 20 employes were in the building. Their efforts to check its advance were unsuccessful, he said. Fire Chief John J. O'Boyle estimated the damage to the building at $4000, and not more than $5000 to contents. The loss was covered partly by insurance.

GRAIN DEALERS HEAR ATTACK ON ROOSEVELT TARIFF INACTION

Chicago Crop Expert Asserts Hoover and Present Administration Were "Equal Failures."

By the Associated Press.

PEORIA, Ill., May 16.—B. W. Snow, Chicago crop expert, asserted Thursday night that the Hoover and Roosevelt farm planks were equal failures and compared the latter to "the small boy shouting down the rain barrel." He spoke before the Illinois Grain Dealers Association.

"That the present leadership fully understands what is involved is evidenced by the denunciation of tariff greed brilliantly voiced by President Roosevelt during his election campaign," Snow declared. "But the candidate was vocal and voluable in denunciation while the executive has remained silent and inactive venturing, no general tariff reform."

"The Secretary of Agriculture fully and clearly understands and for three and a half years by speech and by printed word has played the injustice in present tariff schedules. However, no program of definite adjustment has been undertaken. The truth is that high tariffs are not responsible for high wages. Real wages are measured by what can be secured in exchange for the products of your own labor. The artificial price for industrial goods is responsible for the fact that so-called high wages do not mean ability on the part of the laborer to consume a larger amount of the necessities or luxuries of life."

M'NARY BEATS TOWNSEND MEN BUT FACES ISSUE IN ELECTION

Oregon Democrats Select Advocate of Pension Plan in Primary Senate Race.

By the Associated Press.

PORTLAND, Ore., May 17.—Senator Charles L. McNary was renominated by Oregon Republicans yesterday easily defeating two opponents who rap as advocates of the Townsend plan.

However, he will face the Townsend issue again in the election. Both of the leading contenders for the Democratic nomination are Townsend pension champions. Willis Mahoney, Klameth Falls mayor, appeared to be the Democratic nominee. In 1151 precincts out of 1637 the total was: Mahoney 34,546; John A. Jeffrey, 29,139.

The Republican Senatorial vote in 1174 precincts: McNary 75,007; Sam Brown 21,726; Theodore G. Nelson 19,607. McNary remained in Washington during the campaign.

Oregon's 10 delegates to the Republican National convention went to Senator Borah and the slate of 10 Democrats to President Roosevelt. They were unopposed. President Roosevelt got 63,527 votes in 1151 precincts, Borah 64,567.

In the Second District, apparently all Townsend candidates, were nominated for Congress. Walter Pierce, Democratic incumbent and advocate of the plan, was leading while in the Republican race the only anti-Townsendite among four seeking the nomination, was running behind C. D. Nickelsen.

HITLER'S CHAUFFEUR DIES

Trusted Confidant of Fuehrer Since 1922.

Schreck had membership No. 53 in the Nazi party and was one of the founders of the Blackshirted Guards who are sworn to protect the life of Hitler. Hitler would trust no one else as a chauffeur, just as he relies solely on Hansl Baur, his airplane pilot.

EX-SUITOR SHOOTS WOMAN GUEST AT WEDDING BREAKFAST

Then Drives to Bridge and Tries to End Own Life With Pistol; Both in Hospital.

By the Associated Press.

BURLINGTON, Vt., May 16. — A suitor for the hand of Miss Eva Lacourse shot her, police said, at another pair's wedding breakfast here today and then attempted suicide. Tonight both were in serious condition at separate hospitals. The man was said to be Maurice Poulin, 30-year-old farmhand. Miss Eva Lacourse, 24, was a guest at the wedding of Marie Adrienne Dore and Wilfred M. Hamlin.

After the marriage ceremony the wedding party went to the home of relatives for breakfast. A guest answered the doorbell and admitted Poulin, who had quarreled with Miss Lacourse three weeks ago. The guest then returned to the dining room, leaving her alone with Poulin. Two reports which guests thought were bursting balloons were heard, followed by a scream. The wedding party found Miss Lacourse on the floor, wounded twice with a .38 caliber revolver.

As Poulin drove away in his automobile, police said he turned and waved to two guests on the front veranda, drove to his home in Essex Center, and said "goodbye" to his brother Paul. The brother told police he saw Poulin shoot himself in the chest when standing on a bridge.

REGULATION OF CHAIN STORE BUYING IS RECOMMENDED

House Committee Reports on Inquiry Into Price Concessions and Other Discriminations.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—A special House investigating committee today recommended passage of legislation to regulate chain store and other quantity buying. The committee, headed by Patman (Dem.), Texas, issued a report on its extended chain store inquiry, holding "that manufacturers make a practice of extending to certain buyers price concessions and other trade advantages not given to others who purchase the same quantities under the same conditions.

The committee recommended legislation making it unlawful for persons in interstate commerce to discriminate on prices or terms of sale "under the guise of":

"Advertising sales, promotional or other allowances when the same are not earned and offered openly to the trade generally.

"Brokerage fees and commissions.

"Volume or quantity discounts not offered to the trade generally and which are not made on the basis of differences in the cost of manufacture, sale, transportation and distribution.

WHEAT DEVELOPS STRENGTH LATE AFTER DECLINE

Confirmation of Instance of 3c Premium Over May Price Having Been Paid for Wheat Outside Chicago Cited.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 16.—Notwithstanding that deliveries on May contracts here are expected next week, wheat gradually developed strength late today and recovered from a cent a bushel setback.

Acting as a late stimulus was confirmation that in at least one instance 3 cents' premium over the May price had been paid by mills outside of Chicago for wheat shipped here from Kansas City. Transient weakness of the Chicago wheat market was associated more or less with a drop in quotations at Liverpool and with cooler weather and showers in North Dakota and Montana, where temperatures of nearly 100 degrees yesterday had been reported.

Wheat in Chicago closed irregular, ⅜ off to ⅜ up compared with yesterday's finish, May 93⅛@93⅜c, July 85⅝@85¾c, September 84⅞@85c; corn ⅛@⅞ advanced, May 63⅜@63½c, July 60¾@60⅞c, September 58⅜@58⅞c; oats at ⅜ decline to ⅛ gain, July 60⅜c, and rye ⅝@¾ higher, July 55c. In provisions the outcome was unchanged to 47 cents down.

Wheat Offerings Scarce.

Offerings of wheat became decidedly scarce on price declines. A creeping rally that soon set in carried the market in some cases to slightly above the previous close. The fact was especially noted that although Kansas City reported wheat shipments to Chicago the largest since July, 1934, totaling 504 cars this week, no tenders of wheat here on May contracts at any time since the beginning of the month have yet been announced. Helping the wheat market recover, too, was relative strength of corn and rye contrasting sharply with the dip in wheat.

All buyers and no sellers was the main reason that brokers put forward to explain action of the corn market. A substantial decrease of Chicago stocks of corn this week was indicated, and it was pointed out that since the opening of navigation the lake shipments of corn from Chicago have aggregated 1,623,000 bushels. Reports were that this corn is going into consumer use in the East, as prices for United States corn now are cheaper at New England and interior New York points than for Argentine grades.

Rye as well as corn refused to break when wheat temporarily tumbled. Official figures were cited indicating 1936 domestic rye production will total only about 35,258,000 bushels, against 57,036,000 in 1935. Winter killing caused Minnesota 53 per cent loss, North Dakota 35 per cent and South Dakota 70.

Oats shipping demand was light. Provision weakened because of unexpectedly heavy increase of Chicago stocks of lard.

Wheat futures purchases yesterday totaled 16,759,000 bushels; corn 1,627,600. Open interest in wheat was 74,459,000 bushels, and in corn 25,309,000.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE.
May 16.—The wheat market was a shade lower with corn fractionally better at the final session of week on the local board.

Liverpool wheat opened ⅛ to ¼d higher and closed ⅛@¾d net lower.

Winnipeg wheat opened ⅛@⅜c lower and early was ⅝@¾c off. The close was ⅜@½c lower.

Local wheat receipts, which were 18,000 bu, compared with 28,500 a week ago and 15,000 a year ago, included 10 cars local and 2 through. Corn receipts, which were 28,500 bu, compared with 91,500 a week ago and 16,500 a year ago, included 17 cars local and 2 through. Oats receipts, which were 44,000 bu, compared with 22,000 a week ago and 12,000 a year ago, included 14 cars local and 8 through.

In the cash grain market Saturday, soft wheat was ½c higher on sale made. Supply consisted of one car of No. 3 which sold to a mill. There was some inquiry reported. At the close No. 2 was quoted nominally $1.01@1.01½, unchanged from Friday's nominal close. Corn was unchanged to ½c higher. Offerings were light. Demand was good for choice grades, but low grades were slow. A mill and a feeder each took a car of choice, while an elevator bought low grade yellow and shippers the white. Oats were 1c lower. The demand was somewhat improved, but with buyers and sellers apart; some of the cereal was carried over. Mills, elevators and shippers showed the interest.

Stocks, With Irritating Influences Removed, Show Sporadic Bullish Form

Declaration of Leon Blum Against Devaluation of French Franc and Defeat of Frazier-Lemke Farm Debt Bill Mark Week.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 16. — Freed from certain irritating influences, which previously had made for timidity and caution, the stock market this week showed sporadic traces of bullish form.

A fairly substantial upturn in values was largely accounted for by a spirited and broad rise on Thursday. This had been preceded by a creeping advance accompanied by the lowest trading volume in about a year.

The first development of the week tending to remove long felt anxieties was the declaration of Leon Blum, speaking for the new majority in the French Government, that devaluation of the franc as a means for easing the country's financial strain, would be vigorously opposed.

Sentiment braced up on this incident and became still more cheerful on the decisive defeat of the Frazier-Lemke farm debt refinancing measure when it was submitted for vote in the House on Wednesday.

Meanwhile financial circles found no occasion for modifying generally hopeful views regarding the state of trade.

They received further evidence of a satisfactory level of activity in major industries. Steel operations showed but a minor recession from the previous week, and the trade reviews held out hopes of a well sustained production rate for some time ahead.

First Change in Money.

Output of automobiles and sales reports of individual companies indicated that demand for new cars was holding close to the best range of the spring upturn.

Electric power production established a new high record, and corporate earnings for the March quarter, appearing during the week, were, generally speaking, as favorable as those issued previously.

The chief complaint of those close to the stock market was based on the sharp contraction in trading volume. It appeared that many traders felt none too confident that the April reaction, which wiped out considerable in paper profits, had run its course. Some brokerage quarters put forth the suggestion that the increased scale of margins made effective on May 1 was at least a partial reason for the lessened interest.

The week was notable for the first change in money rates since October of last year. The charge for call funds was boosted ¼% of 1 per cent to a straight level of 1 per cent while time money was raised a similar amount to 1¼ per cent.

Bonds followed rather closely the trend of equities and in virtually all domestic groups and issues were scored. United States Governments were consistently firm. Grain markets were helped by a bullish Government estimate of the winter wheat crop. Cotton futures also improved moderately as a result of Legislature proposals to facilitate the sale of Government holdings of the staple.

Sales of stock during the week amounted to 4,613,210 shares, compared with 5,502,810 the previous week and 8,225,115 corresponding week last year. Total sales from Jan. 1 to date were 233,648,123 shares, compared with 90,527,234 a year ago and 193,846,335 two years ago.

Week-end Trade Small.

The market continued in the featherweight class at final session of the week and did little more than shadow-box.

With a dull two-hour session forecast by most brokerage commentators, many traders gave the final district a wide berth and sought excitement or diversion in other sectors.

Listlessness of the proceedings was exemplified by the fact that only 370,930 shares changed hands, or about 30,000 more than last Saturday's volume which was the smallest since June 29, last.

Fractional changes predominated from the start, although the list weakened a bit in the second hour. There was a pickup in activity near the finish when a number of stocks were given mild support.

The final decision was rather close, with the Associated Press average of 60 issues emerging with a net advance of .1 of a point at 60.8. Of the 577 stocks dealt in, 218 were up, 202 down and 157 unchanged.

A factor that kept both speculative and investment operations at a minimum was said to have been the realization that the Supreme Court convenes Monday with the possibility that a decision on the long-awaited Guffey bill may be forthcoming.

Tax Bill Developments Watched.

The corporation tax bill, now being redressed by the Senate, also received the attention of financial circles. The proposal to boost personal income tax rates, as well as those of companies, was a bit surprising to those who watch the Washington scene. The concensus was, however, that much debate will take place before the revenue program becomes law.

Earnings statements, on the whole, were favorable, but here and there figures did not come up to earlier predictions. While Anaconda showed first quarter profits of 32 cents against 27 cents in 1935, there were some who had looked for a 50-cent net. The stock, at 34, was off ¾ of a point. American Smelting also dropped 1¼ at 77¼, and U. S. Smelting was down 1 at 92.

The French financial situation, although apparently less a market influence than recently, was still sufficiently prominent to push the franc down .00⅝ of a cent to 6.59⅛ cents. Other gold currencies were lower in terms of the dollar.

Low-priced utility shares were among the best performers. The most active, with fractional gains, were Columbia Gas at 18⅞, United Corp. at 6¼, Electric Power & Light at 14⅞, American Power & Light at 10⅜, American Water Works at 21⅞, United Gas Improvement at 15⅜ and Commonwealth & Southern at 2⅛.

INDUSTRIAL ACTIVITY CONTINUES ADVANCE

Production Index of Associated Press Touches Highest Peak Since June 1930.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 16.—Industrial production as measured by the Associated Press index of industrial activity, compiled today, continued to press steadily ahead, touching the highest level this week since June, 1930.

At 89.3, the index compares with 88.4 (revised) last week and 71.0 in the same period a year ago.

Electric power output—seasonally adjusted—again made a new high, the unusually hot spell forcing the 8,000,000 electric refrigerators to use more power. Residential building pushed forward to a new top rate since 1931.

Automobile production fell back less than the normal seasonal amount, causing a bulge in the index. Cotton manufacturing improved sharply in the past two weeks, the recent Government estimate making an upward revision necessary in last week's total.

Total carloadings were up somewhat less than seasonally.

The index, with its seasonally adjusted components, based on the latest available statistics and with 1929-30 as 100, follows:

HEUSSER STARS IN RELIEF ROLE AND CARDS WIN, 7-5

—Associated Press Wirephoto.

GETS UP IN LAST STRIDE TO DEFEAT GRANVILLE

Finish So Close Judges Decide by Photograph; Schwartz Colt Is Fifth Horse to Score 'Double.'

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, May 16. — Bold Venture proved today his victory in the Kentucky Derby was no mistake.

In as dramatic a finish as the turf has ever seen, the chestnut son of St. Germans, owned by Morton L. Schwartz of New York, nosed out William Woodward's Granville in the forty-sixth running of the Preakness before a crowd of 40,000 at Pimlico.

Apparently beaten a quarter of a mile from the finish of the mile and three-sixteenths, Bold Venture stepped through the stretch like a true champion. He stuck his nose in front at the eighth pole. Then under the lash of George Woolf's whip beat back Granville's repeated challenges.

The margin of victory was so narrow, however, that the judges called for a photograph of the finish before posting the numbers.

Walter M. Jeffords' Jean Bart trailed eight lengths back in the third race but few knew it. The eyes of the multitude were on Bold Venture and Granville, out there in front, fighting a battle even more thrilling than the finish of the Derby when Bold Venture beat off the stretch bid of Brevity.

$85,800 Earnings.

The victory, carrying with it a purse of $27,325 and the Woodlawn Vase, boosted Bold Venture's total earnings to $85,800 for the year, in which he has chalked up three straight victories. Backers of the son of St. Germans, and there were legions in one of the largest crowds in Preakness history, received $5.70 for each $2 invested in a win mutuel.

He paid $3.30 to place and $2.80 to show. Granville, second choice in the wagering with the Wheatley Stable's Teufel as a running mate, returned $3.60 to place and $3.00 to show. A $2 show ticket on Jean Bart was worth $7.00.

The total mutuel handle was $783,053, as compared with the $884,219 handle in 1935. However, today's program had but seven races to eight run last year. Total betting on the Preakness was $182,965. Last season, the figure was $179,650.

Bold Venture's flying hoofs also carved out turf history as he became the fifth horse to win both the Derby and the Preakness. Sir Barton did it in 1919, Gallant Fox, sire of Granville, in 1930, Burgoo King in 1932 and Omaha, a blood brother of the Woodward colt, accomplished the feat last year.

Granville had no excuse. He broke second, moved into the lead after a quarter of a mile and was on top until Woolf, replacing the suspended Ira Hanford, drove Bold Venture to the front in a brilliant display of horsemanship.

Bold Venture was slightly crowded at the start when E. R. Bradley's Bow and Arrow broke toward the inside as he stepped in to command. Woolf quickly eased the chestnut flyer out of trouble, however, but was forced to drop back

Scratched—Giant Killer, Aneroid, Snark.

Mutuels—Bold Venture, $5.70, $3.30, $2.80; Granville (C. entry), $3.60, $3.00; Jean Bart, $7.00.

Bold Venture slightly crowded when Bow and Arrow broke toward the inside at the start, was eased out of trouble quickly to take a position on the outside going to the first turn. He weaved his way between horses to reach a forward position at the final turn, swung wide into the home stretch when engaging Granville, withstood a tenacious drive courageously after assuming a slight lead and barely lasted long enough. Granville displaced Bow and Arrow midway of the back stretch, shook off a bold effort from Transporter, continued resolutely under a strong drive, came again right at the end. Jean Bart in the thick of contention, moved up menacingly at the last turn, rallied to punishment and outstayed Transporter. Latter worked his way to the leaders with excellent speed going to the final curve, made a strong challenge nearing the home stretch but weakened in the last furlong. Hollyrood unable to find clear racing room in the opening furlong, swung to the outside when in full stride, then came stoutly when clear. Memory Book shuffled back early, went to the outside on the back stretch and also had a big gap. He Did went forwardly after overcoming bumping soon after the start, but was unable to stay when the final issue came. Bow and Arrow swerved to the inside when breaking fast, showed good speed to set the early pace but tired when put to a drive. Teufel was outrun. Grand Slam raced clear all the way but was never a factor.

Thomas Hurls Another Good Game But Browns Lose to Senators, 4 to 1

By James M. Gould.

Al Thomas the Browns' veteran right-hander who, defeating the Yankees and shutting them out to boot, is the only one of Hornsby's pitchers to win a game on this home-stay, worked another beautiful game yesterday afternoon. This time the attack that helped him against New York, was missing and, after eight innings of excellent pitching, Thomas retired. Caldwell finished up and the Senators were the winners, 4 to 1. This gave them a sweep of the two-game series.

Thomas was decidedly more sinned against than sinning. Of the four Washington runs, only two were earned. Powell scored after getting on on Lary's error in the first and De Shong counted in the fifth because Giuliani made a wild throw to first trying for a double play.

There was little diffeernce in the hitting except that Washington's was much more timely. The Senators bagged eight hits, two of which were made off Caldwell while the Browns got seven off De Shong.

Thomas not only pitched nicely but he doubled to start the third and scored on Solters' single.

A peculiarity of the game, considering recent pitching efforts, was that only one base on balls was given. That was by De Shong and he waited until the ninth to hand that one out. And, you can't laugh off the fact that, for the first time since Themistocles was a corporal in the Greek Army, neither of Hornsby's hurlers gave a single pass.

Powell Steals Home.

Following the custom of opposition teams, the Senators scored in the opening inning and rather oddly, too. Powell leading off, was safe on Lary's low throw. Powell stole second and took third after Bell captured Lewis' long drive. He remained on third as Travis rolled

Navy Oarsmen Win Adams Cup

By the Associated Press.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 16. — The short-stroking but powerful Navy varsity oarsmen, immune to cold and mental hazards created by delayed starts, became the East's Olympic standard bearers today by regaining the Adams Cup with a quarter-length victory over Pennsylvania's favored lightweights.

The fourth renewal of this regatta, dedicated to Charles Francis Adams, former Secretary of the Navy, was a quadrangular race over the Charles River's mile and three-quarters course. The Harvard varsity, beaten in two previous starts, trailed Pennsylvania by two lengths, as the midshipmen pulled over the finish line in 9 minutes, 18 seconds. The Massachusetts Institute of Technology oarsmen were two and a half lenghts behind the Crimson when they stopped rowing.

The Navy's junior-varsity crew, in another mile and three-quarters race, led all the way and finished a length and a half ahead of Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr. and his Harvard "Jay-Vee" mates, who had about a deck on the Pennsylvania junior-varsity. Tech was last in this event, as was the case in the freshman race.

Baer Pays $55,000 To Settle Former Manager's Claim

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 16. — A $55,000 settlement in the long-drawn out court fight between Max Baer and his first manager, J. Hamilton Lorimer, was announced today by Frank L. Guerena, attorney for the former heavyweight champion and his present manager, Ancil Hoffman.

Lorimer contended he held contracts for one-fourth interest in Baer's net earnings.

Washington U. Track Team Gets 50 Points, Drake Wins With 58

By the Associated Press.

TULSA, Ok., May 16.—Drake University's track and field men beat off the bid of Washington University today and strung together six firsts with a flock of seconds and thirds to retain the Missouri Valley Conference championship.

The champions' score was 58 points. Washington tallied 50. Grinnell scored 30½ points, Oklahoma A. & M., 26, Washburn six and Tulsa University 5½.

Just one record fell in the meet which was run off under perfect weather and track conditions. Rangy Lynn Philson of Drake catapulted himself into the air to a height of six feet five inches to break the high jump record of six feet four and a half inches set by Nelson of Butler back in 1932 when Butler was a member of the conference.

If Washington had had a few more like Ed Waite, blond little speedster, it might have been a different story. Waite won the 100-yard dash in 9.8s. then captured the 220 yard dash and took second in the low hurdles.

He scored 13 of Washington's points and was high point man for the meet.

In the 100 yard dash Waite stumbled and was off to a bad start but with his legs flying like a mist under him he passed the pack in the last 60 yards and led Wright, Oklahoma A. & M., to the tape by a yard.

Ronald Gallagher of Drake ran a fine race in the mile. He led almost from the start and at the finish was 100 yards ahead of the nearest competitor, a teammate, Nixon, who took second.

Bears Win Valley Golf Title

By the Associated Press.

TULSA, Ok., May 16. — Washington University's golf team won the championship of the Missouri Valley conference today with a four-man score of 1256 for the 72 holes.

Oklahoma A. and M. was three points behind the winners, scoring 1259. Tulsa's team score was 1361 while Creighton's two-man team tallied 607.

The individual low scorers: Tom Draper, Washington, 295 (1935 champion); George Stamm, Washington, 298; Bob Fraser, Creighton, 299; Jim Pate, Oklahoma A. and M., 303; Wilbur Hoke, Oklahoma A. and M., 305.

OWENS, WIND AT BACK, RUNS CENTURY IN 9.3

By the Associated Press.

MADISON, Wis., May 16.—Jesse Owens, Ohio State's Olympic hope, ran the 100-yard dash in nine and three-tenths seconds in a dual track meet between the Buckeyes and Wisconsin today to better the world mark of 0:09.4 which he tied in the Big Ten meet at Michigan last year.

Because the fleet Negro sprinter was aided by a strong wind that blew across Camp Randall Stadium, his performance will not be submitted for a new world record, but the 4000 fans who turned out to see him were none the less impressed.

Despite the fact that Coach Tom Jones' Badgers had to spot Owens 20 points in advance, Wisconsin won the meet by a score of 66 2-3 to 59 1-3.

The 220-yard dash was run around a curve and Owens won it in 21.3 seconds, just one second longer than it took him on the straightaway when he set a new world record at Michigan last year.

The Negro star was an easy victor in the 220-yard low hurdles and the broad jump, but was far short of the world mark of 0:22.6 in the hurdles event and 26 feet, 8¼ inches for the jump which he established at Michigan.

TULSA U. PLAYER WINS VALLEY TENNIS TITLE

By the Associated Press.

TULSA, Ok., May 16.—Gerin Ameron, University of Tulsa tennis ace, captured the Missouri Valley Conference singles title here today, defeating Bobby Lee of Washburn, the defending champion, 6—0, 6—2.

Warren Fenity and Bill Whittenton, Oklahoma A. & M., won the doubles title. They downed Lee and Carl Nordstrom, 6—3, 8—6.

Cameron dropped only four games in taking the title. He lost two Friday, got a default from Garden, Washington, in the semi-finals and had no trouble with Lee.

PAUL DEAN ROUTED BY BOSTON; MIZE BATTING STAR

Only Two Hits Made by Bees in Five Innings; Redbirds Pound Two Rookie Hurlers.

By J. Roy Stockton
Of the Post-Dispatch Sports Staff.

BOSTON, May 16.—Ed Heusser, the Wild Elk of the Wasatch, did a fine job of relief pitching this afternoon and the Cardinals gained an even break in their two-game series with the troublesome Boston Bees by taking the final contest, 7 to 5. The victory kept the Redbirds ahead of the spurting Giants, who remained only half a game behind the Gas House gang by defeating the Reds.

Heusser was called from the bull-pen when Paul Dean, after three excellent innings, suddenly lost his cunning. For three innings the Bees could do nothing with the younger Dean boy, hitting only two balls out of reach of the infield as nine Boston batters were retired in order.

Paul disposed of Urbanski to start the fourth, to make it 10 straight and then suddenly he fell apart. Eugene Moore doubled to right, Jordan skipped a two-bagger down the left field line, Cuccinello singled to center and Thompson singled off Stuart Martin's glove. Lee struck out, but Coscarart doubled to right and the third run of the inning crossed the plate.

Lopez then fouled out, but the

WRAY'S COLUMN

They'll Be Heard From.

THE Cardinals, despite weak hitting and some early accidents, are holding their own in the pennant race. Considering their team batting average of close to .270, this is a trifle remarkable. It is also encouraging, even though the club is below par in having some of its regulars on the hospital list.

Just now several of its hitters are not doing so well. Pepper Martin is far below his normal figure and Frisch has almost dropped out of the picture in percentage. Jimmy Collins is benched partly because of his failure to hit — but with Mize smearing the ball, Jimmy doesn't matter. Davis is not within 60 points of his hitting capabilities, while Gelbert's batting average must be sought with a microscope.

FRISCH.

If all the weak hitters come to life, there will be plenty of fireworks about the time the Gas House Gang starts its engagement on the home front.

Frisch's weak hitting and his legs should improve with warm weather; but whether the doughty leader of the Cards can stand the gaff of 154 games is problematical. Frisch and Gelbert are the only IFS discernible to those who would forecast another pennant victory for the Redbirds.

EIGHT AMERICAN WOMEN QUALIFY IN BRITISH GOLF TOURNEY

MISS NEWELL IS MEDALIST WITH 152; PATTY BERG HAS 156 SCORE

SOUTHPORT, England, May 16.—Bridget Newell, who in her non-golfing hours is the youngest Justice of the Peace in England, today served sentence on the world's greatest women golfers with a crackling 74 to lead the qualifying test in the British women's championship over the drenched and wind-swept Southport and Ainsdale courses.

It was a magnificent round under weather conditions which made the American contingent thoroughly miserable, placed the slender barrister two strokes ahead of her nearest competitors with a total of 152, and stamped her as a dangerous contender for the match-play rounds, which start Monday.

All of America's Curtis Cup golfers qualified with strokes to spare, but the distinction of giving Miss Newell her closest run at the end of a harrowing day rested with three other Britons, Wanda Morgan, the defending champion; Mrs. J. B. Walker and Jessie Anderson, the latter being the same little girl from Perth, Scotland, whose long putt on the final green tied the recent Curtis Cup matches. These three had a total of 154, Miss Morgan shooting a 76 today and the other two 77s.

Coincidence.

By an interesting coincidence, Miss Newell, like Mrs. Frank Goldthwaite, Fort Worth, Tex., who led the field at the end of the first day, was left off the Curtis Cup team due to her poor showing during practice at Gleneagles. Miss Newell's showing climaxed the pair's rebuttal judgment of the rival captains, though Mrs. Goldthwaite could do only an 81 in today's arctic weather to tie with Patty Berg for fifth place with a total of 156.

British critics who followed Mrs. Cheney were greatly impressed by her game. She missed a few putts, but otherwise played perfect golf. They are touting her as the tournament dark-horse along with little Patty, who seems to have lost her nervousness.

Charlotte Glutting, South Orange, N. J., who was favored somewhat by better weather, also returned a 77, but the cutting wind troubled Mrs. O. S. Hill, Kansas City, Mrs. Maureen Orcutt Crews, Coral Gables, Fla., and Marion Miley, Lexington, Ky., all of whom soared to 80 or over. Mrs. Crews had an even 80, Mrs. Hill, 82, and Miss Miley, 86. Despite this, however, they, like all the British players of note, finished well inside the qualifying limit of 174.

Mrs. Vare vs. Miss Glutting.

But if the Americans could look back on the qualifying rounds with satisfaction, they certainly could not look forward to Monday's single round without trepidation, for the luck of the draw threw Mrs. Vare against Charlotte Glutting in the first round.

The British forces also suffered a blow, Mrs. Walker and Miss Anderson, who tied for second in the qualifier, meeting each other in the first round.

Mrs. Cheney also drew stiff opening competition in Mrs. Helen Holm, while Mrs. Hill must tackle Molly Gourlay, former English champion.

The other Americans were given what might carelessly be called "breathers," Mrs. Crews meeting Mrs. Grant White; Mrs. Goldthwaite drawing Mrs. Have Newton, Patty Berg facing Marjorie Barron, and Marion Miley opposing Doria Park.

One round will be played Monday, two Tuesday, two Wednesday, all at 18 holes, and the 36-hole final will be on Thursday.

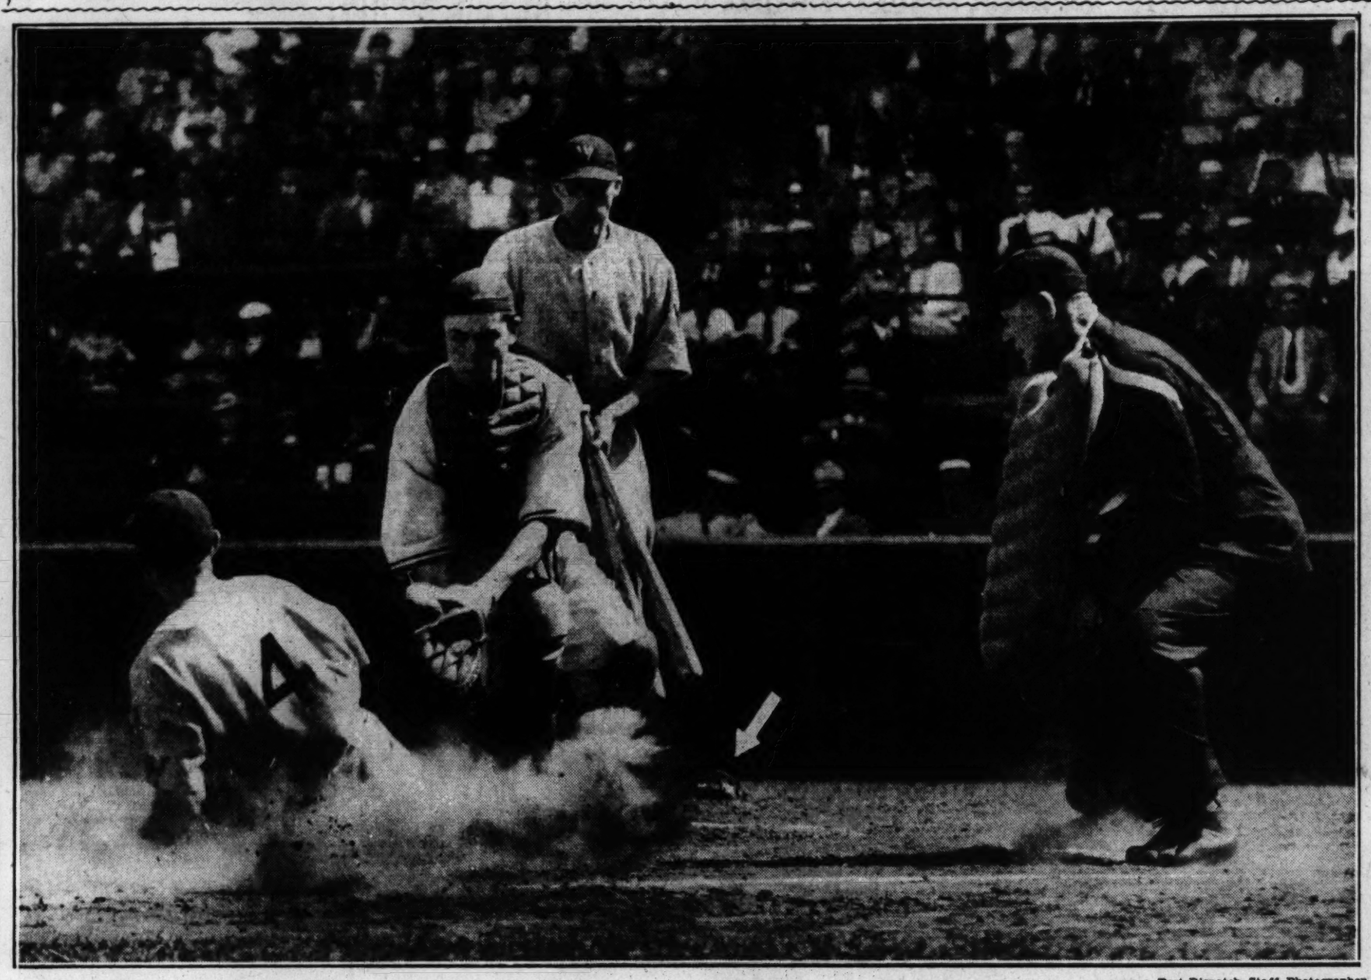
The Catcher Looks for His Mask and Up Pops a Runner



Catcher Giuliani threw off his mask for a possible play at the plate in the first inning of the Brow ns' game at Sportsman's Park yesterday afternoon and when he went to retrieve his equipment, Powe l, on third, stole home for the first Washington run. Arr ow indicates the mask. The Washington player waiting to bat is Jonathan Stone and the umpire is John ston.

to Bottomley but when Giuliani, who had thrown off his mask for a possible play at the plate on Travis' ball, went several feet from the plate to pick it up, he left the plate unguarded and Powell stole home.

For the next three innings, Thomas held the Senators runless and almost hitless, while, in the third, the Browns tied it up. Thomas was in this, too, for he opened with a double and after the next two men died, scored on Solters' hot single through Travis.

The Senators were entitled to a run in the fifth, but they got two in this wise: With one out, Kuhel singled to right. Millies hit to left and Solters played it loosely, the hit going for a two-bagger and scoring Kuhel from first. Powell then was hit, to fill the bases, but on Lewis' grounder to Bottomley, Millies was forced at the plate. Giuliani tried for a double play at first and threw the ball past Bottomley, and De Shong counted.

In both the fifth and sixth innings, the Browns got their first man on, but, in each case, the following batters were simple victims to De Shong's cunning.

Solters Slips and Senator Scores.

Washington added one in the seventh. Kuhel singled. Millies flied out and De Shong sacrificed. Hill, who had replaced Powell, hit to left, an ordinary fly ball, but Solters slipped as he started, the ball fell safe and Kuhel crossed over. Again, in the last half of the seventh, the first Brownie up—West—singled as a starter, but, after Carey flied out, Coleman, batting for Giuliani, rolled more or less gracefully into a double play.

After doing more than his share, Thomas retired for a pinch hitter in the eighth, said pinch hitter being Pepper, who accepted a third strike. Maybe, at that, such action was an advance over Coleman, who (as pincher) retired two with one swing of his bat.

ST. LOUISAN WINS IN OFFICERS' PISTOL SHOOT

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 16.—Lieutenant G. E. Boefer of St. Louis, scoring 282 to lead his nearest foe by four points, today won first place in the fourth annual pistol meet of the Missouri Reserve Officers' Association here. Lieut. Robert W. Towne, also St. Louis, was second with a score of 278.

Others placing in the "high ten" Capt. Richard Parnell, Kansas City, 273; Major Allen Ramey, Kansas City, 272; Cap. Russell Meier, St. Louis, 263; Lieut. C. R. Bennett, Kansas City, 259; Capt. O. K. Albright, St. Louis, 248; Lieut. Armand L. Helm, Joplin, 246; Lieut. Harold Ferrill, Bolivar, 235, and Major Louis H. Luth, St. Louis, 234.

AUSTRIA LEADS POLAND IN DAVIS CUP MATCH

VIENNA, May 16.—Austria took a 2-1 lead over Poland in the second-round European zone Davis Cup encounter today when Metaxa and Bawarowski defeated the Polish team of Hebda and Tarlovski, 6—1, 6—2, 6—4. They divided the opening singles matches yesterday, Hebda defeating Metaxa, 6—4, 7—5, 6—4 and Bawarowski beating Tlocanski, 6—4, 6—3, 6—4.

BROWNIE NOTES

THE quite surprising Philadelphia Athletics open a three-game set today. Most observers were fearful, before the season began that Connie Mack's team would fall out of the league but they have won a fair share of their games. Hornsby was undecided who would open against the Philadelphians. It probably will be Hogsett. Ross, a right-handed rookie, is due for the Mackmen.

Giuliani caught Thomas in Al's fine game against the Yankees so the young Italian was the receiver in yesterday's Washington final.

In six out of the eight games preceding yesterday's affair, the opposition had scored in the first inning. Yesterday, it wasn't Thomas' fault that the Senators managed a first-frame tally.

Just 4210 including ladies and boys saw the game it was officially announced. Strangely enough, despite the poor showing of the Browns, there haven't been the slightest disposition on the part of the fans to ride them. Instead, everybody cheers at every possible chance.

Clift's first-inning two-bagger was his fifth double in as many days. Neither Solters nor Bottomley could score him.

The Browns got their second man on in the first and their first man on in the second. They were still on when the two innings were completed.

This Thomas is quite a person. Up first in the third, he calmly slapped a long double to left center, which, for a faster baseball traveler, would have been an easy triple. However, he scored anyway.

Thomas didn't allow a second hit until the fifth with one down.

In the fifth, Powell, the Washington centerfielder, was hit by a pitched ball. The ball glanced off his arm and hit him in the jaw. He went down but later got up and wanted to resume. Not badly hurt, he was led off the field, Hill replacing him as a base-runner and in the field.

Towns Again Runs High Hurdles in Record Time

By the Associated Press.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 16.

LOUISIANA STATE UNIVERSITY won its fourth consecutive Southeastern Conference track and field championship today as Forest (Spec) Towns, University of Georgia junior, turned in another sensational performance in the high hurdles.

Towns ran the 120-yard high hurdles in the world record-breaking time of 14.1 seconds, the same figure he made in yesterday's trial heats when he bettered the accepted mark of 14.2 set by Percy Beard, former Auburn star, in 1931.

Conference officials said Towns' mark, made with a slight breeze blowing in his face, would be certified immediately to the National A. A. U.

Louisiana State, which has won every track championship since the Southeastern Conference was organized, almost doubled the score of the second place team. The Baton Rouge Tigers won only two first places but accounted for numerous seconds and thirds to score 60½ points.

Scores of other teams in order were: Kentucky 22; Tennessee and Georgia Tech 21 each; Auburn 17; Vanderbilt 7; Tulane and Mississippi State 5 each, and Florida 3.

Perry, Austin Lose in Singles Of Team Match

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, May 16. — England's Davis Cup tennis aces, Fred Perry and H. W. (Bunny) Austin, went down to unexpected defeat today as France gained a 7-3 lead at the end of the first day's play in the annual two-day Franco-British team matches.

Perry, ranked at the top of world tennis players for two years, bowed to Christian Boussus, top-ranking Frenchman, 6—4, 6—8, 6—2. Austin, a key figure in Britain's forthcoming defense of the Davis Cup, was beaten in straight sets by Bernard Destremeau, 19-year-old French youngster, 8—6, 6—2.

All told France won six of the eight singles encounters and broke even in two doubles matches.

PRINCIPIA TENNIS TEAM BEATS WESTERN

Principia defeated Western Military Academy, four matches to one, in a tennis meet at Alton yesterday afternoon. Holt and Storms won singles matches and paired to win one of the doubles.

The summaries:

SINGLES.

Finn, Western, defeated Simon, Principia, 6—3, 6—3. Holt, Principia, defeated Ellis, Western, 6—3, 6—3. Storms, Principia, defeated Young, Western, 6—3, 2—6, 4—6.

DOUBLES.

Simon and Holt defeated Winkenmeyer and Ellis, Western, 6—0, 6—1; Andrews and Appel, Principia, defeated Young and Finn, Western, 6—1, 6—2.

Heusser Stars in Relief Role and Cards Win, 7 to 5

Bees resumed the attack in the fifth and after Berger, batting for Blanche, had singled, Urbanski had singled and Gene Moore doubled, Heusser was called to the rescue. Jordan's fly scored Urbanski with the second run of the inning to make the score 7 to 5, Cardinals, but Heusser then put on the brakes and during the remainder of the game there were only two Boston hits, a single by Thompson before the fifth was ended and a pop single by Urbanski in the ninth, a fly that Stuart or Pepper Martin could have caught if each had not thought the other was going to take it.

Heusser was rewarded for his excellent work by being credited with the decision, his first victory of the year. He had a lead when he went to the hill, but Paul, the starting pitcher, had not served through the necessary five innings and so all he had to show for his labors was the benefits of the exercise in the brisk October atmosphere that Boston so frequently serves with its May baseball.

Two Boston Rookies Pounded.

A vicious attack against two recruit pitchers gave the Cardinals the lead that was enough to win for Heusser. John Lanning, a young right-hander from Knoxville, started and was pounded for five hits and four runs in two innings, and Bill McKechnie then trotted out Al Blanche, a Somerville boy. Al lasted three innings, during which the Gas House Gang accumulated five more hits and three runs.

When it was too late to do any good, Ben Cantwell carried his allegedly sore arm to the pitching hill and blanked the Redbirds through the final four innings. He mixed a knuckle ball with a curve and fast ball and had the Cardinals badly off stride, yielding only two singles and pitching out of the only two dangerous spots in which he found himself.

With one out in the first inning, Stuart Martin used his speed to beat out a grounder to the rather surprised Tony Cuccinello. Pepper Martin singled to center, sending Stuart to third, and the Wild Horse then quickly stole second. Medwick was passed intentionally, filling the bases, and Johnny Mize then popped a double just out of Coscarart's reach, scoring the Martin boys. That was all, as Davis took a called third strike and a $5 penalty and Gelbert flied out.

Gets One Hit, Three Runs.

Blackie Caldwell, Alabama University outfielder, got only one hit in a recent baseball game but scored three runs.

RED BIRD NOTES

DIZZY DEAN, whose four-game winning streak was broken by the Dodgers, will try for No. 5 tomorrow when he faces the Phillies in the first game of a series of three.

Tarzan Parmelee didn't seem to have a thing in the opener with the Bees, but Catcher Davis said today that Parmelee had more stuff than usual. The Boston club always has pounded Parmelee.

The final with the Bees attracted about 6000 customers.

It was a cold, windy day. The temperature this morning was 34 and it was about 45 at game time.

Mize hit a pop double to left in the first inning, tripled to right center in the third and doubled against the right field wall in the fifth for his fourth extra base hit of the series. Cantwell walked Johnny in the seventh.

After Durocher's infield hit in the eighth, Leo's third straight safety, Heusser bunted. Coscarart dropped the ball intentionally, trying for a trick double play, but he had difficulty picking it up and then threw wild to second. It did no harm, however, as after Terry Moore sacrificed, Stuart Martin sent a short fly to Lee and Pepper Martin grounded to Jordan.

A. A. to Call Pitch on Batter Stepping Back After Wind-Up

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., May 16.—George M. Trautman, president of the American Association, wasn't fooling when he adopted the one word "hustle" as the loop's slogan for the 1936 campaign.

He proved it today when he came up with an innovation which he believed would cut valuable minutes off the time for a nine-inning game.

"One of the things which tends to delay the game," he said, "is the habit of stepping out of the box just as the pitcher is starting his windup.

"In some instances it has developed into more or less of a game, with the batter stepping out, and then the pitcher stepping off the rubber. But, generally speaking, the hitter is the one who does most of the delaying."

And so, in instructions to his umpires today, the loop prexy ordered:

"In the future when the batter steps out of the box after the pitcher has started his wind-up, time shall not be called and the delivery shall be declared either a ball or strike as the pitch warrants."

Missouri won this morning's game, 10 to 6.

The victory gave Kansas State two out of three games in the series here, but left the two teams even-up on the season. Kansas State won yesterday but Missouri took a game at Manhattan earlier this week.

Gray's high throw to home plate let in the winning Wildcat tally on a fly to right field by Norton, Kansas State. The tying run went across one play earlier when a ground ball went through Henderson, Missouri first baseman.

University City's easy victory in the senior division and Webster Groves' triumph in the junior division of the ninth annual St. Louis District track and field meet were overshadowed by a number of "duels" yesterday at University City's field. The Indians scored 44½ points in the senior division to second-place Webster's 24, while Webster had 32 points in the junior to 29 for Christian Brothers High, and 25 for University City.

Eberle Beats Donnell.

The running events started with the 120-yard high hurdles. John Donnell, Webster, had won the state high hurdles in 15.3 seconds with Charles Eberle, St. Louis University High, second, last week, but Eberle reversed the order of finish yesterday when Donnell failed to equal his state performance. Eberle won in 15.5 seconds for a new record.

One senior record was bettered and another tied in the battle between Francis "Bud" Harvey, Clayton's star, and Ken Leutwiler, University City ace. Their first meeting came in the 200-yard low hurdles. Harvey won that event in 23.3 seconds, tying the mark set by Walter St. Denis, Roosevelt, last year.

They next met in the broad jump. Harvey had qualified by inches in that event, while Leutwiler had led in the preliminaries. But in the final, Harvey got off a good jump of 22 feet ½ inch and led for first place—until Leutwiler made his last jump.

On that last leap, Leutwiler covered 22 feet 6½ inches for the best jump he ever made and a new district record to take the place of the 22 feet 2¾ inches mark of Martin, University City, set in 1932.

Four and One-Half Hour Duel.

The other senior duel was a record in two ways, for it lasted for four and one-half hours. It was the senior pole vault, with Walter Wagoner, Webster Groves, and Jimmy Cole, Maplewood, outlasting the other four conestants. WRAY'S COLUMN

Commenting on the situation a Detroit editorial writer discussed the situation and, after reading his conclusion, we are convinced the guy knows something. He argued:

"The difficulty is that the act, as the girls describe it, seems to cover all wrestling. A pair of overstuffed people, slapping each other in a spirit of levity, might mean anybody in the game.

"As to ignorance of the dodges known to the practiced wrestler, it is notorious that Mr. O'Mahony, though a champion, gave no sign of familiarity with them on at least one occasion. It would seem that if the girls were not wrestling, then neither are many wrestlers. It is a weakness of the law that while it cracks down on the artist who wrestles without a license, it neglects the behemoth who, having bought a license, proceeds not to wrestle."

It Has Happened.

"WHAT would happen if a major league baseball club failed for a year or two to attract attendances large enough for visiting clubs to pay expenses?" a fan inquires. "Would the other clubs of the league continue to take it?"

That situation has been approximated several times in the history of major league baseball. In earlier days conditions were more flexible. Several things could and did happen.

On one occasion the Cleveland club was not interesting fans, so it spent the season on the road as a "traveling club."

Before territorial rights became so definitely established, leagues shifted franchises to other cities.

On other occasions reorganizations of ownership have brought about the desired improvement.

Removal of franchises today is difficult because any club already established in other major cities of the country will oppose the entry of a competitor into its territory.

Soon or late all cities snap out of a losing complex. The principal reason for lack of patronage is lack of a winning team. Remedy that and the fans will flock back.

That the leagues are patient with unfortunate members is evident from the case of Connie Mack, who, after deliberately dismantling his team, remained eight years in last place.

It is concsivable that if the Browns fail to make progress under their present setup, the other club owners will move to do something about it. The most reasonable procedure would be to change the nature of the present club ownership.

Sport of the People.

THE dogs are gaining on the horses, in England. In the city of London, recently, 12 dog racing meetings were held in one day. Racing began in the morning and ended late in the evening. Literally hundreds of thousands attended.

Horse racing continues to prosper, but the development of dog racing has overtaken and passed the horse race promotions in popular interest.

Because of lower admission price, greater accessibility and greater fraquency of races the dogs, day by day, continue to outdo the horses in attracting crowds, in England. Greyhound racing has become a pastime of the people.

In a decade the number of registered racing dogs has increased from 2400 to 55,000, with a total value of $27,000,000, estimated.

The year's biggest stake, the greyhound Derby, still is a long, long way from the Epsom Derby in money value or popular appeal. It pays the winner about $10,000.

In this country greyhound racing has little vogue except in Florida, Massachusetts and few isolated spots. As a whole the states have declined to place greyhound racing on a mutuel betting parity with the thoroughbreds.

Officials fear that, with the lower cost of installation, dog tracks will be springing up like mushrooms and drain communities of all surplus.

Watch Your Step, Tony.

TONY CANZONERI proved himself to be a great little fighter, in his recent battle with Jimmy McLarnin, a welterweight. But there's trouble waiting for him just around the corner in the lightweight division.

The trouble is named Pedro Montanez, mentioned a couple of months ago as an up and coming lightweight, most of whose reputation was built up in Europe.

His campaign in this country has netted 15 victories including some powerful opponents. The tough Leonard Del Genio was an easy victim last Friday night to register his fifteenth consecutive win—and that's something for the champion to take note of.

Montanez is a Puerto Rican of dusky visage and is being looked after in this country by Jimmy Bronson, a fine judge of fighting men and a regular fellow, in a world where managers are not always too well regarded.

Montanez wanted a match with Canzoneri but was told to go through the wringer. That is, the New York Commission wanted him to fight his way through an elimination tournament and he declined to do this, contending that he already had established his quality.

Since that time it has been thumbs down on Montanez, as far as a title contest is concerned, and the coveted shot at the ageing Canzoneri was awarded to Lou Ambers, whom Canzoneri once defeated.

If Canzoneri defeats Ambers, there will be little excuse for refusing Montanez a match, who is a very fine boxer and a good hitter—very dangerous for the slowing champion.

Back to the Broadcast.

APPARENTLY the big time boxing promoter, Mike Jacobs, is convinced that the Louis-Schmeling attendance will attain close to capacity. We base this thought on the announcement, made recently in a New York paper, that the fight will be broadcast.

Concordia Blanks Kirksville, 8-0

Behind the steady five-hit pitching of Johnny Rook, the Concordia Seminary baseball team blanked the Kirksville Osteopaths, 8 to 0, in a one-sided contest played yesterday afternoon on the winners' diamond.

Wilbert Koenig, hard-hitting Concordia outfielder, led the Preacher attack with four hits out of four trips to the plate, but was hard pressed for honors by Elmer Callies with three out of four. The Kirksville boys did not get a man to third base until the ninth, when with two men out they put men on second and third only to have Rook strike out Lomax to end the game.

The local collegians began their scoring in the first inning on Margraf's walk and Koenig's double to right. They continued on an error, advanced to third on Koenig's second single. Both runners then crossed the plate on Elmer Muhly's long home run into left filed.

Held scoreless in the fourth, Concordia counted again in the fifth on Callies' two-bagger and Koenig's ace to right. In the seventh the Preachers put on another three-run rally to end the day's fireworks. Rook was safe on Seibert's error, Callies moved him up with a single and Margraf walked. Koenig's fourth straight blow then scored two runs, and Muhly's double drove in Koenig.

Bradbury Wins Skeet Shoot

Shooting with uncanny accuracy that enabled him to score 98 points out of a possible 100, William H. Bradbury, Creve Coeur titleholder, captured the Class A laurels in the first day's shoot of the annual Missouri Eastern Zone skeet tournament, being held at the grounds of the St. Louis Skeet and Gun Club on Highway 66. The shooting event will be concluded today with championships being decided in the five-man team, zone and professional events.

Bradbury, who was nosed out for the top honors in last year's events, scored 24's on his first two trips around the eight designated shooting positions and then shot two perfect 25's in the final rounds. W. L. Harrison of Hannibal likewise gave a fine demonstration of keen ability with the gun as he took second place with a talley of 97. C. J. Dando of Springfield was third with a 96.

The Missouri State women's champion, Mrs. Joseph L. Werner of the Deer Creek Gun Club, did not display the same marksmanship as she did in Friday's practice session but managed, however to take the eastern zone's women's singles title, shooting a 69. Mrs. Werner had scores of 16, 19, 15 and 19. Mrs. Virgil A. Lewis was runnerup with a 56, while Mrs. H. Siebens was third with a 52.

H. Siebens and S. Weber gathered 190 points between them to win the two-man team title in yesterday's shoot.

Yesterday's scores will be added to those of today's in order to determine the zone champion.

IN the spring a young man's fancy
Lightly turns to pennant hopes;

ZIVIC BROTHERS DUE HERE TODAY FOR BOUTS FRIDAY

JACK KEARNS IS EXPECTED TO COME IN WITH SINGER TUESDAY

Billy Stevens, Assistant Manager, Explains Izzy's Defeats Came When He Was Starting Career.

By W. J. McGoogan.

Beginning today, boxers who are scheduled to appear on Friday's card a the Auditorium are expected to arrive each day through Thursday, with the first arrivals the Zivic brothers, Eddie and Fritzie, from Pittsburgh. Emilio Martinez is due from Denver tomorrow, Izzy Singer from Chicago Tuesday, Billy Ketchell from Philadelphia Wednesday, and Billy Celebron from Rockford, Ill., Thursday.

All the boxers will put the finishing touches to their training at the Business Men's Gymnasium, Sixth and Pine streets, with Celebron working under the direction of his manager, Sammy Mandell, former world's lightweight champion.

Stevens has written a long letter complaining about publicity given to Izzy's defeats. Billy is a statistician and he declares that Singer has won some fights, too.

"Was Pushed Too Fast."

He asserts that Singer, a product of the City College of New York, won the Metropolitan amateur championships in the light heavyweight and heavyweight divisions in one year and the resulting ballyhoo was so great that he was tossed into the ring at the outset of his professional career with men like Steve Dudas, Eddie Mader, Al Lipps and John Henry Lewis all of whom defeated him.

They were too much for the youngster and after the furore over his amateur record died down, he fought matches with men of more nearly equal experience and did much better,

He entered the heavyweight tournament in Chicago and defeated Lou Zack of Omaha, then dropped a close decision to Billy Knox in a bout which so close that Singer was permitted to stay in the tournament. He then beat Max Zona and defeated Al Gatchell, Cleveland, a victor, in a recent match here.

Immediately following that contest he knocked out Ed Wills of Chicago and two days later defeated Steve Roberts, completing a string of three victories in six days. Thus Singer made up for some of his past defeats.

Two Bouts With Lewis.

The knockout at the hands of John Henry Lewis with which he was charged in 1935, Stevens declares, was due to a broken arm which Singer suffered in the match but after he was out of the ring for six months, and following his matches in the tournament, he took on Lewis again and lasted ten rounds with him; although he finished much the worse for wear.

Singer is to box Martinez here in a 10-round engagement.

Ketchell is matched with Allen Matthews for 10 rounds and he is regarded as a tough puncher and a boxer who can take it. Matthews has been knocking at the door for some time and his two recent victories over Martinez prove he is ready. A triumph over Ketchell should put him in line for some more profitable bouts.

A Cleveland newspaper carries a report that Jimmy Dunn, manager of Eddie Simms, has moved to New York, taking Eddie and Frank Simms, Al Gatchell and Harold Dettman with him. Dunn had made his headquarters in Cleveland for 24 years. He handled Eddie Simms in his recent match with Otis Thomas here, which Eddie lost.

Joe Ghnouly will be boxing for his place in the sun when he takes on Eddie Zivic, for Joe can't stand any more losses after his defeats at the hands of Jimmy Garrison and Joe Alcanter in Kansas City.

Billy Beahuld is working steadily at the gymnasium, to keep fit for any bout which may come his way. Billy has nothing definite in mind but his manager, Johnny Connolly, thinks a match between Beauhuld and Alcanter would prove attractive in Kansas City.

Jeff Dickson, European sports promoter, is reported to have a unique manner of signing main event fights. Each boxer agrees to a contract calling for 17½ per cent, with three per cent to be deducted from the loser's share and added to the winner's cut, which means that the victor gets 20½ per cent and the loser 14½, thus providing an incentive for the boys to do their best.

Burkes Play Champions.

The Burkes, undefeated in the University City Muny League, will meet last year's champions—Hellrung & Grimms—today at 2:30 o'clock in Heman Park, while the Mount Auburn Crystals tangle with the Kroger Kembas.

Check Your Tackle Box.

WITH the advent of the 1936 open season on game fish only two weeks in the offing a veteran fisherman offers the suggestion that anglers, particularly fly fishermen, make a pre-season trip for perch or other fish now in season to show themselves the weak points of their tackle and other outdoor equipment.

A complete checkup, such as only a trip on stream or lake can furnish, may make early season game fishing more successful, it was pointed out.

"When you go out on the stream or lake and actually get down to the serious business of fishing, then you'll soon find the weak places in your tackle and soon determine what equipment needs replacing," the Old Timer said. "If you can't make a pre-season trip then go over all your tackle carefully. A mere vizual examination won't do.

May Let That Big One Escape.

"A line that looks all right in the tackle box or on the reel may have deteriorated so badly during the winter that it is unsafe to use.

"It's an awful dissapointment too, to be out in the country on a stream or lake with the bass rising to lure you on and then find your line unfit for use, an agate broken, a ratchet on your reel needing repair, flies rusted, points dull or even the feathers on the flies moth-eaten.

"Best assurance of a successful trip after bass and other game fish when the season opens is to go prepared—rod, reel and line and lures in good shape. Then, all things being equal, with fishing good you're bound to get your share of the sport.

"If there is any doubt about any of your tackle after testing it, discard it at once and replace it with new stuff."

Anyone going astream now, the State Game and Fish Department warns, must have a fishing license if he is fishing outside the county of his residence.

Fishing Facts to Remember.

In "facts about the game fishing season," the State Conservation Department suggests the following be pasted in the tackle boxes:

The 1936 season will open at sunup on Saturday, May 30, on which day all fish in Missouri waters are eligible to the creel. The season on channel catfish, however, closes on June 1 and remains closed until July 15.

Creel and length limits:

	Daily limit.	Minimum length.
Bass	10	8 inches
Crappie	15	6 inches
Jack salmon	5	12 inches
Goggle-eye	20	5 inches
White perch	15	6 inches
Channel catfish	15	12 inches
Trout—10 (or 10 lbs.)		8 inches

Fishing licenses for 1936 remain the same as for years past, including State resident fishing, $1; non-resident fishing, $3; non-resident trip license good for 15 days, $1.

Outdoor Notes.

Yellow "wooley worms" proved a good lure at Bennett Spring State Park, recently, being the bait that landed one four-pound rainbow—game wardens made 47 arrests and obtained 43 convictions during the last month—Dr. G. B. Herndon, chief of hatcheries, last week supervised the rescue of two truck loads of crappie in the Osage River below Bagnell dam—the squirrel season opens June 1.

Better Fishing Outlook

Reports from wardens and others acquainted with general lake and stream conditions in the State are all very encouraging and indicate an improved game fish season opening on Memorial day. Stream surveys during the clear water of the past winter showed a material increase in the fish population of most all of the major lakes and streams of Missouri. This was particularly true of the bass species.

Due to unfavorable weather and water conditions of 1934 and 1935 fish catches were below normal for those years. Surveys of the Lake of the Ozarks point to the best fishing season since the second year after the construction of that large body of water. Crappie fishing was good before the closing of the season at Lake Taneycomo and bluegill fishing has been ideal since that time.

In most streams of the State there have been no abnormal water fluctuations to prevent or retard normal fish spawning and hatching. In fact, it would seem that Nature is doing everything to assist in making 1936 the best in many, many years.

That Conservation Program.

The proposed amendment to the State Constitution creating a permanent wildlife commission was discussed by E. Sydney Stephens, president of the Restoration and Conservation Federation of Missouri, in a statement issued yesterday at Columbia.

"When you consider that Maine places the annual returns from its wildlife attractions at $86,000,000 a year and that Missouri has the greatest possibilities for the development of wildlife of any State in the Union, the size of the bargain is apparent," he said. "The annual outdoor bill in America is estimated at $650,000,000."

All the money for the activities of the permanent commission, he said, will be derived from the sale of hunting and fishing licenses, fromgame farm permits, trapping licenses and from the transactions of the commission. It is stipulated in the amendment that these fees shall be used for no other purpose.

Only a small part of the revenue from hunting and fishing licenses is now used in restoration and conservation. Much of it goes for things totally unrelated to conservation. This, Mr. Stephens added, is the fault of the system under which the present State Game and Fish Department is obliged to function.

The object of the proposed amendment is to establish a more modern system for wildlife restoration and conservation in Missouri, similar to the systems operating so successfully in Pennsylvania and other states.

Stephens announced that the State Carden Club Federation had recently been added to the list of organizations indorsing the amendment.

Ever Try Mayfly Fishing?

"The mayfly has put in its appearance on Nova Scotia lakes and anglers are preparing for some real fun," according to a Nova Scotia news agency. "The hatch is not heavy as yet, but some fine catches of trout have been made already.

"Mayfly fishing is a sport that no trout fisherman should miss. The Nova Scotia mayfly is not the same insect as the one found in the United States. It is a smaller fly and darker in color. When the water becomes sufficiently warm for the nymphs to hatch, the fun begins. The flies swarm in clouds, clinging to rocks and bushes. When the wind comes up and blows them out on to the water the trout go wild. The water really boils.

"Under the circumstances, you might think that fish could be caught on any kind of fly that looked like the original, but that isn't the case. It can be done, but the fly must be beautifully tied and as near an exact imitation of the real thing as is possible. The leader should be from 10 to 14 feet in length and of the finest gut.

"When the trout takes the fly the strike must be made with the utmost gentleness. A harsh strike will result badly in most cases. The fish run from a half pound to three and a half pounds, which gives an idea of how carefully they must be handled.

ROWING SEASON GETS UNDER WAY TODAY

The local rowing season will get under way today when the Western and St. Louis rowing clubs will meet in a combined regatta, starting at 2 o'clock.

Dr. George Rice, 80-year-old tennis star of Triple A, defeated Gus Keis yesterday in the feature match of the opening round of Triple A's annual handicap tournament, in which the "dubs" and the "duffers" are given excellent opportunities of upsetting the recognized leaders in district tennis. Dr. Rice, rated at a handicap of 8 and Kreis with a handicap of 5, found keeping the score correct difficult at times, but in the end, the doctor had a 6-4, 6-3 verdict to his credit.

Richard Tindall, district junior champion, had little difficulty with George Bishop winning 6-1, 6-2. Bishop soon discovered that his advantage of one point in every other game was not sufficient to conquer the young champion. In another tussel between Ray Schenk and O. J. Thoelke, handicapped at 6 and 5, respectively, the former won a 6-2, 6-2 victory.

That stars sometimes have a hard time of it, even when out of their class, was shown when Gustave H. Boehmer Jr., former city champion, barely nosed out Dr. S. G. Walters in an earlier match, 8-6, 10-8. In the only other tilt, Oscar Reid used a harder service and a more extensive vocabulary to great advantage as he eked out a 6-4, 6-4 conquest over Gilbert Harris. Reid was handicapped at 2 and Harris at 6 so that Reid was down 15-love in one game and 30-love in the next.

The handicap tourney is an unique event in tennis circles. According to Triple A's method of scoring, club players are ranked from 1 to 8, according to their recognized ability. The advantage that one player gives to another is determined by the difference in their respective rankings. In this manner, a No. 1 man will give a No. 2 man one point every ohter game, a No. 3 contestant one point every game, a No. 4 man one point one game and two points the next, etc. When a star rated as No. 1 opposes a No. 8 dub, the star will give the dub three points each game while he himself must start at minus 15.

119 M. P. H. IS FASTEST TIME IN INDIANAPOLIS RACE TRIALS

By the Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 16.—Rex Mays, heavy-footed youngster from California, again proved his mastery over the Indianapolis motor speedway today, at least for 25 miles, by winning the pole position for the consecutive time for the 500-mile automobile race to be run May 30.

His average was 119.644 miles per hour.

The boy from the west coast, whom master drivers or other days say is the best of the present racers on the local track, was not quite as fast as a year ago, the scanty gasoline allowance causing him to hold down his powerful four-cylinder speedster. Only 2.5 gallons of gasoline were allowed for the trials. He averaged 120.736 miles per hour a year ago.

Babe Stapp, of Los Angeles, a veteran in 500-mile racing, was the next fastest driver of the day. He urged his four-cylinder front drive car around the two and a half mile brick and asphalt course at 118.945 miles per hour.

KING SAXON AND SATION OUT OF MONEY; PLACE TO WHOPPER

Singing Wood Third—Victor Finds Racing Room and Triumphs With Stretch Drive to Pay 10 to 1.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 16.—A distinct outsider, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Good Harvest, outfooted a record band of sprinters including George D. Widener's Sation and C. V. (Pat) Knebelkamp's King Saxon third running of the Metropolitan Handicap at Belmont Park.

Lucky enough to find racing room when needed, the four-year-old gelding son of Epinard-Blossom unleashed a dazzling sprint in the stretch and won by three lengths going away, from Hal Price Headley's Whopper, which led Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Singing Wood, in turn, by a length.

Sation and King Saxon, picked by most experts to furnish all the fireworks, never figured and finished in sixth and seventh places, respectively, in an eight-horse field.

Good Harvest, coupled with Identify as the Vanderbilt entry, paid $22 to 1, 3 to 1 and 6 to 5 to win, place and show, and ran the mile in the fast time of 1:36 2-5.

A crowd estimated at 17,500, largest of the New York season, saw Good Harvest, lightweight in the field at 107 pounds, upset the dope completely.

Sammy Renick held the Epinard wielding off the sizzling early pace set by Identity, and Good Harvest was no better than fifth entering the stretch. Here, however, Renick found racing room on the inside and Good Harvest went up with a rush and took command to win handily.

Whopper, kept close to the pace all the way, held on gamely to save place money while Singing Wood, surprise winner of the Tobogganhandicap at Belmont Monday, weakened suddenly in the stretch but when Johnny Gelbert was making his bid with the Whitney ace.

J. F. Clark Jr.'s Clang ran a good race to finish fourth, beaten a head by Singing Wood; Identify was fifth, and the Howe Stable's Cycle eighth and last, trailing Sation and King Saxon. King Saxon, which shared top weight of 128 pounds with Sation, was cut off sharply around the first turn and never recovered.

BILLIKENS' BIG INNING UPSETS BEARS, 10 TO 3

A big seventh inning that ended only after nine men crossed the plate, gave St. Louis U. a 10 to 3 decision over Washington's Bears yesterday afternoon at Forest Park as the Billikens went into the home stretch in the race for the city baseball title.

It was the third victory in three days for St. Louis. A victory over Eden Seminary Tuesday afternoon would give the Bills the city title, while defeat would leave Washington on the throne. The Billikens have a record of seven victories in 11 games in the local circuit and the Bears have six triumphs and four defeats.

With the count at 1-all as the Bills went in for their half of the seventh, Paino and Mudd got on base and scored when Pitcher Roy Scott drove a long double to center. Fifteen men went to bat in the hectic inning, nine scoring, and three being left on the sacks.

The seventh inning also marked the end of Pitcher Frank Shobe. Shobe's slow ball and brilliant fielding by his mates had kept the game close 'until the Billikens found the range for eight runs and 10 hits. Bill Brickmann went in with one out and two men on base, struck out Sid Mudd, the first man to face him, but two errors gave the Billikens an additional pair of runs.

The Bears rallied in the following inning and Douglas reached first on Paino's bad throw, scoring on Blumberg's home run over center fielder McDonald's head. Scott then retired the next two batters on grounders.

Both teams went scoreless until the fourth inning. Then Fash, St. Louis first sacker singled, the next two men were out, and Krause lifted a fly into short left field that the shortstop dropped, Fash scoring The Bears came back in the next inning to tie up the count with clever baseball. Williams singled and was forced out by Herbert, who stole second and third. Douglas reached first on Lou Drone's error. Then Douglas started down for second, stopped midway, and when catcher Ed Drone threw to second, Herbert scored before Douglas was put out in the resulting run up.

BLEWETT BEATS ROOSEVELT, 18 TO 6, WINS BASEBALL TITLE

NINE RUNS IN FIRST INNING HELP VICTORS GAIN DECISION

First Major Honors Ever Won by Blewett Since It Became Senior High School Three Years Ago.

Blewett won the baseball championship, its first major title since it became a senior high school in 1934, when it smothered Roosevelt, 18 to 6, yesterday afternoon at the Public Schools Stadium. The City High School League finals drew a crowd of 1200.

Cleveland won the first game of the double header from Central, 8 to 6. There were only two games played yesterday, instead of the usual three, due to the Interscholastic Field Day preliminaries which were held in the morning.

Blewett stowed away the verdict in the first inning by pounding Righthanders Joe Polizzi and Ralph Rauscher for nine runs. More runs followed, but they were not needed —Roosevelt was a beaten ball club after the first inning.

Bob McCarron, the converted third baseman, again hurled well, but his mates gained him an easy decision by piling up 18 runs. McCarron was shifted to third base, his first love, after hurling five innings, largely because Coach C. Don Frankenberger wanted to give his other pitchers a chance to break into the game.

McCarron Undefeated.

McCarron's victory was his fourth in succession. He was not defeated during the course of the league season, for Blewett's one defeat was charged to Hugh McLafferty.

The first game was better played, Central secured eight hits and Cleveland seven, but the South Siders made better use of their safeties. Four Central errors also helped tremendously. Although Cleveland erred five times, only one miscue really proved costly and that a four-base error, was made by the batting star of the game, Bill McKenna, sophomore outfielder.

Augie Gross, the South Siders', hurler, doubled to right in the third with two runners on. Both scored to tie the score and Cleveland took the lead in the fourth when McKenna tripled and Turner singled.

McKenna Pounds Ball.

Central scored once in the second half of the fourth and Cleveland came back with three more when McKenna doubled to left field with three on base, all the runners scoring.

The final standings:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Blewett	5	1	.833
Cleveland	4	2	.667
Beaumont	4	2	.667
Roosevelt	3	3	.500
McKinley	3	3	.500
Central	2	4	.333
Soldan	0	6	.000

A Champion at Fifteen

Harry Ledene Jr., 15-year-old Chicago bowler, and his mother looking over the score sheet of the match, in which he totaled 724 to win the Illinois Bowling Championship. His scores were 223, 245 and 256.

ROOSEVELT AND BEAUMONT EACH QUALIFY 13 IN PRELIMINARIES

Roosevelt may win the Interscholastic track and field championship for the ninth consecutive time Friday when the City High School League holds its annual Field Day, but the Rough Riders will have their hands full if yesterday's preliminaries are any indication of what is to come, for Beaumont also had 37 qualifiers, exactly the same number as the defending champions.

Two records can be set Field Day if Wolfgang Schubert, McKinley junior, and the Roosevelt senior relay team equal their preliminary performances. Schubert, entered in the 880-yard run in the preliminaries, took a commanding lead which he never relinquished as he traveled twice around the track in 2:04:7, three seconds faster than the record established by Green of Blewett last year.

The Roosevelt relay team, composed of the Seidel brothers, Al and Jerry, Wilber Berg and Ray Alsbury, lowered the record set by its 1935 predecessors by two-tenths of a second. The new mark is 1:31.8.

Outstanding individual performers were: Seniors—Al and Jerry Seidel, Ray Alsbury and Ken McDougal, Roosevelt; and Fred Cross, Beaumont; juniors — Wolfgang Schubert, McKinley; and Midgets—Ben Schwartzman and Roland Russell, Soldan.

The point totals of the qualifiers:

"I like these BARGAIN LONG DISTANCE rates"

"Yep, I gave up letter-writin'—interfered too much with my fishin'. When the bass start jumpin', I get on the phone and round up my fishin' pardner in the next town, to go after 'em. You can quote me as sayin' these bargain low rates after 7 at night, and all day Sunday, are the best news for fishermen since the anti-backlash reel was invented."

Save after 7...And Sundays

After 7 o'clock every evening, and all day Sunday, rates are reduced on both person-to-person and station-to-station* calls. The reductions apply on all calls to towns over 100 miles distant, and to many shorter calls.

Just ask Long Distance for the new rate to any point.

*PERSON-TO-PERSON — You will talk only with a particular person.
STATION-TO-STATION—You are willing to talk with anyone who answers or can be called quickly to the distant telephone.

Notice how evenly Van Dyck burns. It feels good in your mouth—no loose ends. See how firm the ash is. These are signs of fine tobaccos.

One thing a good cigar has in common with a pretty girl. No man can predict another man's likes or dislikes.

136 million Van Dyck 32's were sold last year—but it means nothing to you unless you like Van Dyck's flavor. When we say Van Dycks are better made of better tobaccos—that they're smoother, sweeter, milder—it matters little unless you enjoy this particular cigar.

But this IS important. For only a nickel, you can meet Van Dyck 32's at any cigar counter in town. Five cents and five minutes will tell you whether you'll live happily with Van Dycks forever after!

RENEWS 23 LEASES IN BROADWAY BLOCKS

Ladies of the Sacred Heart Hold Property Under 999 Year Grant.

Negotiations have been concluded through the Mercantile Commerce Bank & Trust Co. for the renewal of leases on approximately 23 parcels on the east and west sides of Broadway, between Chouteau avenue and Rutger street, owned by the Ladies of the Sacred Heart.

The improvements consist principally of antiquated business buildings held under 50 year leases, now expiring. The lots range from 25 to 50 feet in frontage. The range of rentals under the renewals was not disclosed.

The buildings stand on a tract of eight blocks extending from the west line of Sixth to the east line of Third street and from the south line of Chouteau avenue to the north line of Rutger street, granted to the order in 1827 by John Mullanphy, St. Louis capitalist and philanthropist. The grant was in the form of a 999 year lease and the rental was to consist of feeding, clothing and educating, by the Sisters, of 20 orphan girls annually, the children to be selected by the Mullanphy heirs. The girls are now cared for at the Convent of the order at Taylor and Maryland avenues.

The eight blocks included in the grant have an assessed value of approximately $500,000, according to members of the real estate department of the Mercantile Commerce Bank & Trust Co., agent for the property.

A three-story building 80 years old at 1001-05 South Sixth street, was torn down in 1934 to save taxes. The land occupied by the building was taken over by the order after the holder of the 50 year lease failed to pay the rent and taxes. Nine other tenement buildings owned by the order in this tract, in addition to the one described were also wrecked a year or so ago to save taxes, totaling annually $600.

The old French market which stood at Broadway and La Salle street was a landmark of this section.

Negotiations are pending for the renewal of leases on property on other streets in this tract.

APARTMENT BUILDING PROJECT FIGURES IN DEAL

A four-unit apartment, designed for a site 80 by 110 feet on the north side of York drive, west of Glenridge terrace, in the Moorlands, has been purchased virtually from the plans by Edward and Mary Immerthal from Sam Brown, the builder.

The transaction was handled by the Joseph F. Dickmann Real Estate Co., which sponsored the building project.

The exterior of the building, in the English Tudor period, will express the residential character of the locality. Each apartment will have five rooms and breakfast room with studio living room on the second floor. The basement will comprise garage, maid's rooms and bath and a general recreation room, designed in Crowellian style.

The Immerthals gave in part payment an eight-room residence at 301 Princeton place in University Park, University City.

BUYS 20-ACRE TRACT ON FLORISSANT ROAD

Development Company Acquires Remaining Unsold Ground in Moline Park.

The remaining unsold ground, comprising 20 acres, with approximately 4000 front feet in Moline Park, lying on the east side of Florissant road, two blocks south of Kirkwood-Ferguson street car line, has been acquired by the Ferguson Development Co., composed of a group of Ferguson business men.

The Moresi-Nauman O'Neil Construction Co., which handled the transaction, announced plans for dividing the tract into 82 lots, with a uniform frontage of 50 feet. Construction of homes is planned. Florissant road is the main artery between St. Louis and Ferguson.

The new subdivision, to be known as Patricia Park, will be protected by restrictions, and the Ferguson zoning laws. Distinctive gates will be erected as entrances to the subdivision. Construction of streets, sidewalks, sewer, water, gas and electric mains is under way, the agents' report.

The houses will be designed by the architectural department of the Moresi-Nauman-O'Neil Construction Co.

Look at the 10, 14, or 24-acre tracts on picturesque wooded ridge just off super-Highway 30 (Gravois) opposite Grant's Farm, 4 miles from the city limits.

Fast highways in all directions, city conveniences, school, transportation, wonderful views, hills, trees, spring, brook and opportunities for most beautiful sunken gardens.

INCREASING TRADE-INS ON NEW 1936 OLDSMOBILES FORCE US TO KEEP OUR USED CAR STOCK MOVING!

We're swamped with Trade-Ins. We're not ordinarily in the Used Car business—our business is selling new Oldsmobiles. So we just dispose of our used cars as fast as possible. We don't want a profit—we just want to keep our surplus stock moving. That's why these prices have been cut so low.

MORTGAGES APPRAISED IN APRIL SET RECORD

April became the peak month in business transacted by private financial institutions under regulations of the Federal Housing Administration in this district, it was announced today by Thomas G. Mullally, district director.

Home mortgages accepted for appraisal numbering 222 and totaling $995,510 for the month, set a new high mark since the organization of the Housing Administration. This is an advance of 24 per cent over the March volume and 5 per cent over the previous record of $940,300, for October, 1935, and compares with 177 mortgages accepted totaling $839,300, for April, 1935.

The first four months of 1936 show an increase of 50 per cent over the first quarter of 1935.

Figures compiled by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the Department of Labor bear out earlier predictions of an anticipated upswing and coincide with reports on the volume of mortgages insured under the terms of the National Housing Act by the Federal Housing Administration headquarters in Washington.

The grand total of mortgages accepted for appraisal through April 30, 1936, is 2478, amounting to $11,262,360.

The grand total of modernization and repair notes accepted for insurance is 22,910, amounting to $7,987,427.29.

BUILDING PLANNED WITH GLASS WALLS

The Fairfax company, composed of clients of the Dubinsky Realty Co., has purchased a site with a frontage of 60 feet on the west side of South Grand avenue, between Hartford and Connecticut street, with plans for the erection of a one-story office building with air-conditioning equipment.

The building will be set back from the sidewalk, from which it will be separated by a grass plot. It will have a Georgian elevation, with a residential effect. The upper four walls of the building will be constructed of glass brick, obviating the necessity of windows. The building, comprising 20 offices, is scheduled for completion Oct. 1. The site is now occupied by two two-family buildings which will be razed to make room for the new structure.

Painted Brick House on a Sloping Lot

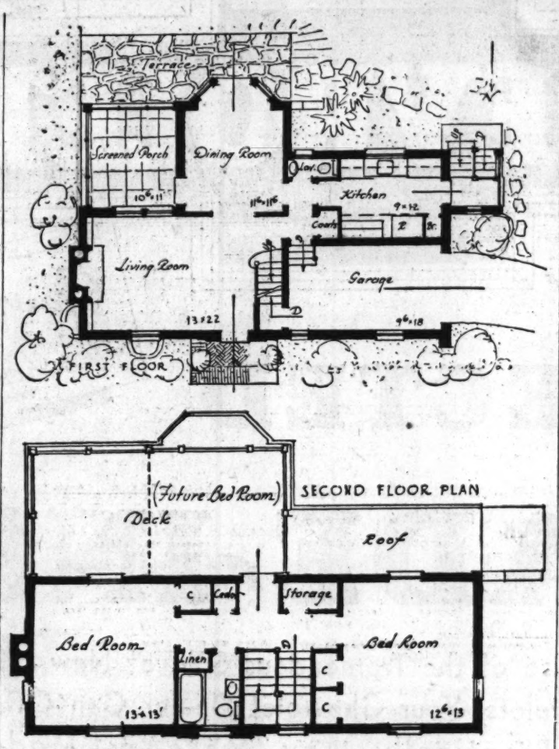
IF there is such a thing as a type of architecture appropriate for a certain locale, then French Directoire should have preference in St. Louis, since the city was founded by French and its dates coincide with the flourishing of the Directoire style in France.

The Directoire was the transitional period between the flowery Louis XVI and the more classic Empire. The style is characterized by the gradual loss of delivery and grace of Louis Seize and a growing enthusiasm for purely Roman motifs.

The outstanding characteristic of the Directoire style of architecture was its simplicity. Ornament was limited to restrained, almost delicate moldings. Houses were built close to the ground but rooms were high. Casement windows were tall, opening inward, and the large window lights lent an undeniable air of repose to the house. Balconies, window guards in delicate wrought iron pattern, dormers and hip roof are other notable points. For exterior decoration there was rustication about doorways and some simple garland or perhaps an elaborately carved window head.

Houses of this kind were built at a time when cost was no object. Today, when it is necessary to take into consideration the cost that cut stone, high ceilings, tall windows, dormers and balconies entail, one can readily understand how a style must of necessity be simplified.

In planning this house for his clients, Mr. and Mrs. Kennerly Woody of Webster Groves, the architect had to consider the suitability of the site and the neighborhood. The lot is a triangular piece of ground with the wide part of the triangle at the front. It is 132 by 200 feet and has a decided slope. With careful study it was possible to give the garden side of the house which faces south as much interest as the street front.



THE floor plans show a wide house in which all floor space has been utilized. The garage is an integral part of the house and has been placed at a level between the first floor and basement. The stair hall has been eliminated in the interests of conserving space. The kitchen, just back of the garage, is long and narrow with work space on both sides. A small passageway separates this room from the rest of the house. The service entrance is on the west back of a masking wall. A living room, dining room with a bay that opens into a flagstone terrace and screened porch complete the first floor.

The fireplace wall in the living room includes bookshelves on either side and is of ponderosa pine stained and waxed. The fireplace is of used brick with a beautifully detailed mantel shelf above. Walls and ceilings throughout the house are of tinted plaster. Floors of the living and dining room are oak and are stained dark and waxed. The kitchen and lavatory have green painted woodwork. The bath on the second floor has a blue tile floor, walls of peach colored linoleum while the woodwork is painted light blue.

Upstairs are two bedrooms each with sufficient closet space. A cedar closet storage space and linen closet open on the upstairs hall. These bedrooms have three exposures and assure maximum ventilation. The sun deck over the screened porch and dining room has been planned for an additional bedroom at some later time. Electric wiring is already available and a heating duct may be opened and carried through the closet to supply heat for the room. This bedroom, too, will have three exposures.

PERHAPS the most interesting part of the house is the vista which has been created through the living room and dining room bay. As one steps through the entrance one looks to a dining room framed by a slightly segmental arch. Beyond is the wide bay window that looks out on a cerefully planned garden having as its focal point a rose arbor at the extreme southwestern end of the lot.

A step or two below the flagstone terrace the land has been leveled to make a circular grass plot some 50 feet in diameter. The plot is to be bordered with flowers. Trees on the lot have been carefully conserved. A hard maple of almost perfect shape is included in the circular garden and a number of others have been used as centers for landscaping. A thicket of sumach along the eastern border of the lot has also been retained. A kitchen garden has been planned for the extreme southwest portion of the lot.

The house is built of used brick and is to be painted white. Blinds and door are to be pained a peacock green. The lower part of the screen door is to be covered by an especially designed grill. The garden side of the house is white with shingles at the second story. The deck is enclosed with a very simple railing. The house contains something like 22,000 cubic feet and cost is estimated at 30 cents per cubic foot. It is winter air conditioned and the furnace is gas fired.

DECORATION on the facade has been limited to rustication at either side of the doorway which extends up to the cornice where it is joined by a brick course. Above the doorway is a cast plaque with delicately modeled scrolls.

The house is modern but here a distinction is to be made between modern and "moderne" which threw all architectural traditions to the wind. "This does not mean," says the architect who planned the house shown here, discussing styles, "that there is no merit to the 'moderne' fad. However, until synthetic materials have come down in price and adaptations in design are made more logical and amenable to our mode of living, the so-called style will last no longer than the phrases of Art Nouveau of 1900 and the Mission period which followed. After all, character is more important than slavish adherence to style. A house with character will be pleasing long after the novelty of a fad has passed."

Storage In Home

Many houses are being built these days without cellars. New style heating systems make it possible for furnaces to be installed in a small room on the first floor, and, while this saves steps in the servantless home, it does away with the ample storage space in a cellar.

To offset this lack of storeroom facilities, ample shelves should be built in the kitchen. Provisions, household equipment, kitchen equipments need a "parking place," and this should be kept in mind when planning a cellarless home.

The Home Plumber.

Changing a washer on the kitchen sink or using a bent hairpin to clean out a clogged lavatory drain is about as far as the amateur plumber should go. Any job that requires installation or changing of piping should be done by a professional; proper trapping and venting are essential to health, so no chances should be taken.

QUESTIONS BEFORE THE HOUSE

Q. The fieldstone fireplace in our living room has become discolored from smoke. Is there any kind of bleach on the market which will remove this stain?
MRS. A. J.

A. Take off what you can with a dry brush and a vacuum cleaner. Scrub with a scouring powder and rinse in clear water.

Q. We are planning to install a bar in our basement rathskeller. What, if any, finish can be put on a gumwood top to keep it from being marred by spilled drinks?
JOS. B. R.

A. If the wood has been finished remove the old finish down to the bare wood. Apply a mixture of three parts boiled linseed oil to one part turpentine, or use one third oil, one third denatured alcohol and one-third turpentine. Brush on liberally and let soak in for an hour or two. Wipe off the excess and repeat at intervals of 24 hours. Rub with a piece of coarse cloth. Long rubbing will produce a very good finish.

Q. We would like to have windows with small panes put in our house in place of the large-pane windows we now have. Can we use the same windows and have them divided? BADEN.

A. It is possible, but if the windows are of stock sizes, it would probably be less expensive to buy new window sash with the divisions in them.

Q. Some of the slates on our roof have come loose. The house is almost new, and I don't think the slates should fall off so soon, but what can I do to put them on again? HOME OWNER.

A. Sometimes a few slates come loose during the first year after the completion of the house, particularly if the slates are of a thin grade. The shrinkage of the wood frame and deck of the roof sometimes cracks the slates at the nail holes and they slip out of place. A roofer can replace them.

Q. When you use brick as a veneer on the outside wall, is it necessary to put paper over the sheathing? E. C. GARDENVILLE.

A. Unless some form of sheathing that is waterproof is used, paper should be erected. Even with waterproof sheathing, there should be paper and through-wall flashing to protect the wood members at the bottom of the wall, as water may penetrate the four-inch brick wall, run down the inside, and collect at the bottom. With paper and flashing, this possible collection of moisture will then be kept away from the wood and guided under the brick work to the outside.

FOR BETTER LIVING

We will soon be moving out into our gardens again and the rough bark hickory furniture will again take its toll in snagged filmy dresses and hose. Coat your pieces with spar varnish to make the surface as smooth as possible. And, speaking of garden furniture and living terrace accessories, there are some heavenly iron chairs and tables with plate glass tops at which six can be served comfortably. They are painted dull black and with colored rough pottery dishes, Mexican or otherwise and brilliantly colored glassware they should make your terrace a joy forever.

Hardware for the home, meaning locks, hinges and doorknobs have gone "period" and it is now possible to get English, Spanish, Italian and colonial replicas in wrought iron with a semi-polished finish or, if we want to simulate age, with a rush finish.

For locks the iron and brass box locks that were used on thin doors are still interesting. When thicker doors were used, mortised locks were installed with small round or oval brass knobs with neat brass rings or rosettes to cover the hole in the door. With these simple brass key holes were inserted and the finished product was one of restraint and refinement.

Keep your periods straight, however, and do not put Old English wrought iron locks on a Dutch Colonial house.

IN MEMORIAM

ANDERSON, BERNICE — In memory of Bernice Anderson who passed to the better lands May 14, 1936.
Just a line of sweet remembrance,
Just a memory fond and true,
That our hearts still long for you.
Just a token of love's devotion,
No more her kind and loving face
Shall light the gloom of home,
Yet sweet the thought that we shall meet
When we shall cease to roam.
Remembered forever by MOTHER, FATHER and BROTHER, AND ALL WHO LOVED HER.

BOEDEKER, GERTRUDE—In loving memory of my dear sister, who departed this life May 20, 1935. Your memory is as dear today as on the day you passed away. Sadly missed by sister,

Which never can be filled.
Sadly missed by
CHILDREN and GRANDCHILDREN.

Days of sadness, oft come over us,
Tears in silence often flow,

Though you left one year ago.
Never shall you be forgotten
Never from our memory fade.
Loving hearts will always linger
Around the grave where you are laid.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND and SON.

Dinner-Dance Opens Summer Season at Country Club

Miss Vera Angert, Debutante Daughter of Mrs. Borden S. Veeder Is Honored at Party—Mrs. Denman Clark Hostess to 50 Friends.

THE first Saturday night dinner dance of the summer season at the St. Louis Country Club was held yesterday evening when the club, in gala attire and new decorations, served dinner to 250 members and their friends. A new chromium cocktail bar was set up on the porch. The tables were laid in the large dining room.

The interior of the club struck the spring note. Climbing vines of artificial flowers clung to trellises which were built against the walls of the dining room, where the dancing took place later in the evening. Cut flowers in pastel shades were arranged on the tables, and the summer frocks of the feminine guests made the annual spring opening of the club a colorful occasion.

Miss Vera Angert, daughter of Mrs. Borden S. Veeder of Kent road, was honored at a party to which a group of the debutantes and their escorts were invited by Mrs. Richard Baldwin. Miss Angert was introduced to society last fall, and has had many parties given in her honor. The dinner dance last night marks the opening of a new season of parties for the debutantes.

A dutch treat table for 60 people was reserved by Mrs. John K. Wallace, and was preceded by a cocktail party given by Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Simmons II, 265 Union boulevard, who have as their guest Miss Virginia Richardson of New York. Among those who attended the party were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wright Pettus, and their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Tietig, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Green Jr., and their guests, Mr. and Mrs. William Andrews, and Mr. and Mrs. Bayard Kilgour Jr. and their hosts, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Johnson. These out-of-town visitors all arrived Friday from Cincinnati, O., where they live, and will return this evening following a luncheon party to be given at St. Albans by Mr. and Mrs. Johnson.

Mrs. Denman Clark, 15 Hortense place, was hostess to a group of 50 of her friends. Another party was given by Arthur Stickney, Miss Gladys McRee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry McRee of Warson road, invited 20 young men and women to join her at a table at the dinner dance.

Several other small parties were held at the club. Lucien R. Fouke of the St. Louis Country Club Grounds entertained a few of his friends, as did Mr. and Mrs. James Smith Bush of Westmoreland place. Tables were also reserved by Mrs. William Bagnell and Mr. and Mrs. Ethan A. H. Shepley.

The club will be the scene of dinner dances every Saturday evening for the next few months, and, as soon as the weather is warmer, the tables will be set on the lawn and dancing will take place out of doors.

WASHINGTON SCENE

By the POE SISTERS

FIRST honors among the women of Washington society as a political convention attendant easily go to Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, widow of the Speaker of the House, who since the Democratic National Convention in Denver never has failed to be present at the convention of the major political parties. This year Mrs. Longworth will appear in a new capacity—as delegate from Ohio.

Close behind her as a veteran spectator at political conventions is Mrs. James M. Thomson, of New Orleans, sister of Bennett Champ Clark, United States Senator from Missouri, and daughter of the late Speaker Champ Clark. By the way, the Clark children have found something more than political excitement at conventions, for Genevieve Clark met her future husband at the Baltimore convention in which her father was nearly nominated for the Presidency. Senator Clark first met his wife, who was Miriam March, at the San Francisco Democratic Convention which nominated James M. Cox, of Ohio, as candidate for President. Her father was treasurer of the Democratic National Committee.

It is certain that Mrs. Albert G. Simms, formerly Ruth Hanna McCormick, a Representative in Congress from Illinois, will leave New Mexico to come East to attend both conventions.

The personality parades at Cleveland and Philadelphia will contain many other Washington veterans of convention battles. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, widow of the President, whose interest dates back to the time when she was married to the War President, has seldom missed a Democratic convention since then. Margaret Wilson, eldest daughter of the late President, also is a convention fan, and can hold her own in a political debate and make a good speech. At the 1924 Democratic convention in New York she gave valiant support to the unsuccessful campaign of Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, then her brother-in-law, who sought the Democratic nomination.

The young Tafts belong to the veteran group of convention fans, and this year their interest will be heightened by the fact that Mr. Robert A. Taft, of Cincinnati, eldest son of President and Mrs. Taft, is Ohio's "favorite son" for the Republican nomination.

Four Senators' wives will watch the proceedings at Cleveland with attention. These are Mrs. William E. Borah, Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, Mrs. L. J. Dickinson and Mrs. Frederick Steiwer. Their husbands are prominent among the candidates for the nomination.

What would a political convention be without the pithy wit and amusing comments of Representative Florence P. Kahn of California, who served her convention apprenticeship when she accompanied her husband, long a member of Congress, to conventions hither and yon in other political years?

Among other convention veterans in Washington society who would not miss Cleveland and Philadelphia are Mrs. Ollie James, widow of the Kentucky Senator who was chairman of the Baltimore convention of 1912; Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, official hostess of the Philadelphia conclave; Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, first vice-chairman of the Democratic National Committee; Director of the Mint Nellie Tayloe Ross, Mrs. Alvin T. Hert, vice-chairman of the Republican National Committee; Mrs. Ellis Yost, Mrs. George Mesta, and, no doubt, Alice Paul, leader of the National Woman's Party, busy with the task of getting her party's planks into the platform of both major political groups.

All of which reminds us that "sub rosa, or undergroud Washington," is not a mere figure of speech concerning politics and its manifold rumors. There is a network of underground tunnels beside those at the Capitol. Many of the old houses here have them.

For instance, Judge and Mrs. Wade Hampton Ellis have a tunnel at Rippon Lodge, Virginia, which they own, one of the oldest dwellings in this part of the country. One day Judge Ellis was watching a gardener prepare a plot in the gardens when he noticed his spade seemed to strike a blank spot. They tore away leaves, stones and debris, and found a stairway leading to a tunnel and into a spacious underground chamber where they found old cannon balls. The theory is the chamber was used in Revolutionary times as a hiding place for soldiers, or that it even antedated the Revolution and was used in colonial times as a shelter from marauding Indians.

The network of tunnels between the White House and Department of State, the White House and the Treasury, the Capitol and other Government buildings is well known. There are other interesting tunnels in Washington. One was said to have been used by Dolly Madison to escape from the British in the War of 1812. It led to Octagon House, then the home of Col. John Tayloe, now the headquarters of the American Institute of Architects.

It is said that recently a tunnel was discovered leading from a place in the Mall, back of the White House, to a fireplace in the Executive Mansion. Perhaps some President planned it to escape from tiresome office holders or over zealous political friends.

When the grounds about the new kitchens of the White House were dug, many uncharted passages and chambers were found which now have been made into trim storage rooms.

News from London that the Dowager Queen Mary is writing a book on the crown jewels of England and has made a catalogue of them in her own handwriting, recalls jewel collections in Washington which have been catalogued. Among these were the collections of the late Mme. Bakhmeteff, wife of the Imperial Russian Ambassador to this country. She had a collection of pearls and numerous rubies and other precious stones. Her emeralds were famous for their beauty and value. Mrs. Charles MacVeagh, wife of Taft's Secretary of the Treasury, kept her jewels in a special room made for their safekeeping in the house on Sixteenth street northwest which she gave to the Secretary as a Christmas present. It was in this house, by the way, that President Taft was a guest at dinner when the lighting system failed. While all wondered what to do, President Taft arose from his seat, walking over to ornamental candlesticks, struck a match and lighted the candles and all breathed easier.

The show again was transferred to the stage, where Miss Mary Boland Taussig and Miss Noel Kennerly repeated their dance duet from the Junior League Follies. ROUND OF FESTIVALS IN THE MERRY MONTH OF MAY

St. Louis Schools and Colleges Hold Traditional Celebrations; Daisy Chains and Maypole Dancing

By Emily Westwood Lewis.

NOW is the merry month of May" the month of flowers, of a new world in fresh attire, a month devoted, among other things, to Maypoles and dancing on the green. The Puritans frowned on such revels, but now May day is an annual event to which children look forward each year. It seldom is celebrated on the first of the month as it should be. Nearly every day during May some school crowns its queen. There is no longer a set pattern for the festival, for each school works out its own program. Interest, however, always centers on a May Queen, and the spirit of each celebration is based on the old thirteenth century May song, "Summer Is Icumen In."

FRIDAY afternoon both Washington University and Lindenwood College held their festivals.

Washington University selects 13 special maids from whom a queen is secretly chosen, and in the presence of the other participants only, Miss Virginia Hawkins was crowned with a wreath of sweetheart roses. From the Women's Building the queen and her attendants proceeded to McMillan Court where, in an appropriately Elizabethan setting, 28 sophomores danced around the Maypole. This was followed by a program based on early American folk dances, with special features, among them a Greek dance and a comic number representing the World Series of 1890.

Lindenwood places its emphasis on dancing. Each year a different aspect of the dance is chosen and this season the performance was Japanese and Chinese. A dragon dance was one of the features. There was no Maypole, but a queen, Miss Mildred Rhoton of Anderson, Ind., was crowned by the maid of honor, a member of the junior class. Seniors and juniors filed onto the lawn in procession, wearing pastel-shaded organdie frocks, and watched, with the queen, the dancing of the sophomores and freshmen. Miss Rhoton wore white and her crown was made by a friend of silver and brilliants. The ceremony was more in the nature of an Oriental pageant than a traditional May day celebration.

FONTBONNE COLLEGE crowned its Queen on the first of May at a campus ceremony. She was Miss Anne Muschong. Accompanied by her court of honor, special maids, and girls carrying a daisy chain, she passed beneath arches of flowers to the scene of coronation.

St. Joseph's Academy also celebrated on the Fontbonne campus. Wednesday afternoon Miss Virginia Melican was crowned by the first senior Maid of Honor, then the school marched in procession into the chapel where the Queen placed a crown on the statue of the Virgin.

Roman Catholics celebrate May as the Virgin's month, so Catholic schools always hold ceremonies of a religious nature. The Academy of the Visitation sets aside two days. On May 1 the senior prefect of the sodality crowned the statue of Mary in the grotto on the school grounds at a religious service; and this year on May 29 she will crown the member of the Junior class who will succeed her as prefect, and who will reign as Queen through the following year. The Juniors will do a Maypole dance on the lawn, and younger children will appear in a butterfly dance.

ALTHOUGH most of the present-day celebrations have changed greatly from the original Elizabethan revels, they still cling to the nature theme. Each year Mary Institute bases its annual festival on some aspect of nature. Last year the program centered around the verse, "My heart leaps up when I behold a rainbow in the sky." Tuesday afternoon, when the school will gather in the garden of Chancellor and Mrs. George Reeves Throop, the subject will be "Ever-changing clouds."

Members of the lower school in cloud-like costumes of white, blue and orchid, and some in the warm colors of the sunset, will dance on the lawn. Then sophomores, carrying a daisy chain, will execute a dancing figure which will lead up to the May Queen ceremony. Forming an aisle with their rope of flowers, they will end their dance as the senior class enters. The seniors will be followed by the twin daughters of Mrs. Chester Wright, who will serve as little flower girls. After them will come Miss Suzanne Stetting, queen of 1934 and a debutante of this year, who will act as retiring queen in place of Miss Virginia Fischel of last year's class, who is away at college in the East. Her train will be carried by Corinne Froemke. Jeanette Rand will be crown-bearer.

Special maids will be Miss Suzanne White, Miss Lida Lee Christy, Miss Dorothy Cabell, Miss Mary Blair Bunting, Miss Nancy Morrill, Miss Georgia Simmons and Miss Frances Elmer. The little crown-bearer will walk up to the one who has been chosen to rule, whose identity is kept secret until that moment. Miss Bitting will place the wreath of flowers on her head, and after the seniors have curtsied low in homage, they will gather around the Maypole and, each holding a colored streamer, will do an intricate dance in her honor.

Mary Institute May day celebrations have evolved from the simple Maypole dance held for many years in the gymnasium of the former building on Lake avenue, to the present elaborate pageant of beauty in the garden setting.

ANOTHER beautiful May day ceremony held in this vicinity is the one given by the students of Webster College. This year on the afternoon of May 22 Miss Mary Frances Higgins of the Junior class will be crowned by the retiring Queen, Miss Ann Heald of Denver, Colo. Here again the daisy chain, carried by the Seniors, will be featured prominently, and the special maids of honor will be selected from all the classes in the college.

MAY DAY in the authentic Elizabethan manner is best illustrated at Bryn Mawr College, where once every four years since 1901 the students have put on a performance resembling in every detail the celebrations of the sixteenth century. So unusual is the fete that last week-end 10,000 visitors from all over the East and some from St. Louis went to Bryn Mawr, Pa., to witness the revels. Queen Elizabeth (a distinguished alumna) presided in state, and smiled with favor on Maid Marian and Robin Hood as they ruled with gaiety their mock court. Since the thirteenth century Marian and Robin have been the peasant monarchs in old May Songs, and in Tudor days they became identified with the characters of the same names in the legend of the outlaw of Nottingham. So it is that Bryn Mawr's May Queen always wears a peasant dress, and a wreath of flowers for her golden hair, and is Maid Marian.

The celebration began with a procession of all the students in their costumes to the green, led by the Maypole pulled by four white oxen. The oxen are a problem to discover, and usually they are found in Delaware or Maryland, but white they must be. Then the girls danced around the Maypole and in groups as Morris dancers.

After the crowning of the Queen the visitors scattered to the corners of the campus, where eight plays were produced as they were in Elizabeth's days. "A Midsummer Night's Dream," by Mr. William Shakespeare; "Gammer Gurton's Needle," a right merry conceit; "The Creation," as many times acted by the Grocers of Norwich; "St. George and the Dragon," played on the Green; "The Deluge," which shows how Noah at God's command builds an ark; "The Maske of Flowers," by the Gentlemen of Gray's Inn, performed first on Twelfth Night, 1614; "The Olde Wives' Tale," by George Peele, and "Robyn Hoode," the famous history of Robin and Maid Marian, "excellently expressing their loves."

WHETHER May day is celebrated as it was in the days of Elizabeth, or with the simplicity of a mere Maypole dance, it is now a popular occasion generally throughout the world. During this month there are hundreds of young girls in schools throughout the country who must invoke their mothers, as did the maid in Tennyson's poem, to "call me early, mother dear. . . . Tomorrow will be of all the year the maddest, merriest day, for I'm to be Queen of the May, mother, I'm to be Queen of the May."

Many beautiful modern ceremonies have developed from the revels. In European countries May day originally was the peasants' day. Its origin was a Druid religious ceremony in England in which nature was worshipped. With the growth of Christianity the villagers, jubilant at the coming of spring maintained the celebration and adapted and changed it. They would go into the woods at dawn on the first of May, and gather flowers. Returning to the village green a mock war would be held between Winter and Summer, with Summer always triumphant. The youth who was Summer would be crowned King, and a village maid was chosen as his consort. The king has been dropped in most of our present days festivities. The Community School, however, always crowns a King as well as a Queen when it celebrates May day.

Summer, triumphant, would hold high his arms and the green branches he carried, while the peasants danced in victory around him. In this way the Maypole developed. Later a young tree was set up with bright ribbons and flowers hanging from the top. At length a permanent pole was erected in the center of the green, with hawthorne blooms—the May—placed on top, and streamers trailing to the ground which the dancers held in their hands as they skipped about it. At the time of the Reformation the Puritans seized on this as a pagan symbol, denounced those who went Maying, and caused the village Maypoles to be cut down.

May morning has always been observed in New England. Children make little baskets of colored paper and fill them with anemones and violets. Then they hang them on the doors of their neighbors and run away, leaving their offerings behind them.

May day in the Hawaiian Islands is lei day. Everyone in the islands wears a wreath or necklace of flowers on the first of May. Even business men go to their offices wearing the perfumed blossoms.

Another and different form of May day, is the one made famous by the Communists. Nowadays radicals of every country celebrate with parades and demonstrations on May 1, but the choice of May 1 by the Communists has no connection with the traditional holiday!

Students of Bryn Mawr College dancing on the green at the Elizabethan May day fete given last week-end on the campus. The celebration is held only once in four years.

Notes of St. Louisans Visiting in Paris

PARIS, May 7.

MUSIC lovers in Paris booked advance reservations for the two performances of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" at the Paris Opera under the direction of William Furtwaengler. These productions are another attraction of the "Fetes de Paris" season to attract foreigners to the capital. The Bayreuth singers with the "Die Meistersinger" will be followed later by the Salzburg Festspielhaus singers, headed by Bruno Walter. They will give two performances each of Mozart's "Don Giovanni," May 28 and May 30 and Beethoven's "Fidelio," June 4 and June 9. The Salzburg performers are bringing their own costumes and Dr. Graff, Salzburg stage director, has designed the scenery for the Paris productions.

Vladimir Golschmann, director of the St. Louis Symphony orchestra, arrived Wednesday on the Aquitania. He will remain abroad until October. In an interview yesterday Golschmann was enthusiastic over the progress made in music in America, which has far surpassed, in his opinion, that of Europe. "The radio and schools," he said, "have been responsible to a great degree for this change. Now some of the finest artists in the world are American born, and orchestras and artists get enthusiastic support of American communities. America is the land of opportunity and success for any conductor."

Social Season in Washington Wanes

WASHINGTON, May 16.

THERE will be a lull in Washington society next month, not only because many will be departing for summer resorts, but many others in Washington will be headed for political conventions in Cleveland and Philadelphia.

Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg is making plans to leave Washington the end of the month, going to Michigan to open her house in Grand Rapids and her summer cottage on Lake Michigan—and then to Cleveland to meet Senator Vandenberg and attend the Republican national convention. After that, they will go to the lake.

With Mrs. W. Warren Barbour, Mrs. Vandenberg proposes to stay at Wade Park Manor, in one of Cleveland's suburbs, Shaker Heights. Senator Vandenberg and Senator Barbour will both have quarters downtown, nearer the center of things.

Mrs. William E. Borah hasn't yet definitely decided whether she will be in Cleveland during the convention. She "probably" will go, she said, but hasn't yet made plans.

Senator and Mrs. Robert Carey are going to the convention. Senator and Mrs. Wallace H. White are planning to go on and doubtless Mrs. Frederick Stelwer will be on hand to hear her husband make the keynote speech.

Among others who will be seen around convention headquarters are Mrs. Alvin T. Hert, Mme. Cantacuzene Grant and Mrs. James F. Curtis. Vice-President Garner will attend the Democratic national convention in Philadelphia. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Garner.

Mrs. Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, who rarely misses a convention, will head the Cabinet wives at Philadelphia. Others going from the Cabinet ranks are the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Morgenthau, the Attorney-General and Mrs. Cummings and the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Roper.

One of the most pleasant garden parties of the season was given this week by the former Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry L. Stimson at their charming home, Woodley.

The wisteria, back of the house at Woodley, which makes a backdrop for the garden, is past its prime, but the lawns, suggestive of English turf in their green smoothness, slope gently away beneath great oaks and then take a sudden dip to a bit of woodland, where dogwood, pink and white, is blooming. Bridal wreath and other flowering shrubs are in full blossom, and bright tulips rear their heads.

Lady Astor Neither Gives Nor Asks for Quarter in English House of Commons

Native American and First Woman Elected to Parliament Will Be 57 Tuesday—As Tart as Ever.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, May 16.—Lady Nancy Astor, who will be 57 years old next Tuesday, and William Waldorf Astor form the first mother-son combination in the history of the British Parliament.

Lady Astor has six relatives in Parliament, and she is one of the few native Americans—and the first woman—to hold a seat there. Her son was elected last fall. She was born at Mirador, Va., May 19, 1879, but it is as an Englishwoman that she is best known, although she often speaks with great pride of herself as a Virginian.

Lady Astor is progressive in her political thinking, but she has remained adamant to both Socialism and Communism. On many occasions her opponents have sought to embarrass her by proclaiming that the theories of Socialism are a modernization of the edicts of Christianity. To this she once replied, hotly:

"Socialism makes you discontented with your neighbor, while Christianity makes you discontented with yourself."

Her American birth has given her opponents much ammunition. In the heat of debate she often has been told to "shut up and go home to America."

Still a Virginian.

"I," she said in 1930 after an attack on her nationality, "am still passionately a Virginian. If I lived away from my country for 100 years, I would still be a Virginian. But that doesn't prevent my being a good British citizen. I'm trying to bring up my children so that they'll be good citizens of any country."

The British electorate, comprising the Plymouth constituency, was surprised and amused when Lady Astor in 1919 announced that she would stand for the seat in the House of Commons vacated by her husband, Waldorf Astor. His father had just died and he inherited the title of Viscount, thus automatically being excluded from membership in the lower house. Lady Astor won.

"Why," said Lady Nancy to protesters, "with my Virginia birth and my Devonshire residence I am just the woman to be the first in Parliament. I will bring to my task all the spirit of the Pilgrim fathers."

"There is not going to be any screaming in the House," she said as she took her seat, "but I certainly won't be a silent member."

Sarcastic Respect.

Treated at first with a respect annoying to her by its sarcastic meticulousness, she set things right by her pointed sallies. She gave and asked no quarter.

In her soft voice, with just an occasional trace of soft Virginian accent, she launched the first of her shafts in the espousal of liquor control.

"I am very fond of gin and rum," she told the startled Legislators, "but as you go through life you will find that there are a lot of things you want but are better off without. Now there is one member behind me who moans and groans when anything of a progressive nature comes up . . . I am not trying to take anyone's beer; I want to give the voters the freedom to control the drink trade."

When informed later that liquor interests were reported to have appropriated $50,000 to spend in a campaign against her in her constituency, she smiled and said: "Good. We need money in Plymouth. Let them spend it."

Rips Member's Coattails.

During the battle over her liquor control bill she tugged at the coat tails of Sir Frederick George Banbury in an attempt to keep him from rising to speak in opposition. With a riping, Sir Frederick got to his feet and spoke. "I'll get you next time, you old villain," the irrepressible Lady Nancy taunted.

On women's rights, especially as they affected birth control and working in the everyday world, she was a biting speaker. "Women might have twins every year and still be more efficient than many members of Parliament," she said once. And again :"Men will never be free until women are free."

During a debate on birth control it was pointed out that Lady Nancy was herself the mother of six children. "One of my sons," she replied quickly, "told me recently that I had not taken enough interest in him before he was seven. My reply was that if I had known as much as I do now, I should not have had him at all."

Repercussions of that sally went across the Atlantic causing a subsequent debate in the Congress of the United States where she was assailed and praised for the remark.

One member of the House who had ignored her for months after her election spoke to her one day in congratulation. "You know," he said, "at first I felt as I would had a woman invaded my bathroom." "Why," replied Lady Nancy sweetly, "I can't imagine any woman invading the bathroom of a man so ugly as you."

Hecklers Her Prey.

Hecklers have always been Lady Nancy's prey. "Shut up," says she, "if you don't shut up you can't hear what I am saying," or "go dance a jig for yourself . . . take your medicine . . . put that in your pipe and smoke it . . . don't be cheeky or I'll knock that pipe out of your mouth."

Once, exasperated she, turned jeers into laughter. "Oh, if only I had been your mother," she said, throwing up her hands.

A member once pointed out that Lord Astor was a millionaire. "Now," said Lady Nancy, "I want each of you who would not like to be a millionaire to stand up." Nobody did, and the meeting progressed peacefully. Another she quieted with "if you cannot rule yourselves how can you expect to rule the country?"

Her position as an American in Parliament Lady Nancy often employed to speak for the furtherance of Anglo-American amity. "I see no other way," she said, "to the establishment of peace in the world than that the British Empire and the United States should work together."

Before the Associated Press annual meeting in New York in April, 1922, she said to the editors: "I beg you to remember your power. If your motto could be to unite the world, send no thought which would not bless or cheer, purify or heal. Then we should, as the soldiers say, 'get on with peace.'"

Remarks Called Astorisms.

Lady Nancy's epigrams sprinkling her speeches have become so famous that Britishers have come to call them "Astorisms."

Some of them follow:

"There is a difference between the working classes and the shirking classes."

"The only panacea for the world's ills is to get greed out of the human heart."

"We cannot get people equal, but we have to work together to give them an equal chance."

"We women do not ask for superiority. We've always had that. We only want equality."

Lady Nancy realizes her militant qualities.

"I can't imagine a worse thing than a House of Commons composed entirely of Mrs. Astors," she said, "but one of them will do it a lot of good."

FESTIVALS PLANNED FOR RESORT SEASON

Michigan to Have Numerous Pageants for Summer Guests.

West Michigan communities have planned a full program for 1936 guests. Pageants and festivals, sports and tournaments are only a few of the things that have been planned.

The program opens with the Blossom Festival at St. Joseph and Benton Harbor and swings along with golf and tennis tournaments, shoots for archers, regattas for the boating enthusiast and various kinds of fishing from fly fishing to deep sea fishing.

Many Festivals Scheduled.

There are a wealth of pageants and festivals scheduled. National Cherry Festival at Traverse City, Pere Marquette Pageant at Ludington, the Manistee National Forest Festival. The annual Hiawatha Pageant at Petosky are some of the better known festivals.

The interest in puppets and tiny theatres has become universal and for the the first time there will be Marionette Conference at Holland which will be attended by puppeteers from all over the country.

What is probably the only archery roving course is found on the shores of Crystal Lake. The course has been laid out with 39 targets, spaced from 30 to 100 yards and ranging in size from a woodchuck to a bear. The course extends over 65 acres and is wooded with the exception of about five acres of orchard land with a beautiful view. Each target has a background so that arrows will not be broken or lost.

Archery experts who understand will appreciate the clout of 160 yards and the wand range. Another 100-yard range called the Robin Hood is free from wind and has a hillside at both ends. Shorter ranges are appropriately located and named after Sherwood Forest habitues.

An Old Legend.

Michigan like its near neighbor Wisconsin boasts numerous legends of Indian and Voyageur origin. White Lake, called Waubish-sibi or White River by the Indians because of the white clay deposits at its mouth, appeared on an old French map of 1726 as La Riviere Blanche. It may have been translated from the Indian or possibly it was given by the early French explorers. Legend has it that it was so-called by Father Marquette.

On his final journey, Father Marquette is supposed to have camped near the mouth of White River. Weary of the vast expanse of Lake Michigan he asked his companion to take him in the canoe and follow the little river for a short distance. As they entered the lake the last rays of the setting sun shone on the white birches at its edge. The white birches and pines became a white clad heavenly throng to the old priest and on their return to camp he asked the name of the river. On being told its Indian name he called it La Riviere Blanche, river of the water of life, in honor of his vision.

WING LAKE OPEN YEAR ROUND

One Hundred-Acre Private Fishing Preserve Has No Closed Season.

Wing Lake on Highway 32 will be open to anglers all through the closed season. This is good news for inveterate fishermen who cannot get enough of the sport during the open season. The lake, which is just two miles west of Bismarck, Mo., covers 100 acres. It is a spring fed lake and the only one of its size in this vicinity.

Wing Lake has its own hatcheries and since it is a private lake, no fishing license is required. The lake is open all year round.

"GREEN DIAMOND" TO MAKE INITIAL TRIP TOMORROW

Streamlined, Diesel-Powered Illinois Central Train Leaves for Chicago Tomorrow.

The "Green Diamond" streamlined, Diesel-powered Illinois Central train, will make its initial trip from St. Louis to Chicago on Monday morning, May 18. Leaving here at 8:55 it arrives in Chicago at 1:50 p. m., making the run in less than five hours.

The new train is streamlined and articulated and is insulated. The gaps between the cars are entirely enclosed at sides and roofs by means of diaphragms made of pigmented sheet rubber spanning from one car to the next. The passageways are enclosed and dust tight. The chair cars and diner lounge cars are completely air conditioned.

The interior and fittings of the train are very modern and have been designed to carry out the idea of speed and decisive movement. The kitchen is provided with an oil burning range, broiler, warming ovens, urn and steam table.

FINEST SEASON IN YEARS PROMISED FISHERMEN FOR TROUT AND PIKE

Scouts of State Conservation Department and Netting Crews Report Conditions Good.

The fishing season in Wisconsin on most species except large and small mouth black bass opened last Friday.

Scouts of the State Conservation Department who have been checking up on water and fish conditions, report that water and weather conditions have been quite favorable thus far this season. Excellent fishing is assured, barring radical changes in weather in the meantime.

One of the most accurate indications of fish conditions is gained from reports of spawn netting crews who have been operating in many lakes. Reports of muskellunge and pike increases have come in.

In trout sections wardens, guides and fishermen who have been scouting the streams are enthusiastic. Water levels are up and the trout are there and, according to one guide, trout fishing will be the finest in years.

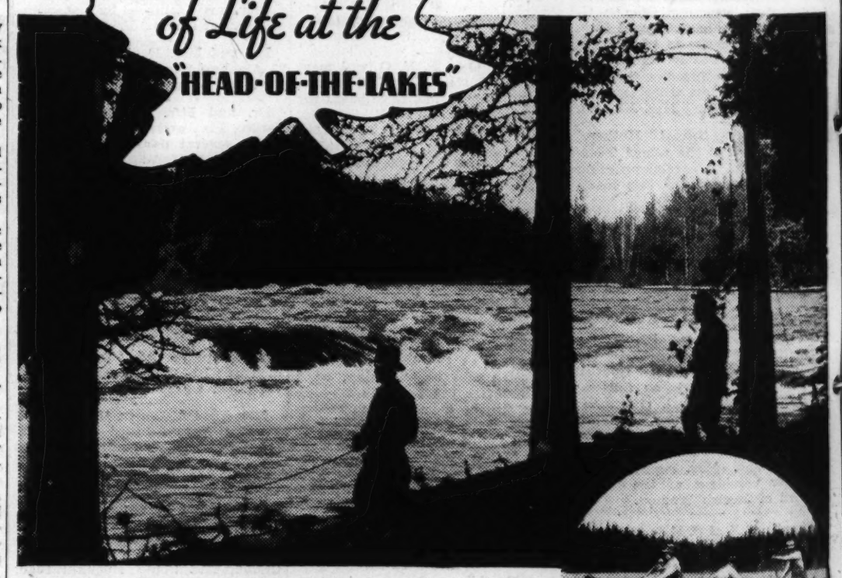
Below: A scene to make any ardent angler's hands itch for rod and reel. Fishing provides adventurous sport along the swift, teeming Nipigon.



ALONG THE CANADIAN SHORE of Lake Superior is Nature at her pure and loveliest best. Romantic, adventurous Indian names lure you—Nipigon, lake and river . . . Kakabeka Falls . . . Manitou Lake . . . Eagle Lake . . . Lake of the Woods . . . and thus west to Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

Fish?—Here are sparkling lakes, rushing rivers, brawling trout-streams—filled with finny beauties to match your skill with rod and reel! Forest?—here are miles and miles of green-treed hills . . . redolent of the soft and aromatic fragrance of age-old pines! Scenic beauty?—Here are glories of height and glade to rival the majestic Rockies!

Throughout the whole Nipigon, Manitoba and Saskatchewan area you'll find good motor roads . . . Inviting camping grounds . . . Comfortable cabins, cottages and log bungalows . . . Modern hotels and inns.

Inquire today at your nearest Canadian railway or steamship office for information. Or simply use the coupon.

A news-worthy Nipigon picture: for there, paddling in the bow, is Canada's monarch, H.M. King Edward VIII.

Here is the fisherman's paradise! Judging by this angler's interest in choosing the next fly—there's plenty more to be caught in the rushing northern Manitoba rivers.

Do you long to taste the satisfying goodness of fish fresh-caught, and cooked to perfection over a crackling wood fire? Then head north to Canada this summer!

Australia Planning World-Wide Range Short Wave Station

A NEW short-wave station is to be erected at Perth, the capital of Western Australia, by Amalgamated Wireless, Ltd., which operates VK2ME at Sydney and VK3ME at Melbourne. Plans call for building the transmitter in time to have it in operation late this spring. It will have a wave range from 20 to 40 meters, and is planned to afford world-wide reception.

Stronger reception of the night-time program of the British and German stations in the 11-75 meg. band is reported.

Programs on the French short-wave stations have improved materially, especially as more good music is being broadcast.

VPD, at Suva, Fiji Islands, is reported broadcasting between 11:30 p. m. and 12:30 midnight.

The Saturday matinee performances in the Metropolitan Opera spring season will be broadcast by tte big Pittsburgh and Bound Brook transmitters, as well as by the regular NBC networks. W8XK and W3XAL will carry the first broadcast on May 16, and W2XAD and W2XAF, the second one on May 23.

JVM, Nagasaki, is broadcasting reports of Japanese baseball games on 10.74 meg. at 3:30 p. m. Saturdays and Sundays.

A new station reported is HJ3ABX, Bogota, Colombia, on 1.12 meg. late at night. Another new one is HRD, at La Celbia, Honduras, on 6.235 meg.

XGO, at Nanking, China, is a good DX target. It broadcasts news and other programs daily at 11 a. m. on 7.53 meg.

CQN, in Portuguese China, has shifted to 9.525 meg. from 6 to 7:30 a. m. Mondays and Fridays.

JVN, 10.66 meg., and JVP, 7.51, Japan, are reported testing from 3 to 4 p. m. Mondays and Thursdays to determine the frequencies best suited for special daily broadcasts.

PLP, Java, is reported heard with good volume on 11 meg.

The transmitter on the British liner, Queen Mary, will use the call letters, GBTT, on the ship's maiden voyage to New York, which is to start May 27. It will operate on a number of frequencies in the ship-to-shore bands, from 17.80 to 16.42, 13.34 to 12.35, 8.84 to 8.20 and 4.42 to 4.10 meg.

VQG, a phone station at Nairobi, Kenya, Africa, has been heard talking with London, on 19.62 meg., between 6:30 and 7 a. m.

Television Test Sets Extremely Complicated

FORMAL television tests outside the laboratories are scheduled to begin in the summer, possibly by the end of June, when picture signals will be broadcast from aerials on top of the Empire State Building in New York City. What these tests develop in the six months following may determine largely what the engineers can do toward making television in the home practicable. Ultra short waves around five meters will be used.

Meanwhile the television sets that probably will be used in the tests to receive pictures and show them in a five by seven-inch size have 14 control knobs and seven others for focusing and sizing the pictures, as well as 33 tubes and other complications. Even if some factories eventually begin making television sets, the price is likely to be anywhere from $300 to $800 and $900 for some time before mass production can bring it down anywhere near that of a really good radio set of the present day.

Hour-Long Morning Programs Planned.

THE first of a series of hour-long morning programs on the CBS network daily except Saturday and Sunday, long the topic of rumor, is set for 8 a. m. Monday, June 1. Each day's program will be divided into sections. One short section will be built around the musical drama idea, another will feature a playlet of the domestic problems and joys of an average young couple. Once or twice a week, probably, part of the programs will be devoted to religious music. There will also be a domestic science period in a "clinic" for discussion of personal problems of listeners. KMOX is among the stations scheduled for the series.

Addresses at luncheon rallies of Young Republican clubs in several cities will be broadcast by the CBS net at 11:30 a. m. Saturday.

Capt. Bob Bartlett, the veteran Arctic explorer, will be Robert L. Ripley's guest this evening.

Wednesday night's Cavalcade program will be based on a lumbering episode in the life of Steve Hanks, a cousin of Abraham Lincoln, and a story of the Texas oilfields in 1898.

Vivian della Chiesa, the soprano, is singing on three network programs, at 5:45 p. m. Tuesdays on the WJZ net with Harry Kogen's orchestra, at 8:30 p. m. Thursdays on the same chain with Edward Davies, baritone, and Charles Sears, tenor, and with Joseph Gallichio's orchestra Friday, June 3, she will have an additional Wednesdays' program.

The first National Conference on Educational Broadcasting has been called by the Federal Communications Commission to meet in Washington Dec. 10, 11 and 12.

Gabriel Heatter, news commentator for the Mutual chain, will broadcast nightly from the Queen Mary, at 7:15. WGN will carry his talks Saturday, May 30, and Sunday.

The units placing first, second and third, in the Washington University Sing tomorrow night, will be broadcast over KMOX next Saturday, at 10:45 p. m.

Improved Radio Set-Up Planned For Conventions

WITH a separate microphone installed at each delegation's floor position for the first time, the average delegate to the Republican national convention in Cleveland will have a greater voice in convention activities than ever before, according to plans approved by the Committee on Arrangements and announced by the National Broadcasting Co.

"Through a new microphone system now being installed in the Cleveland Auditorium," Alfred H. Morton, manager of the NBC program department, said, "every speech, vote or even poll of delegates from the floor will be picked up and be made available to listeners over NBC networks. This system will be connected also with the Auditorium's public address system, so that a speaker anywhere in the hall may be heard clearly by the entire convention.

As a result, the average delegate will have a greater voice in convention activities than ever before, and the voters back home will have the opportunity to follow the political proceedings better than ever."

One permanent microphone will be placed at the chairman's position in each delegation. A wire will run from each microphone to a "floor microphone control board" installed at a convenient position adjacent to the stand of the permanent chairman of the convention.

An engineer will be on duty at this post at all times when the convention is in session. A legible legend, a signal light and a push button for each delegation will be installed on the control board, in addition to a master release button which will enable the control board operator to connect instantaneously any delegation microphone and the public address system. This can be done between the time when the chairman recognizes a delegate on the floor and the delegate begins to speak.

This will facilitate the parliamentary procedure, as no special instruction from the chairman to the control board operator will be necessary. The system will make it possible for the convention chairman and the chairmen of the respective delegations to be heard clearly, which has not always been the case in past conventions.

The installation will be of particular advantage in relaying the vote from the floor to the chair. Heretofore, voting has proceeded too fast for radio floor facilities to follow.

The floor microphone system will be connected with the broadcast networks, the public address system and the news reels.

NBC to Observe 10th Anniversary For Six Months

More Than 200 Special Programs From Almost Every Country in World With Climax Nov. 15, Planned.

A CELEBRATION of the tenth anniversary of the National Broadcasting Co. as an active force in radio is planned to extend over six months, during which more than 200 special programs from all over the world will be carried by the WEAF and WJZ networks.

Official opening of the six-month celebration is set for the Magic Key program at noon today on the WJZ chain and KWK when John B. Kennedy will pay tribute to the NBC. The climax is scheduled for Nov. 15, exactly 10 years after the first NBC network broadcast over 23 stations reaching from Boston to Kansas City.

Music by world-famous singers and symphony orchestras, addresses by noted educational authorities and broadcasts featuring stage, movie and radio stars of many countries will be among the features.

Prizes will be awarded for the best children's program script, for a special NBC march and to children in grade schools and students in high schools and colleges for essays of merit.

An award for the best one-act play by a distinguished author also will be given during the celebration. The winning play will be broadcast on or about Nov. 15.

Foreign Programs.

THE most comprehensive series of international programs ever broadcast over the networks also will be heard from June until Nov. 15. When John F. Royal, NBC vice-president in charge of programs, and Fred Bate, NBC European representative, arrive in New York on the Queen Mary, they will confer with Dr. Max Jordan, NBC Continental European representative, who arrived here to outline a series of world-wide broadcasts in honor of the occasion.

The NBC program executives plan to pick up special programs from all parts of the earth, including all capitals in Europe, Australia and Africa, and salutes from every large broadcasting company in the world.

Each of the 97 stations affiliated with the NBC-Red and NBC-Blue coast-to-coast networks also will participate in the anniversary. A special NBC tenth anniversary plaque, designed by Richard Loederer, industrial designer, and executed by John Lins, noted sculptor, who has designed plaques for King Edward VIII of England, will be displayed in all NBC stations from coast to coast.

Other programs will cover radio engineering developments. Dramatic programs will trace the development of radio from its early stages to its present day place in the lives of the American public. A festival of classical and dance music features and programs will be conducted in co-operation with women's clubs and educational leaders.

The first hook-up of stations dates back to 1922 when WJZ, New York, and WGY, Schenectady, joined to broadcast a world series baseball game. But real network broadcasting did not become a fact until the one of Nov. 15, 1926. That program lasted four hours, and included the first pick-up from a city remote from the central studios. Graham McNamee was the announcer, and the late Will Rogers and Mary Garden and Walter Damrosch took part in it.

It was nearly a year after that date when, in September, 1927, the Columbia Broadcasting System organized a hook-up that has developed into the present CBS network.

BOY SCOUTS PREPARING FOR CAMPARALL TESTS

Nature of Some Competitions This Week Kept Secret Until Day Arrives.

St. Louis Scouts were busy this week-end with signal flags, rope and fire-by-friction sets in final preparation for the Spring Camparall in which their knowledge of such things will be subjected to competitive tests next Friday afternoon, Saturday and Sunday on the old aviation field, in Forest Park, at 5400 Oakland avenue.

Various member troops of the St. Louis Scout Council have entered 175 patrols, composed of 1400 picked scouts, in the camparall this year. Their activities, from the pitching of tents at 4 p. m. Friday to campbreaking at the same hour Sunday, will be supervised by 375 adult leaders.

While the program for the event has been announced in much detail, that part which is of greatest importance to the Scouts, anxious to win streamer trophies for their troops, has been kept secret. Not until 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, when field events are scheduled to begin, will the contestants be informed in which of the many scouting activities they will be tested by the judges.

Thirteen undertakings, including map-making, nature observations, life-saving, judging, and use of the compass, have been listed from which the judges will choose eight for the important testing.

To insure the highest possible degree of preparation, camparall officials have agreed to select the scouts to represent each patrol in a particular event only at the moment the event is called for competition. Thus, when two boys are needed for a contest in Morse signalling, any two of the eight in a patrol may be summoned to go into action for the honor of their troop.

This selective process has been made council-wide by the requirement that each troop pick its camparall patrol by long inter-troop contests. The final awards will be determined by the rating of a patrol in relation to that of other units from the same council district.

The Cubs, boys under 12 years old who are organized for pre-scout training, will have a separate program in the camparall. Special features will be a demonstration of various types of shelters and a parade in which unusual types of vehicles will be shown. About 2000 Cubs will compete.

Councillors for older scouts engaged in the Explorer Scout program, designed to develop vocational interests, were appointed last week. They are, with the subjects in which they will assist the scouts: Fred Hebbezer of Hadley Vocational School, craftsmanship; Prof. Franz A. Berger of Washington University, engineering; James H. Huston, Federal Land Bank, agriculture; Dr. R. Emmett Kane, health; Herman Schwartz, nature; and J. Ross Blackford, seamanship.

The Washington University chapter of Alpha Phi Omega, scouting fraternity, has arranged to take troops of underprivileged scouts to Lion's Den camp for brief visits during the summer and fall.

Scoutmasters of Negro troops will meet at dinner June 2 at Poro College to hear an address by Stanley Harris, director of the Inter-racial division of the national scout council. Plans for a camp for Negro scouts at Lion's Den late in the summer will be discussed.

Dr. W. F. Friedewald and Dr. M. K. O'Heeron will accompany St. Louis scouts on the canoe trips in Minnesota this summer. Dr. Friedewald will be physician during the first trip, June 20, and Dr. O'Heeron will make the second journey, beginning July 6.

Eight troops went to Lion's Den camp for week-end stays yesterday. They were Troop 176, St. Peter's Church, 31, Grace M. E. Church, 22, Walnut Park School, 208, Salem M. E. Church, 83, St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, 120, Church of the Holy Apostles, 60, Union Avenue Christian Church, and 5, Webster Groves Presbyterian Church.

Star Scout badges were awarded to George L. Batz, Frank J. Dochnal, and Roland J. Fiscer, and two other scouts, Harold L. Holsher and Charles Malone, received life badges at a court of honor of Troop 63, Oak Hill Presbyterian Church, last week.

Girl Scouts.

Fourteen St. Louis Girl Scout leaders will attend the twelfth annual conference of the Covered Wagon region at Colorado Springs, Colo., next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Other states in the region, besides Missouri, are Colorado, Iowa, Kansas and Nebraska.

The St. Louisans who will attend the meeting are Mrs. Louis Burlingham, Miss Elizabeth Bealer, Miss Julia Schmidt, Mrs. Frank Mayfield, Mrs. Monroe C. Lewis, Miss Jane Waite, Mrs. J. Burr Taylor, Miss L. W. Caldwell, Miss Ruth Pearcy, Mrs. Charles Wiegand, Miss Ruth A. Sampson, Miss Georgia Flowers, Miss Ruth Grove and Miss Lydia Seaver.

Troop 1 of Webster Groves will celebrate its eighth anniversary at 8:30 p. m. Tuesday, at the First Congregational Church in Webster Groves, with a mother and daughter banquet.

Mrs. Edwin Hubell is captain of a new troop recently organized at St. Marcus Evangelical Church. The unit will be known as Troop 113.

Italians Can Scent Sanctions by 30 Pct. Alcohol Required in Gasoline.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, May 16.—There is a scent of sanctions in the Roman air.

Since the law went into effect requiring 30 per cent alcohol in gasoline, the alcoholic perfume in the capital beats all the lilacs and tulips one ever saw.

Sanctions have had some curious effects. In Naples if one calls a "taxi!" like as not a man drives up in a motorcycle and sidecar, all painted bright green like the regular taxis. It costs much less and saves a lot of gasoline. The gasoline supplement on regular taxis has been jumped 10 centimes so it is now a lira (eight cents) on every ride.

A pack of cigarettes has no tinfoil. It was needed for war purposes. Waxed paper serves instead.

There are dozens of busses driving about Rome with a hump on their backs. These are the "gassogeno" buses which run on a gas created from burning charcoal.

SAYS SHE IS WIFE OF MAN WHO LOST MEMORY IN WAR

Woman Claims Living "Unknown Soldier" in Rodez, France.

RODEZ, France, May 16.—Anthelme Mangin, France's living "unknown soldier," who lost his memory on a World War battlefield, has been tentatively claimed by Madame Rene Le May as her missing husband. A military court at Rodez permitted her to take Mangin to the little flat in Vincennes, where she lived before the war.

The soldier's name is not even his own, but was bestowed on him by a court decision.

Since March, 1935, he has been living alternately with two families, each of which claimed him. For Mangin, the past goes back only to a day in February, 1918, when military police found him wandering in the trenches. He could not remember who he was, nor were identification papers found on him. The Government published his picture and 200 persons claimed him.

Mme. Le May told the court her husband was called to the front in 1914. Suddenly she stopped receiving letters. The War Department said he was "missing."

URGES PREPARATION TO CASH BONUS BONDS

JOPLIN, Mo., May 16.—Careful preparation for cashing of bonus bonds for war veterans by postmasters was urged by Postmaster W. Rufus Jackson of St. Louis in an address today before the annual convention of the Missouri chapter of the National Association of Postmasters of the United States.

More than 3,000,000 registered letters, each containing the proper number of $50 bonus bonds and a check to cover odd amounts, will be turned over to postoffices by Federal Reserve Banks June 15. The St. Louis postoffice will receive about 130,000 and the Kansas City office about 215,000.

These registered letters will be sent to the proper postoffices in the respective districts for delivery to the addressee only. Under no circumstances will the letters be delivered to anyone except the properly identified owner. Veterans wishing to cash bonds may do so at the postoffice at which they receive them.

Bonds must be presented by the owner in person and the postmaster, or his employe, after obtaining proper identification, will send the bonds and application for redemption to central Postal Savings accounting offices where checks on the United States Treasury will be issued and mailed to the applicant.

In order to establish identification, the signatures of two witnesses will be required on the bonds presented for payment and in some cases fingerprints may be required. City police departments will be asked to assist in fingerprinting when necessary and it was suggested that Postmasters obtain large halls in which to receive applications.

Issues Warning on Blind Articles

The Industrial Aid for the Blind, Inc., in a warning issued yesterday, stated that products of the institution, consisting solely of brooms and mops, may be identified by an attached label, bearing the seal of the State of Missouri and the words "Blind Kraft." Salesmen for some manufacturers are representing goods falsely as having been made by sightless workers, it was said.

In the HOLLYWOOD WHIRL

by

Margaret Post Niemeyer

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

HOLLYWOOD, May 16.

WELL, the Great Garbo is back in Hollywood. Slipped off a train in San Bernardino, while studio representatives and the curious cooled their heels at Pasadena, and was whisked away in the car of a friend—it was NOT George Brent's—to go immediately into seclusion from which she has not since emerged, not even to report, unless it was by telephone, to her film employers. Apparently the few words she said to the ship news reporters in New York which, by a stretch of the imagination, became an "interview" frightened her into a complete silence for it just happened, quite by accident, that I was at the San Bernardino station when she stepped off the train and the best I could get, when I suddenly recognized her, was a very wan smile which meant nothing at all. That is as close, a bit closer perhaps, as anyone ever comes to an interview with Greta out here.

GRETA GARBO

Garbo looked paler, if possible, than ever but she was not changed otherwise by her long vacation abroad. All the hue and cry about changed hair styles in Hollywood meant nothing to her and she still clung to her own distinctive uncurled shoulder bob. Once settled in her Brentwood home I am told she got right down to her steady diet of chopped raw vegetable salad. About every vegetable of which California boasts, goes into it and she eats nothing else. She missed it during the winter in Sweden and on the train across this country but I expect she has caught up, now.

● I SAW ALICE FAYE who is an excellent and enthusiastic swimmer, at the Del-Mar Beach Club yesterday doing swan dives, jack knives, back dives and various other fancy flips in one of the new one-piece rubberized satin bathing suits, in flax blue. Around her white bathing cap, holding it snugly to her head was a two-inch blue, shirred, rubber bandeau, fastening at the side front with a cluster of little rubber flowers in blue and yellow. This gadget, Alice assures me, does double duty. It adds a decorative note, and by holding the cap firm, keeps the hair dry, and to demonstrate the latter point, off came her cap and out fell her chestnut—just a week or so ago they were yellow—curls, all perfectly dry.

Jeanette MacDonald has introduced for evening wear a little comb or pin worn at the side of her head to which most realistic butterflies are attached. Perhaps these will grow, like Gloria Stuart's bracelets, but, so far, Jeanette has stuck to butterflies.

—o—o—

● KAY FRANCIS, acclaimed everywhere as one of the world's best dressed, was upholding that reputation in a boudoir scene at the studio a few days ago. The scene which I watched being made showed a bedroom done in soft tones of blue, yellow and ivory. In a carved, ivory toned bed, which was luxuriously equipped with silk sheets and pillow slips, and with a blue quilted satin spread lined in yellow pulled up over her, sat Kay reading a book and, yes, smoking a cigarette.

Her sleeveless night-dress was of apricot shadow-proof satin and had a deep yoke of Alencon lace. The scene "shot," Kay slipped on a soft yellow kimono embroidered with small birds and flowers in white, and went into her portable dressing room to get ready for the next "take." During this interim she showed me an evening coat. The wrap was of silver lame quilted lengthwise onto wool so that it gave the effect of a very heavily corded material. Then the seams were sewn so that the cordings came together in a herring-bone pattern. The result was unusual and unbelievably stunning. A high collar and huge revers finished this striking creation.

At the new Wilshire Brown Derby I saw Norma Shearer and her husband, Irving Thalberg. Norma was wearing a white fox cape and with it one of fashion's newest gadgets, a "fur-clip." They are made just like the dress clips only the prong is much longer and stronger, and Miss Shearer's was a magnificent star sapphire, simply set, in platinum. If you go in for summer furs you might pick up a star sapphire and platinum clip somewhere.

ENSENADA, LAND OF MEXICANS, and visiting Americanos, is attaining a reputation among the film stars as a try-out headquarters. Groucho Marx is there testing his new gags on the simple natives. Marx says these natives have no let down reaction. In fact, they have no reaction at all.

Alice Faye went to Ensenada after returning to her own chestnut color hair which we have already mentioned to become used to it by herself and to acqure a new sun tan complexion to match the brown locks.

—o—o—

● MARIE WILSON and her heavy suitor, Nick Grinde, the director, were dining at Sardi's last night and Marie, the "dumb blonde" looked anything but her title in a perfectly tailored black Chesterfield, made of one of those new nubby wools which set off her slender figure beautifully, and a perky black hat set at a smart angle, adorned at the front by a single green pompon. When I asked about constant rumor that wedding bells will ring for her in the fall, Marie only blushed and said: "Well, if they do I am going to have a pink wedding—a pink wedding gown—pink flowers and pink bridesmaids." From that one gathers that her favorite color is pink. As a matter of fact I saw her in one of the loveliest creations in that color at a recent movie ball.

Keeping track of possible romances by checking up on the different luncheon and dinner dates by the way, has the Hollywood gossips in something of a daze. Just the other day Carole Lombard lunched with Addison Randall and the word got around pretty fast. But that same night she dined with Cesar Romero and Addison dined with Glenda Farrell. What do you make of that, Watson?

HERE COMES THE BRIDE--1936 MODEL

Cellophane and Spun Glass Are Latest Materials for Wedding Gowns

By SYLVIA STILES

WHEN the wedding guests start whispering "Here Comes the Bride," don't be surprised to discover that she has adopted forget-me-nots instead of orange blossoms as the symbol of the occasion and that her dress is made of spun glass instead of lace and satin.

The ceremony may be essentially the same as it was when mother went to the altar, but styles of flowers and wedding dresses have changed. No longer does the bride consider that hers isn't a conventional wedding unless there are orange blossoms in profusion and her gown is pure white. She has decided that forget-me-nots, for example, might mean more than the sweetness of the traditional white flowers. As for her wedding gown, white was all very well in mother's day, but in 1936 there are such chic and subtle tones as mauve and silver to consider.

As long as the present trend in fashionable weddings continues, a family will be lucky indeed to persuade the daughter of the household that she should wear her great-grandmother's quaint gown and the lace veil that is yellow with age. It may be traditional to follow this rule and it may also be lucky, but what are traditions and superstitions in the face of style? Cellophane and spun glass are two modern materials that give a certain swank to a June wedding, and even though this is a vary solemn occasion, a little swank is not without its merits. Cotton net is cool and airy, and it adds distinction when worn over a slip of rustling taffeta. Mousseline de soie is another fabric that is liked especially by those who want a crispness to their wedding, while chiffon has its advantages for the clinging type of costume.

In the manner of designing the 1936 version of the wedding dress, there is great variety. Picturesque moods are stressed whether the inspiration was gained from ancient, mediavel or modern times. The redingote theme which has proved so popular this season for formal costumes is used with success in the bridal dress. The long sleeved coat usually buttons from neckline to waistline then is cut away so that the underdress shows at the center front, the very full skirt flaring widely and sweeping into a long train. Lace, organdie, cotton net and chiffon are successful media for this style. An advantage of the theme is that the dress under the coat is a simply cut evening gown which may be used for many occasions.

HEAVY materials such as slipper satin or ottoman are used for the quaint mediavel gown which is gored from shoulders to hemline, has an unbroken line at the waist, tiny buttons at the center front and a prim turnover collar. Only the girl who looks well in severe fashions should choose this type of gown. The same is true of the shirtwaist style of wedding dress which, by the way, is less pronounced in the important collections than it was a year ago.

Pleated themes are very effective in the creation of a flattering wedding ensemble. They are most successful when the fabric is a crisp sheer such as organdie or mousseline. An individualized neckline can be made very becoming by a pleated finish, and a very full skirt becomes more graceful because of the heavy pleated edge of the hemline. The square neckline is ideally suited to the pleated vogue.

New ideas are being developed in headdresses as they are in gowns. The cap theme continues to be used but the topknot is much more extensive and interesting. This topknot consists of holding the tulle veil at the top of the head by means of a flower cluster, a pleated fan shaped ornament or a perky bow. If flowers are used, white violets, lilacs, forget-me-nots or gardenias are recommended rather than the orange blossoms. The flower theme is repeated by using tiny clusters to hold the veil at the hemline, one spray being caught at either side of the train.

An example of how a bride may combine something new, something old and something blue in the wedding dress is illustrated by the sketch. Traditional white satin was chosen for the very formal wedding gown but the "old" fabric was brought up to date by the selection of a modern design of costume as well as the topknot and flower choice on the veil. The basque-like bodice as a little flaring peplum while the five-gored skirt measures about seven yards at the hemline. The high neckline has a bow at the front and there is a bow to finish the waistline. The sleeves are decidedly puffed above the elbows but are finished with long tight cuffs.

The long tulle veil has a shorter, petticoat veil which is caught into a topknot arrangement with a bow of the tulle and a tiny cluster of forget-me-nots. These flowers are repeated at the edges of the veil. The bride carries an old-fashioned bouquet combining pink and blue forget-me-nots with sweetheart roses. The large bouquet with tulle bow and streamers has gone out of fashion and in its place the modern bride carries a tight bouquet or prayer book when her wedding is a very formal, indoor one or a loose spray of garden flowers if she has an outdoor wedding.

SINCE the forget-me-not colors of pink and blue are featured in the color scheme of the bride's costume which is illustrated they are suitable for repetition in the gowns of the bridesmaids. Their dresses should be made over the same pat-

Linen Fashions For Hot Weather

ONE bolt of patterned linen material will make a complete summer wardrobe now that women are choosing the same colors and designs for their bathing suits as they are for their evening dresses. A bright background of rosy pink which is splashed with navy and white is the type of motif which is well liked for summer. Yellow which is combined with brown and leather tan or with two tones of green also is popular.

The bathing suit which is made of this figured linen probably will have shoulder straps of a solid color unless it is of the halter type which calls for a contrasting halter. Evening dresses subscribe to the shirtwaist vogue, or are quaintly reminiscent of another era. For daytime wear in town there are redingotes of the same pattern or two-piece jacket dresses that have a tailored flair.

This New York

by Lucius Beebe

NEW YORK, May 16.

MANY folks wonder why two such distinguished authors in their own right as Archibald McLeish and John Chamberlain, are content to work in the impenetrable anonymity of "Fortune" magazine. Irresistibly handsome salaries is the usual guess, but their friends say they resent their absent by-lines and both have cultivated curious social and economic outlooks, perhaps as a by-product of editorial seclusion. Editorial writers on "Fortune" and "Time" are notoriously characterized by a sort of militant assertiveness in their persons, especially in the company of other professional writers. It serves as a psychological compensation for their lack of literary fame.

Members of the staff of "The New Yorker," on the other hand, while mad as hatters, are docile, amiable and affable fellows, given only to such harmless pursuits as setting fire to their own beds and frightening members of the Harvard Club, across the street, by making faces out the window. They are not only reputed to be the best paid of the town's scriveners, but they also are famous and highly touted as the most sophisticated of Manhattanites. No jollification is a success without a "New Yorker" editor present and barkeeps salute them respectfully in the best saloons. Writers for "The New Yorker" and "Time" might be respectively represented by T. E. Powers' little men tagged "Joy" and "Gloom."

THE SECOND DINNER of Les Amis d'Escofier, the town's newest association of gourmets, recruited largely from the ranks of professional restaurateurs, maitres d'hotel and chefs, proved a revelation in the field of gustatory endeavor. Aside from routine matters of administration, there were no speeches. No wine salesmen were able to turn the occasion into one of exploitation for their merchandise (the rock whereon most previous eating societies have foundered ingloriously). And the dinner itself, prepared under the direction of Jacques Gesell and the chefs of the New Yorker Hotel, was a triumph of simplicity, a study in gustatory understatement. It included caviar with sherry or Dubonnet, a cream sorrell soup, supreme of sea bass, Raye Dejazet, accompanied by a Cruze bottling of '26 Chablis; a baron of spring lamb, roasted entire and served with Chateau Lafite '29, chicory salad and smoked turkey, and the customary formal ices, cognacs and coffee. The service, it should be recorded, would have done credit to the major domo's staff of any palace in Europe.

During the meal we fell into converse with the learned Selmer Fougner of "Wine Trail" fame, who told us that since the last meeting of the Friends of Escoffier, at which the first '28 champagne, a Bollinger, had been served, he had experimented among other bottlings, notably Mumm's and Cliquot, and found them, he asserts without reservation, the greatest sparkling wines of his time in promise and in early fulfillment. We ourselves have been favored by the importers with a bottle of Moet and Chandon for this year and, in view of its every quality of light, dry effervescence and extraordinary vitality, it would seem that the current generation of champagne drinkers is among the most fortunate since first Dom Perignon, upon tasting the wine of his discovery, exclaimed, "I am drinking stars!"

THE stained-glass school of thought in bar decorations seems to be gaining ground and the opening of the Westbury Hotel's new Polo Bar contributed the latest addition to this curious architectural lapse. When the astute Shuberts a year or so since inaugurated a quality restaurant in the Edison green room, the first comers were galvanized to discover illumination through what a first view appeared to be Gothic windows of ecclesiastical design. Only closer inspection discovered their theme to be beauteous youths and maidens engaged in anything but saintly diversions. The rebuilt Jack and Charlie's, too, went in for stained glass, illustrated with the "21" coat of arms, which is gaudy with a what seems to be quails in aspic and an elegantly Latinate motto, but it gave the downstairs room a rathskeller appearance, and they probably are doomed to oblivion. Stained glass has so long been associated in people's minds with burial vaults and lady chapels that it fails to sit easily on the consciousness of diners and drinkers. Nobody feels quite right hoisting Tom Collinses in a funeral-home atmosphere, even

MY OPINION

by Martha Carr

Letters intended for this column must be addressed to Martha Carr at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Mrs. Carr will answer all questions of general interest but, of course, cannot give advice on matters of a purely legal or medical nature. Those who do not care to have their letters published may enclose an addressed and stamped envelope for personal reply.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

DO YOU think I am terribly selfish in leaving my little boy this summer to take a trip? My husband and I have been planning this trip for 12 years. Unless something unexpected happens, we shall go this summer.

Our little boy is four and a half years old. Our reason for not taking him is that we think we will have more of a rest and a better time alone. And then he is used to regular meals and going to bed at night regularly at 8 o'clock. We like recreation, like dancing, and, of course, in strange towns we could not intrust him to anyone we could get in for the purpose.

We have a very dependable couple who would take care of our little son during our absence. They work for us and live with us all the time. He can stay with them or be with my dad and stepmother, if we decide to leave him. But, should anything happen to him while we are gone, I could never forgive myself. What would you do?

I know it is right for a mother to have a little fun, but she would never want to pay the high price that his misfortune during her absence might bring. B. L. S.

Your qualms are only the devoted mother's natural apprehension, when she allows one of her children out of her sight. Were you to stay at home forever and never leave him a second, troubles, as you know, might come.

With such reliable and dependable people, you can leave him. I think it not only right that you and your husband should have this trip you have been planning so long, which probably will put new life and new endeavor into your future, and thus enable you to help your child more when you return. Too, I believe it hard on a child of that age to take long journeys among strange people, and to suffer the consequences of uncertain food and irregular hours. He will not worry after the first day, if at all, and when you return you will be surprised that the change has been so good for him.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

I have been married 14 months and am very much in need of advice, although I am deeply in love with my husband. But the age-old problem is facing me. My husband just cannot let go his mother's apron-strings. It is very discouraging for me.

We live only a block from his folks and my husband will not consent to moving away. And when I am at that house, they treat me with the utmost disrespect. They call me all kinds of names and my husband will not resent it; if he shows any resentment at all, they laugh and do it all over again. It goes without saying that I cannot feel comfortable there.

Whenever my husband wants anything done to his clothes, he takes them to "Mom;" I am not treated as a wife at all and my mother-in-law tries to order me around. I do as I please, but my husband walks the chalk line at her command.

Mrs. Carr, I don't know which way to turn. When I plead with my husband he says I am jealous. Who wouldn't be, in the circumstances? I would leave but we have a little boy four months old.

You have helped so many, please find a way for me. Kindly forgive the appearance of this letter and the pencil as I have no ink at this time. KAY.

Probably you were like most other young girls; you gave no thought to these conditions before you married. If you lived in town, you could have watched the signs in this mother who is of the species that would rather destroy the happiness of their sons than accept the fact that they have taken on other responsibilities which must be met first.

I know the situation must be trying for the boy, too, because he has not yet learned that he can toddle alone and control his muscles (as babies are compelled to do).

Give the boy a little more time and appeal to his pride as a man and an individual. Stay away from your in-laws as much as possible, but be agreeable when you are with them and also independent. That will surprise them, somewhat; and show no irritation when they call names and laugh. Shut right up, like a clam, and give it as little importance as possible.

You might say to your husband that your feeling is not jealousy, but a little disappointment in the fact that he has less pride and independence than you could possibly have imagined.

You are both very young, but should move farther away.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

I also read your column and think you are doing much good. I presume the ex-sailor is a stranger in our city and is looking about to find friends. We would gladly receive him into our circle, in gratitude for what others did for a nephew of mine when he was a sailor. This nephew would be about this boy's age now. Please tell him to call LAclede 3432, and ask for S. E. C.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

I am coming again for advice. I am 17 years old and like a neighbor boy very well. We go to school together and are always talking and joking there together. But, outside of school he hardly bows to me let alone stops and talks. Should I speak first and start a conversation?

Now that the different classes are going to have a picnic the last of school, and he is not in my class, I wonder if it would be all right to invite him, as we can invite one person to go with us. I have never been out with him. Should I sit back and wait for him to make the first effort?

When writing you, does one have to sign their own name for it to be answered in the column or will a pen name do? SAL.

Since the boy shows this reserve outside of school, his real reason may be that he thinks you may just want him as a school friend and not one whom you might care to invite to your home, and this is good taste on his part. I believe, unless some of the other girls are setting a precedent, that I would not issue the first invitation, even a school affair.

Ordinarily a pen name is quite all right. But should the correspondent expect to hear from someone else through the column, or is writing on some subject which requires an evidence of good faith and is not hiding back of an anonymous signature in order to shield himself, he should sign both a pen name and give his own name and address; this last will not, of course, be published.

My Dear Mrs. Carr:

I SHOULD like your help about a few things. First I want to ask what kind of luggage one carries. For a two weeks vacation, my case will not be large enough. I have a medium size traveling bag. Although old, it is a good one, and not shabby. Would that be all right or would it be too out of date?

When traveling by bus, is it all right to have a very small case to keep right near one's seat, this to carry necessities to freshen up at stops? Yours gratefully, HOLIDAY.

If you travel much, you will see every variety of luggage—old, new, middle age; and this among the very nicest and most experienced travelers. So you can, of course, use the two pieces you mention and will, too, have the small piece you mention to contain small needs. This will go in front of your feet in the bus. It must not be too large to keep in this way, as it might otherwise interfere with the comfort and convenience of other passengers.

THE WORLD AS WOMEN SEE IT

The Brainy Women As Husband Hunters

They Could Take Some Lessons From the More Feminine Types

By Virginia Irwin

THERE are, generally speaking, but three classes of women in this extraordinary old world of ours. The first class embraces all those delightful bits of femininity who even while kicking the slats in their cradles were exercising their inborn knowledge of how to attract the opposite sex. In the second class, fall those slightly unfortunate females who, although gifted with some measure of comeliness, are burdened with a slight oversupply of brains. And in the third class are jumped the misfits, the gals born without a trace of what it takes to set a man to thinking of a little woman waiting in a little cottage with roses vining over the door.

For this last class there's little hope. Poor souls, they're simply hors de combat from the beginning, but the brainy women who find their excess gray matter something of a handicap, could profit by studying their sisters who have gone through life without ever fumbling a catch where a man was concerned.

"Nothing suits a woman worse than that she herself or others for her, value her cleverness above her natural womanly characteristics," says A Berlin authority. And therein lies the tale

The little girl who wears her hair in curls and goes in for organdy dresses grows up to acquire a doting husband who provides mink coats and servants to take life's burdens from her fair and fragile shoulders. The little girl who spanks her hair into a braid and goes in for middies and serge skirts grows up to acquire a mahogany desk, the privilege of supporting herself, and the necessity of washing out her own stockings in the bathtub after a hard day at the office.

The little girl in curls and organdy knew what she was about and never wavered for a minute. The little girl in the middie blouse only thought she knew what she was about: she's "getting on" now and wishes that, instead of her tried and trusty typewriter, she had something less impersonal, like a husband. She no longer despises the slightly moronic dame who does nothing but play bridge all afternoon, eat a dinner that a maid has prepared, and then dance the legs off of her dead tired husband every evening in the week. In fact, she has begun to admire the doll who, seemingly without effort, keeps her husband in a dither of slavish attention. She has come to agree with the old saying that "happiness is hardly ever found for a woman elsewhere than in love and marriage."

BUT how to go about it? Why, by watching the dames whom nobody ever thought of calling clever, of course.

FOR instance, we'll say you're right now at the point in life where you'd like to pitch your alarm clock out of the window, and like the bantam-brained bride across the street, sleep until noon. Then you'd like to spend the afternoon spending your husband's next week's pay check and then you'd like to have him take you out and show you off in all the frippery his money paid for. Of course you, who started out in a middy blouse, feel a bit at sea even considering such a radical departure from your regular 5-to-5 office schedule. It's only natural that you should, but once you park your brains in the top drawer of the old mahogany desk and start out on the man hunt, you'll soon get your bearings.

First of all you simply must get over what Lorine Pruette, who wrote "Woman's Coming of Age," calls the stenographic attitude. Says Miss Pruette: "Many a woman executive remains always in the stenographic attitude toward some man in the organization, and he never quite ceases to expect her to remind him to wear his rubbers."

Of course, that technique is perfect when it comes to holding a job, but the only way to get a wedding band is give the impression that what you need more than anything in the world is someone you can depend upon. Remember you are no longer the efficient gal who ran both the boss and his business; now you're just a slightly helpless female who needs protection and care and a mink coat. In fact, a still better attitude to take is that you not only need protection and care and a mink coat, but that they are your birthright and you expect them

And now that you have repaired your mental attitude, you are ready to get down to the business of buying the equipment you will need on this man-hunting safari. First, throw away those mannish suits, tailored blouses and flat-heeled shoes. No man on earth ever had his heart disturbed by the sight of a gal done up in clothes that fairly scream, "Look at me, I'm what the efficient gal prefers." What you really need is something in lace with a few bows and ruffles and rick-rack, something soft and frilly and eloquently feminine. Even if your practical soul rebels against such sartorial slush, subdue your mental nausea and reason that your reward will offset the pain of feeling like something done up for a Mardi Gras float.

NEXT, prepare to be obliged to disappoint your old cronies whenever a man appears on the horizon. The gals who know the rules of man-hunting never travel in packs; they're lone wolves out stalking their prey and they know that no man on earth will entertain a whole bridge club just to be near the one member of the outfit in whom he happens to be interested. And they know, too, that a man immediately jumps to the conclusion when he sees a bunch of females together, that they're either wives out for a kaffee klatsch or old maids out discussing some intellectual problem. It's the alone and aloof gal that attracts the attention wherever she goes.

Speaking of going places, if you're too well stamped as an old maid in your old home town, there's nothing like taking your new act to greener pastures. Amelia Earhart once said that "adventuring about was better than any college education." And applied to the subject in hand, adventuring among strange males is the best training possible in learning new tricks. With your new wardrobe and the element of mystery provided by your "aloneness," you'll find every man you meet speculating as to whether you're a gal with a past, present or future. You can then decide which dramatization of yourself draws the most desirable males and go to work capitalizing on their interest.

And, as Mae West once said: "Don't be afraid to know more than one guy at a time." The more males you manage to keep in tow, the quicker one of them will resent competition and offer you a solitaire.

Of course, none of these bits of advice lay any claim to being either original or ultra-modern.

But the point that does need emphasizing is that clever women in tailored suits and flat-heeled oxfords quite often have the brains to run big businesses, but lack the sense to see that piloting the destiny of a corporation and promoting a man into a proposal are two very different things. They sit at their mahogany desks, in a swivel chair, with a battery of telephones demanding their attention, and expect some prince charming to ask for an afternoon appointment to beg their hand in the holy bond of matrimony. Even the little girl in the organdy dress and the blond curls knows that such things don't happen. She knows that brains are something of a handicap—something that men appreciate only in the wives of other men—and she avoids doing anything that might brand her as clever. She may have enough brains to get herself a college degree or too dumb to come in out of the rain, but in either event she gets what she wants—a husband.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

AMONG interesting women we have met knocking about town is Mrs. George Dunbar Fisher, who took over the optical company on Locust street and the branch on Grand, after the death of her husband two years ago. Previously she had given no more than passing attention to the business. Now it keeps her busy as president from 9 to 5 on weekdays and until noon on Saturdays. She allows herself a month's vacation in the winter and another month in the summer, "which are not just for play," she says, "because I have to keep up with the latest developments in our line. And getting away gives one a new perspective on things."

She attributes her success with the business to the fact that she does not have as her goal financial gain, but the happiness of her employes. "That is the only way you get co-operation, and the organization which is essential to any business."

Mrs. Fisher is a little woman, with short, graying hair, and wore a green and brown knitted suit and ghillie shoes the day we called on her. Her office is just the way Mr. Fisher left it, for sentimental reasons and because she has been too busy to make any changes. Pictures of his hunting dogs and bright prints hang on the paneled walls, and the only concession to femininity was a vase of artificial flowers on the rolltop desk. There is only one other woman connected with the business and that is Mrs. Fisher's secretary. The staff has not been changed in many years.

A capable housekeeper relieves Mrs. Fisher of the responsibilities of her apartment at 4401 McPherson avenue. She has a country place near St. Clair where she spends the week-ends. Her hobbies? "Well, if I had time for one, I think it would be French." That may be traced to the fact that she is a Benoist by birth. She is now a member of the board of the Alliance Francaise.

THERE'S A LITTLE old lady in the West End, who lives alone above a fruit store and is reputed to be fabulously rich. Every morning she goes below, buys a few oranges, takes them to a neighborhood delicatessen to have the juice squeezed out. Then she sits down and drinks her breakfast.

NO ONE YOU ever heard of before seems to win the soap ad contests or the "Bank Night" prizes. But we know the lucky gal who walked off with the hope chest filled with pretties made at the Convent of the Good Shepherd after we squandered our bottom dollar on a handfull of chances. It was Miss Helen Fusz, 6925 Delmar boulevard, who, singularly enough, is to be married next month. And she didn't even know her father had taken tickets! She gets to keep the cedar chest as well as the ivory blankets, and hand-made lingerie, and peach satin mules that spilled out of in the shop window. The underwear is all size 38, but it's no use trying to talk Miss Fusz out of her prize. She plans to have the things altered to fit.

WE HAD LUNCH the other day aboard the towboat "North Star" when she was tied up at the levee with five gasoline barges to be loaded at Wood River. Capt. James Grover took us quite by surprise when he said he put our name in the pot. And what came out of it was more of a surprise—roast beef, sliced tomatoes, mashed potatoes, Spanish rice, light bread baked right there in the galley, and, for dessert, tapioca and home-made doughnuts. There were six of us at the table, including Kenneth Dillman, designer and owner of the Diesel-powered tug, and Mrs. Dillman. The chef waited on us in undershirt, with a handkerchief knotted around his neck. He kept the coffee cups filled from a pot which, according to river traditions, must stand on the stove 24 hours a day.

There is a good deal of deck space aft on the streamlined tug, where deck tennis and shuffleboard will be set up if Mrs. Dillman has her way.

The old-time river captains are still doubtful about Dillman's experiment with Diesel engines. And his other new-fangled ideas. Whoever heard of a cedar-lined closet, like the one he has built at the end of a corridor, on a river towboat? He has also broken traditions by putting honest-to-goodness beds in the cabins for officers and guests.

There were green curtains at all the windows, presumably because that makes the cabins darker for the crew who have to sleep during the day, but really because the captain is Irish. The lounge above was furnished with spring steel chairs to absorb vibrations or make you seasicker. On the center table was a box of poker chips and a Bible.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

NEW YORK, May 16.

NEW YORK domesticity was rocked to its very base the other day by the absolutely unprecedented decision of a learned judge—"a Daniel come to judgment"—sitting in the Court of Domestic Relations.

Justice Jacob Panken, the Magistrate in question, r'ared back and passed a judicial miracle by ruling that wives who are financially able to do so must support their husbands when the latter cannot care for themselves!

Before him stood Mrs. Sadie Picker, who inherited a spot of money and also has a $20-a-week job, and her lawful spouse, George, who cannot get work in his trade of furrier and has been on relief since the first of the year. Panken decided that Mrs. Picker must help George out as long as she is in the chips, even modestly, while he gnaws the crust of charity.

The thing which startles me and causes me to wonder is what effect, if any, this will have upon the helpmates of the hundreds of successful "career women" here, who make good wages and expect their husbands to be equally zealous in bringing in the kopecks. It would not surprise me greatly if scores of the boys, bucked by the thrilling decision of the learned Justice, immediately announced their permanent retirement from all gainful toil and that they would spend all their time, in the future, in bars and ball parks!

NEW YORK WOMEN are modestly thrilled, at the moment, by the appointment of another woman to the Board of Education—and that woman not a mere political job-filler, but a teacher who is intelligent, liberal-minded and who knows school problems from the kindergarten right through to headquarters.

She is Mrs. Johanna M. Landolf, for years in the forefront of most of the fights here in favor of helpful school legislation. A good many years ago Mrs. Landolf founded the Kindergarten-6B Teachers' Association, which now has 9000 members and is a powerful force in all battles for the welfare of teachers and their charges.

Knowing that she is a battler of the old school, local folks are expecting that the fur will fly high when she does battle with some of the board's die-hards.

—oo—

NEW YORKERS seldom see a crocus, and robins are extremely scarce in the canyons, but we have a certain sign that hot weather is either here or just coming up the bay. One day cold soup magically appears upon all the restaurant menus, and we start reahing for the light clothes!

—oo—

EXCITING SAILING of the good old Berengaria a few midnights ago. Frantic newspaper photographers nearly knocked themselves out rushing to snapshots of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Howard, Anita Louise, Silvia Sydney and Margot Grahame, all sailing at once. Also on board were little Rita Bullitt, daughter of our Ambassador to Russia, and Mrs. Belloc Lowndes, the novelist, but the movie lights, as usual, draw most of the flashlight bulbs. And if that lugger reaches Southampton without a murder or two, considering the temperament aboard, it will be one of the world's wonders.

LYNNE FONTANNE and Alfred Lunt, always the leading acting married couple of the American stage, are still knocking the cash customers agog in "Idiot's Delight," Bob Sherwood's superb hokum which won the Pulitzer prize for drama when no one was looking. And when they get through performing in public they perform in private for their own amusement—painting amusing murals on the walls of their own Dutch kitchen.

SPEAKING of daubing, Audrey Fields, big-league society gal of this village, cannot be left alone with a plain bed, without painting its headboard and vice versa with old French figures gambolling here and there. Just a confirmed bed-painter, is Audrey. Hostesses, I suppose, just have to hide the beds, the paints, or probably both.

—o-o—

LESTER GABA, our famous sculptor in soap, has designed the guest cakes which will be used in the staterooms of the Queen Mary, colossal Cunarder soon to visit us for the first time. I had an advance peek at them. They are in circular shapes, like candy Life Savers, with "Queen Mary" embossed on them. Both smart and cleansing.

I CAN bear with the lucky ladies who are on the virgin voyage of the Queen Mary, for I have a deep-rooted antipathy for boats, though I rush around the world at a moment's notice. But I am practically consumed with envy of those fortunate women who sailed through the Atlantic skies on the maiden trip of the Zeppelin "Hindenburg" and landed on our shores with history in their handbags.

The beauteous Lady Hubert Wilkins, former show girl, was one. Another was Lady Drummond Hay, who begins writing stories the moment anything takes to the air. Still another was Mrs. Leslie Charteris, wife of the British novelist, who, still under 30, has written 17 best-selling mystery novels and is now outselling the late Edgar Wallace in the British Isles. Read him and shiver!

I'm a peaceful sort of girl, fairly contented with my earthly lot and not one given to envy, but the thought of these lucky women sailing above the clouds on the new luxury air liner to the New World fairly gives me the galloping willies. It's the sort of goofy thing I always want to do, heaven help me.

I ALWAYS TROT OUT a few fashion hunches, daffy though they may be.

The lady-bug, considered good luck in France (and in my hamlet of Manchester, N. H.) is having his way with decorative gadgets here today. Even fobs encrusted with such insects are popular at the moment . . . A violet-tinted hair rinse on gray or white hair is now considered very smart here for matrons who have allowed matters to go that far. A dash of violet eye-shadow and they look lovely. Want me to name names? . . . Did you know that there is now a nation-wide daily newspaper contest on to find the country's most beautiful hands? Obviously, no newspaper drudge need apply . . . A black net redingote over a printed dress of last season will make you feel all new . . . And get set to wear a Merry Widow sailor this summer—the larger the smarter.

PRACTICAL, Becoming VACATION CLOTHES

By PRUNELLA WOOD

SNOOPERS after the canker in the rose and the bug on the tomato plant will enjoy the hardy but becoming gardener's costume which is sketched at the far left. Even if one's enthusiasm for Maude Muller's memory withers away with the last lilac flower, it is well to have such an outfit in the closet, ready for picnics, neighboring auto jaunts, and so on. For the skirt is damp-resisting and tub-proof, and the blouse is beautifully tailored. Also, the shirt can be worn rough dry from the laundry.

ANY seasoned vacationer knows how comforting relaxing slacks are, whether the trip is taken by train, auto or ship. And if taken by plane—well, if you are taking a sleeper, a pajama outfit of the tailored, not boudoir, type, is just what you'll need.

—o-o—

MOST women headed for the country in summer, whether for a week-end or a real visit, pick up at least one pair of trou to wear with shirts. The model sketched center shows a very well-cut pair, which in cotton costs very little in white, blue or Swiss red, and which, for a little more, is very smart in blue or white flannel.

NEXT TO BEING a "doodler" or an "O-filler" we think it is fun to play "dillies" because everyone just breaks down and admits he's "pixilated." You don't even have to have a partner or an audience to do "dillies." All by yourself you can do "rain raining and grass growing," or an "Indian riding backward in the rumble seat of a Ford V-8 looking at the horizon," or a "snake in the grass," and double up with laughter. Get it? "Dillies" are what people do at dull dinner parties or after several drinks. If you see a moron poking his pupils, cranking his ear, and sticking out his tongue, be indulgent. He's trying to do a "cash register" for you. Try one yourself. Stick your index finger straight up under the opposite palm, and expect your friends to know that's a man under a tree. Now fool them by putting two fingers under your hand, and calling it "a man and a woman under a tree."

JUST WHEN WE had begun to mourn the passing of chivalry among men, one got up and gave us his seat on a crowded bus. That was shock No. 1. A second and greater one followed. OUR CURIOSITY was aroused the other day by a normal-looking car parked where it didn't belong on a down-town corner. In the windshield was a sign which read, "Emergency Refrigeration Service Working at ——" and the name of the building where its occupants were at work. It seems the sign, with letters three inches high, put the automobile in the class of commercial vehicles and gave it special privileges of parking in forbidden zones for 15 minutes—a flexible 15 minutes. While we don't recommend that you hang placards on the car door, so as to be able to break traffic laws with impunity, still it is nice to know that the police are reasonable about those things. Sometimes they can even be talked into letting you stop by a yellow curb long enough to run up to the office for something you forgot.

WE'VE FOUND just the place for a fried chicken dinner in the country—Cedar Brow Farm at De Soto. You can leave town after 5 o'clock and still get down in time for a walk through the woods before sunset. They're full of wild flowers this time of year and hundreds of fireflies light them up.

You go out highway 61, about 40 miles, and turn off on highway 21 to De Soto. Follow the main street past the picture palace and the depot until you hit county road N H. It's about two miles from town, on the right-hand side of the road going out. You have to telephone first, to Miss Fisher or Miss Peck, who live on the 50-acre farm all the time. They will also take you in for the week-end, if you just want to rusticate. On one corner of the farm, Miss Geraldine Lermit, of the Missouri Association of Occupational Therapy, has a little white house.

Daytime Frocks

It is regarded as quite smart this season as well as most practical to adopt a uniform style of daytime frock and have three or four made of different colors and materials. The idea is being exploited most generally for tailored clothes and those in the sportswear classification.

Many well-dressed women who have their clothes made to order discovered the wisdom of this theme long ago but it has not been until quite recently that the purchasers of ready-made attire learned of the possibilities. European women who have reputations for being well dressed have long indorsed the plan. When they find a design which is especially flattering, they have it copied in sufficient colors and materials to fill all of their needs for a season.

White With Colors

Wear white for summer in St. Louis but brighten it with gay accessories. This is the rule of the season and has sufficient possibilities that there is no danger of monotony. Belts, clips, flowers, zipper fastenings, blouses, gloves, hats and millinery are the items that are used in the gay colors.

Those white suits which are so much in vogue look much more interesting because of the bright blouses and other brilliant accents that are added. Lipstick red, for example, is striking and new with white. The darker red shade—May wine—also is used extensively. Kelly green and yellow are two other bright favorites while navy and black are liked by those who prefer to substitute dark contrasts.

Circular Trends For Next Autumn

WHILE most women are concentrating now on the purchase of their summer wardrobes those who are designers of fashionable clothes are concerned about next fall and winter's styles. They are considering the creations shown in recent Paris collections and thinking up ideas to produce something new in the way of silhouettes for the autumn.

The first inkling of the trend which has leaked out of the workrooms concerns the width of hemlines. Circular lines are said to be so well liked that everyone of us will be wearing skirts that whirl around us like ballet costumes before many months have gone. This circular indication promises to be most apparent in daytime dresses but there are indications that it will be featured also in coat lines, full length dressy cloth models showing it to greatest extent although swagger fur coats will endorse it, too.

FACING the FACTS

By Helen Jameson

ORTHOPEDIC surgeons have cried down high heels, telling the women repeatedly that if they keep on stumbling along on stilts they will have cloven hoofs, flabby legs and weak ankles. Their appeals have not fallen on deaf ears. Many women have chucked the spikes, found life considerably easier on the nervous system. Others can't bear to give up their clattering casings. They are silly. High heels aren't modern. They've been worn for hundreds of years.

Few of us realize that shoe manufacturers are anxious to provide us with booties that fill all the requirement of foot health. They employ orthopedic experts to create designs. Shops are offering shoes that are not only charming to look upon, but which give proper support and allow freedom of movement to toes that have been cramped into huddles.

With high heels it is impossible for a woman to walk properly. Her body is thrown out of balance. Many a serious accident has been due to heels with bases too small to provide a foothold. Thousands of women are without needful exercise because they house their poor little walkers in small quarters.

Good posture is impossible unless the feet are solidly on the ground, the weight of the body divided between sole and heel instead of held by the toes, which happens when heels are unnecessarily high.

WE associate the elevated heel with "dress." Where do we get these notions? Sartorial elegance was never so highly developed as in the days of Marie Antoinette, who wore satin sandals as flat as your hand. They aren't good, either, there should be a moderate heel to provide support for the arch. Fashions are interesting, keep women pleasantly excited, but when they interfere with well-being it should be thumbs down for them.

The crusade for sensible shoes is winning out all the time. Women who use to wear size four are now wearing sixes and not ashamed of it either. You never hear about "breaking in" shoes any more. If one gets the correct last there is not the slightest discomfort the first wearing. The trouble in the past has been that women's shoes were too full of feet and heels too high.

A SUDDEN CHANGE from high heels to low like those on sports' shoes may bring strained tendons, even a broken arch. The foot has adjusted itself to the elevated position until it has become deformed. Yes, pretty reader, only 10 women among 100 have normal feet. The rest have corns, ingrowing nails, callouses, hammer toes or bunions. A fine record these days when women vote and drive airplanes, run business projects and consider themselves pretty smart.

Join up with the happy footers, girls. Get out and travel comfortably.

tern as that used for the bride's dress except that the sleeves would be short and puffed and the trains would be shorter. The flower girl wears a miniature of the dress. Fabrics may be chiffon or mousseline. Authorities declare that the fabric of the bride's dress need have no influence on the choice of fabric for the rest of her bridal party except when she wears cotton, then all should wear cotton.

The flowers which the bride carries often are used as the color keynote for the wedding. Old-fashioned stock, for example, is being used quite extensively now in bridal bouquets and its exquisite colors repeated in the gowns of bridesmaids. Coral pink and lemon yellow may blend together most artistically. Snapdragons have similar possibilities. For a yellow and white wedding, the daisy is employed with artistic results.

For the garden type of wedding which is so popular in St. Louis in June and July, lace is an exceedingly popular material for the bride's dress as well as for those of the bride's maids although lace and organdie are combined frequently. Lace is liked because it is less formal than many fabrics and because it is so airy in appearance. Net and point d'esprit are other favorites for the garden wedding. Large hats of tulle or straw contribute a picturesque quality.

Your white slippers and shoes should be cleaned thoroughly after each wearing to keep them looking fresh and spotless. Soiled or dirty white slippers spoil your well-groomed appearance, and are inexcusable.

The House You Live In

LET ME SUGGEST

by Josephine Walter

The author of "Let Me Suggest" will answer in this column questions on interior decoration addressed to her in care of the Women's Sunday Magazine.

As familiar as the Anvil Chorus from "Ill Trovatore" is the "bang, bang, bang" of the screen door during the summer months. Now, this article is not a plea for putting springs on these doors to save shattered nerves; it is rather a suggestion for making these doors more pleasing to the eye. There is, after all, no reason why these doors, used six months out of the year, should not be decorative as well as utilitarian.

The simplest method is to apply some type of wood trim to your present screen, on the side facing the exterior. The design should, if possible, correspond to the architectural character of the house and the color or finish of the wood should match either the regular door or the surrounding trim. An all-over grille made of small wood bars would be attractive for a Colonial house while one of Chippendale fret-work design would be appropriate for one of Georgian origin.

A more modern treatment and one which might be very effective, I believe, would be an all-over grilling made of the wire that is being used so much today for all sorts of accessories. Finally, for the house equipped with shutters, nothing would be more attractive than shuttered doors with screening on the inner side. Such a door would not only provide fly protection and adequate circulation of air but absolute privacy as well.

For those people with artistic leanings but no manual dexterity, "Pasterettes" are a gift from the household gods. They are cut-out designs in a washable fabric which can be applied to any plaster or wood surface with rubber cement. Cavorting animals would add a touch of gayety to the nursery while other appropriate designs are available for kitchen and bath.

● NEATEST TRICK of the week: A young friend with yearnings toward the modern in decoration was confronted by the normal sized windows to be found in the average apartment. Desiring the effect of one wall entirely of glass, which is used so often in modern interiors, she placed a valance board completely across the wall and hung curtains at either side of the window from this valance. These curtains, hung straight and extremely full, extended from the edge of the window to the corner of the wall, giving the impression of being placed over part of one tremendous window.

And speaking of valances, there is nothing that can freshen up and add life to a rather weary set of draperies like some type of new heading. Shining bands of copper or aluminum may be bought by the yard and made to fit any sized window and are especially suited to rooms where a modern touch is acceptable. Valances of mirror or wire are equally effective and may successfully be introduced into many types of interiors.

This Week's Decorating Term: Terazzo—a concrete flooring of lime mortar with small pieces of marble imbedded not more than one and one-half inches. The whole mixture is beaten hard, rubbed down and polished. The most usual color is grey white in tone, but other colors are frequently introduced in borders or center patterns.

QUESTION: I have rented a very simple little Colonial house but, with the aid of paint and paper, I believe I have succeeded in making it a suitable background for rather formal French furniture. My only problem is the living room fireplace which, with its simple white wood mantel, is rather out of keeping with the spirit of the room. As I do not want to go to the expense of replacing this I wondered if something might be done with the present mantel.

MRS. W. G. J.

● Answer: Have you ever thought of having it marbleized? There are many expert painters here in the city who, I am sure, could make your mantel look like a real marble one which would be entirely in keeping with the spirit of your room as you describe it. If any of your tables have a marble top which you like you might have that type of marble reproduced; otherwise, you might go to some marble company and get a small piece of the kind of marble you would like the painter to copy. If, as is usually the case with Colonial mantels, yours is faced with brick, I would suggest having this part painted black.

QUESTION: I would like to fill my dining room windows with potted plants for the summer season but do not want to go to the expense of buying special containers. I have a number of the ordinary red containers used in potting plants and would like to do something with these if possible. Could you tell me how to paint them satisfactorily? MRS. M. L. R.

Answer: They should first be dried, either with shellac or any other suitable sizing material and then painted any color you desire with a good enamel paint. I would suggest using some sort of a tin though fitted to the size of the window sills so that the drainage from the plants does not ruin the paint.

—o-o—

QUESTION: Can you tell me how to remove white spots from furniture? MISS A. H.

—o-o—

Answer: I am very sorry to say that I know absolutely nothing that will remove such spots, other than refinishing the piece of furniture. The best cure for these marks is one of prevention and as they are usually caused by setting wet glasses on the table it is well to use coasters when serving drinks. If any of my readers know of any method for removing such mars I would be glad to hear about it and publish the solution.

Parties Mean Much to Young Girls and Boys

By Virginia W. Maremont.

Happy birthday! . . . and a party in the offing! What can be more exciting than the anticipation of a party, particularly on the day that belongs to the celebrant? Parties mean a great deal to all growing boys and girls.

Parties are the natural source for sociability, the first sharing of a child's happiness with his fellow beings. Fortunate is the child whose parents provide small parties, birthday or otherwise, for it is in learning how to give and to take that he is taught the important lesson of recognition of the social order.

For the 3-year-old embryo host or hostess, a dairy party is a surprise and is amusing to prepare. When the guests arrive they are each given a straw or paper farmer hat and a small pail, which can be purchased at a 5 and 10-cent store. As the afternoon progresses many small favors can be kept intact in their milk pails.

Small milk bottles, filled with bright-colored candies, placed at each potential milkman's or milkmaid's place will delight them. Children like to take something home from the party to show their mothers and these are inexpensive and will add reality.

The menu should be very simple. Assorted sandwiches, in gay wooden bowls, ice cream and cocoa, for the sponge birthday cake will do nicely.

At 12 years old the host begins to require more action in the table decorations. A new idea, the jungle party, is most exciting. The invitations are easily made by the host or hostess. An old nursery book of animal pictures supplies the material, cut out and pasted on white paper, trimmed.

For the table centerpiece, the cake will act as the pivot. A "jungle" cake, following the theme of the party, is decorated with animals, following the rim of the plate. The animals can be made by a professional caterer, or you can ice toy animals with a plain fondant. On the top of the cake, place an uneven mound of icing, and an open-mouthed lion, roaring at the animals below him

The place cards carry wire chenille-covered animals, which can be later utilized on berets or scarfs or lapels.

For the menu, you can serve pineapple juice with animal crackers, half broiled chicken, buttered peas, baked potatoes, and cocoa.

All types of games will fall in line with the afternoon—Pin the tail on the donkey or the animal memory game are just two suggestions.

—o-o—

With June and graduation not far off, the girl birthday graduate must be considered. It is in a way the last "fancy" birthday, for, after 16, she develops into a young lady of small dinner parties and similar social functions, where she learns the necessity of small talk before she emerges into formal society.

For the chrysalis-graduates, this birthday luncheon with its butterfly theme is most appropriate. The table centerpiece might be a long log bower of spring flowers. Scattered here and there, paper butterflies on wires flitter over the blossoms. Thin, tapering candles are inserted into the flower centerpiece, making a border of soft light.

Fragility belongs to the 16-year-old, therefore the china, the setting, the linens should reflect as much as possible the delicate emergence of the graduate into her fresh butterfly stage.

The cake—a flower-decorated cake, with fresh blossoms pressed lightly into the pastel frosting—will shame the pastry-tube imitations. Use the favorite flower of the young hostess if possible. The petals can be separated into decorative designs, or you may use small flowers, such as sweet peas, violets or pansies. Harmonizing candles placed in the center of the cake will make of it a thing of beauty.

Fireplaces May Be Brightened By Accessories

Up-to-Date Materials for Mantlepieces May Be Bought at Small Cost.

A recent article on the fireplace, how to alter or modernize it, brought many letters. Readers wanted to know just what is new in the way of accessories, and asked for ideas about beautifying a mantel without actually altering it.

We certainly did enjoy browsing around in the wholesalers' showrooms, in the stores, and the decorators' shops, for we found so much that is new, beautiful and most interesting. New materials are brilliantly handled, while the old standbys have been cleverly brought up-to-date.

Our first step was at a place that specializes in wrought iron fitments for fireplaces, sort of old English things that breathe comfort and solid substance. As well as some lovely old designs, there are lovely new sporting designs that would be grand for a man's room. Then there is lovely, gleaming brass, so bright that it catches and reflects the golden glow of the fire.

One novelty is a fire lighter of brass, the old colonial type of thing that would go so well in a country cottage. It includes a tankard for kerosene with a clay torch which is dipped into the fluid so that you can use it for lighting up, instead of having to rely on kindling.

Right to the other end of the scale is a set of andirons in crystal, mounted with chromium. The set includes tongs and brush and everything to do right by a fire and fireplace, so it is practical despite its terrific elegance. We can think of no more charming and original wedding gift.

But if you don't want to get anything startling new or spend much money, and yet want to give your fireplace a different look when it is not in use, then treat yourself to a beautifully-painted tilt top table that is a fire screen when it isn't acting as a table. If you are handy with the needle, then get to work and make one with a needlepoint top, the last word in luxury.

There are exquisite things for the mantel, and these often can be picked up for a trifle. The main thing is not to do a cluttery job, but just to use one or two lovely or original things. The old idea of a mirror or a picture above the mantel is not quite as prevalent as it used to be. If a mirror is used it is more than likely to be a round mirror with no frame.

One of the nicest mantel arrangements that we noticed, we found in the apartment of a decorator. Instead of the French clocks or ornaments that she might have used, she preferred to have a pair of really lovely old pewter pitchers filled with huckleberry. This made an ideal touch for the room which is a library. Another library mantelpiece is made charming by a whole row of little Dickens character figurines marching across.

If you have any fine copper pieces, or some Sheffield plate, why not consider using these for your mantel, unless the fireplace is in a very formal drawing room?

Accessory Colors

Accessory colors are being dramatized to such an extent for summer that the promoters of bright accents have divided them into three main classifications. They include the desert, the bouquet and the tailored shades to be worn according to whether one prefers to be sophisticated, sweet or dignified in appearance.

Included among the desert or sophisticated tones are varieties of purple, odd shades of green, brown and orange. The bouquet shades include the different pastel tints such as pink, hydrangea blue, soft yellow, hyacinth and rose. The tailored group lists luggage tan, navy, wine and black.

From the Ground Up

By Amy Lu Schmitz

Alexander Piaget has turned a neat trick by putting a garden where nature never intended one to grow. He has had to plant this garden not only right on top of concrete, but also on the shaded side of the house where the morning and evening sun merely plays a hit and run game. His studio at 3800 West Pine—a remodelled carriage house—faces north with large trees shading the west, and the expanse of concrete driveway was a plain and unavoidable fact. Both of these problems he met in a very interesting way which leads me to the conclusion that even the most inauspicious planting conditions can be coped with. This goes also for window box gardeners or those nature lovers who have to limit themselves to the confines of an apartment.

What Mr. Piaget did was to lay borders of eight-inch building tile at either side of the doorway and at the west corner, and fill them with rich top soil. To break the horizontal lines, he placed two sheared evergreens in boxes at the door, and built up the west bed with more brick so that larger plants could be used. The Russian and Boston ivy planted at the back of all the beds is intended to grow and cover the walls some day. The rest of the beds are filled with shade-loving flowers, such as: Plantain lily, heuchera, forget-me-not, pansies, delphinium, lily-of-the-valley, veronica speedwell and variegated vinca minor. A feathery hemlock and a large terra cotta jar accent the far corner, and balance the importance of the entrance planting.

If you would like to express your garden urge this summer by planting in window boxes or bricked beds, but feel hampered by a sunless north light, here are a number of other plants you can use: Columbine, Monkshood, bleeding heart, lychnis, foxglove, hemerocallis, iris, peonies, violets, platycodon, spirea and ferns.

The variegated leaved plants are attractive for heavily shaded spots. They give the effect of sunlight coming through leaves. There are a number of ferns and vines so marked, and also an attractive low-growing privet (Ligustrum Vulgare argenteo variegatum). The large white flowers on Snowballs and Hydrangeas are also good for brightening dark corners.

It is important to remember, however, that the soil is static in all boxed or enclosed plantings, and is not changed or enriched as in the open ground. There are no earth worms to help aerate the soil, nor "friendly" bacteria to develop humus or deposit nitrogen compounds, and because window boxes are usually close to the house, the eaves prevent rain from falling directly on them. Therefore, you must give your plants certain attentions that would not be necessary if they were in the open.

The beds or boxes should be deep enough to plant in—10 or 12 inches is best for annuals or perennials and two or three feet for small ornamental evergreens or shrubs. For drainage there should be holes at the bottom over which a layer of cinders, broken flower pots or other coarse material is spread. The best soil mixture for the box or bed is two-thirds garden loam, one-third leaf mold or treated manure (in which all the weed seeds have been killed), and a few scoops of sand to a wheel barrow of this mixture to lighten it. Then put in the plants, and water, water, water! When watering, soak all the soil in the box, and as it dries on the surface—probably with the fullest intention of caking, loosen the top inch of earth to form a dust mulch. This dry mulch is very helpful, because it will prevent the moisture beneath the surface from evaporating, it allows the much needed air to get into the soil and to the roots, and it will discourage any weeds that may wish to occupy the premises. Incidentally you can give your house ferns and ivies a summer vacation by planting them in boxes, where the new rich soil and fresh air will built them up rapidly.

To enrich the soil in the boxes without emptying them and starting from scratch, use a good watering with a liquid manure once a week. Mix some well rotted manure with warm water and let it stand until cool. Then stirring the mixture vigorously, pour it on the soil in the boxes. The complete commercial fertilizers (nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium) can also be used this way, but unless mixed exactly according to directions, there is a danger of the chemicals burning the plants. It is safest to have the soil moist before applying the liquid fertilizer, and to finish off with a clear water sprinkling.

Very few artificial gardens will not respond, if the soil is carefully conditioned and the plants given the daily attention of a sprinkling and a surface raking.

Turkey Shortcake

Here's something new in the category of cakes. It's turkey shortcake, and institute chefs say it's—swell (to be strictly slangy and immediately understood). Try it. Ingredients are:

Four tablespoon shortening
One-half cup granulated sugar
Two egg yolks beaten
One and one-half cups corn meal
One and one-half cups sour milk
Two egg whites
Two and one-half cups medium white sauce
One and one-half cups sifted cake or pastry flour
One teaspoon baking soda
Four teaspoons baking powder
One and one-half teaspoon salt
Three cups leftover cooked turkey or chicken

Cream the shortening, add the sugar gradually and cream until light and fluffy. Add beaten egg yolks. Sift corn meal, flour, soda, baking powder and salt together and add to egg mixture alternately with the sour milk. Last, fold in egg whites beaten stiff. Turn into a shallow, greased baking pan about 9 by 9 by 1½ inches and bake in a moderate oven of 375 degrees Farenheit for 20 to 30 minutes. Meanwhile, prepare two and one-half cups medium white sauce, to which add the turkey. When the corn bread is done, cut it into three-inch squares and split. Arrange the lower halves on a hot platter, cover with some of the turkey mixture, replace the tops and cover with the rest of the turkey mixture. Makes nine three-inch shortcakes.

Silk Jersey

Silk jersey is a fabric to consider in the assembling of a summer wardrobe, its uses extending from the tailored street costume to the formal evening frock. One of the most flattering examples of its style is on display in a St. Louis shop. This is a jacket dress which has a white background with a small floral motify combining shades of green with bright navy. The dress is piped with grass green crepe and there is a little Ascot tucked into the rather low neckline. The fitted hip length jacket has a wide green belt.

New "Cooler" For Fighting Hot Weather

Never were novelties for the house more numerous, varied or interesting than is the case this spring. If you will go to your local builder, to the hardware shop or the electrical equipment people in your neighborhood, you are sure to find something that will make life easier and more pleasant for you and yours.

For the coming days of heat and humidity, there is a brand-new room cooler that is a honey. Just a turn of the switch starts cooling the air, removing excess moisture from it, as well as cleaning and circulating it. No water supply, no wiring, no piping are needed; just placing the cooler in front of a window, adjusting the air duct in the window and then plugging in at the nearest outlet is all that this cooler requires. It can be moved from one room to another and is extremely reasonable to operate, as well as inexpensive to purchase. And it looks handsome, too.

Summer also brings to mind pesky "skeeters" and such. For the porch there has been a devised a light surrounded by a metal cage so that as insects fly up to the light they are electrocuted. The same principle is used for a screen which covers part of the window. Although the current with which the screen is charged will kill insects, it isn't strong enough to harm humans or our animal friends.

Electrical people will know about these devices, just as they will tell you about a light that is pinned to the wall when there isn't a place for a table or floor lamp. New, too, is a plug-in strip which makes electricity available at six-inch intervals. The strips may be incorporated in the baseboard or elsewhere and painted over as desired. This is particularly good for rooms such as the kitchen, where many outlets are required.

Tubular lamps are growing in importance as concealed lighting becomes more and more popular. Also new is the bulb which contains two filaments, one a 50, the other a 100-watt; either of the two filaments being burned separately or the two burned together, thus allowing for three levels of illumination. This is a radical step in the direction of scientific lighting as outlined in the "better light, better sight" campaign that is of vital importance to us all.

Sometimes the tiles in the fireplace clash with the general color scheme of a room. It is now possible to buy the kind of paint that will "take" on the glazed surface. Choose a bright cellulose enamel and paint on two coats. One application should last six months.

New Designs In Wallpaper For the Home

Scenic Papers and Photo-Murals Are Gaining in Popularity.

By Eleanor Ross

Wallpaper certainly is staging a triumphant comeback after its long absence. Not only are designs completely different and very novel, but all sorts of materials are being used. Also there are different methods of application and use, including different coverings for each wall of a room and new panel effects.

Even if you have been using painted surfaces for some time, we guarantee you will want to redecorate after viewing the new offerings. Scenic papers are fast increasing in popularity as are photo-murals. Lovely papers depicting English countryside scenes are being used for country homes. Then there are scenic designs typical of Italy and Switzerland. Soon we are to have some magnificent wallpapers descriptive of the inauguration of Washington. These scenic papers are liked for dining rooms, breakfast alcoves and libraries.

Many papers use new weaves with good results. Some weaves cleverly resemble burlap, grass cloth, basketweaves and even wood veneer. Then there are papers in which the design is applied horizontally instead of the regular perpendicular manner.

We liked the paper that simulates wood-plan, for it has a dark, slightly rosy cast that would form an excellent background for maple furniture. As for colors, all tones of gray are liked, as is a rich eggplant shade with plenty of mulberry in it. The eggplant background is used for a clever design showing a richly-decorated elephant with a Rajah and attendant riding on the animal. The figures are about one foot apart and the color is a soft gray shade. There is also a vertical pin stripe in a lighter shade of eggplant. This paper is washable.

One grand series has scenes adapted from our beloved Currier and Ives prints. The colors and color schemes are just grand. We can just see these papers beautifying halls, studies and dining rooms. These papers also would be good for game rooms, although the merriest paper for a game room or tavern room is one that has a design showing cards and stacks of chips, dice, champagne glasses and bottles, dancing couples, notes of music and a sprinkling of stars. We know a gay bachelor who has ordered this paper for his huge one-room apartment, and he expects it to keep his guests happy even if he does have to live with it all the while.

For a powder room, one designer has chosen a huge, plaided design, like a ribbon plaid printed in delicate pastels combined with silver. This also would be nice for a bedroom done in the modern manner.

Silver also is used for a paper showing a fire-bird design on a chalk-white ground. Another paper has green and silver stars on a white ground. The star design in blue and silver with bars of contrasting blue, also is charming.

Of course, the more conventional designs and old floral favorites are still being shown. But in these the colors are so cleverly treated that the designs have an entirely new air. Most of the new papers are washable and all are most reasonably priced.

Striped Hose

One of the best-looking innovations this summer in men's hose is the new regatta-stripe pattern. This was inspired by the costumes worn by the members of the various Eton boats. These are made with horizontal stripes in bright colors. The regatta-stripe hose all have one white stripe and one of a bright color, such as red, blue, green or brown. They look particularly smart with white buckskin shoes or the new brown and white Norwegian shoes, but are also practical for wear with brown buckskin shoes, or, for that matter, any type of sport shoe in the country or at resorts during the summer. In addition to being very good-looking, these hose solve the problem of what to wear with light-colored sport shoes. The traditional white silk or lisle sock, with or without clocks, becomes rather monotonous and the regatta stripe provides a refreshing change. Another type of hose suitable for summer wear is the white sock with Norwegian patterns in red and blue.

TO quote the New Yorker:

"At dinner one evening, the bright young lady on Mr. Shaw's right burbled: 'O! what a wonderful thing is youth!' He swung his beard round at her crisply and replied, 'Yes, and what a shame to waste it on children.'"

But, Mr. Shaw, are you sure it is being wasted? All I can do is to marvel at what youth is doing with youth. Last month I was present at the awarding of a poetry contest prize for young people. Never have I heard more nature compositions. The winner, a spindly, undersized child, had written a blood curdlingly realistic chant of a soul in torment. A few days later I heard a very early lyric by Nathalie Crane set to music. An amazingly deep and feeling poem. At about the same time I came across an entertaining book written by three children, Patience, Richard and John Abbe called "Around the World in Eleven Years."

I have listened with rapt attention to the music of Yehudi Menuhin, Ruth Slensynski and the Ricci child ("He doesn't even perspire!" exclaimed Mr. Guidi lost in admiration).

I am used to hearing that mere infants (who should be preoccupied with hoops and marbles) have entered college or have taken a degree in philosophy. And as for child actors they no longer cause a riffle of amazement: not even Freddie Bartholomew, Shirley Temple or the fabulous acting of the French slum children in "La Maternelle."

NOW HERE IS something new. A crushing blow has been dealt me by the advent of a child of six, a cooking demonstrator with three years' experience to her credit. In other words a veteran! She is Barbara Jenkins of Denver, Colo., and is reputed to captivate audiences with her self possession, her competence and her charm.

I have always wanted to write for children but I fear—no, I am sure—Barbara has forestalled me.

(After reading this will you please refrain, mothers, from saying with or without unction, "My child has all A's on his report card!" and forget once and for all that William Pitt was Prime Minister of England at the age of 21, for the day is not far off when his case may be considered one of retarded mentality.)

But let us pass on to children who are and as nature meant them to be—"all stomach surrounded by curiosity." When my boy (a consistently all D report-card child) was very small he had dinner with a neighbor. When he came home he told me in terms as glowing as his vocabulary permitted of a marvelous dessert he had eaten, "All white and yellow and brown and oh! mother, so good!"

I hastened to secure this ambrosia for my own purposes and found that its praises had not been oversung. This pudding became and has remained a family standby. It is served on daily and on state occasions. It is equally good hot or very cold. Appreciation of its high quality is not restricted to small boys (I do not even smile when I heap a man's plate for the second time).

The Favorite Danish Dishes Of Opera Star

Melchoir, Famous Tenor, Offers Recipes Used In His Native Land.

By Alice Lynn Barry

WE CAN'T understand how the "gloomy Dane" could have been gloomy if he had Danish cooking. Recently we went to a party at the hotel apartment of Lauritz Melchoir, the world famous Danish tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Co., and we don't know when we have sampled more delicious and cheerful food.

Melchoir, whose forte is Wagner, is interested in cooking and he and his wife gladly contributed recipes when we begged some for our readers. The party was for the tenor's birthday and so hors d'oeuvres and marvelous sweets were featured. Incidentally, we want to mention that many of the recipes were evolved by the Melchoir cook who later became the most popular cook book authoress in Scandinavia.

But now to work on some smorgasbord, four herring hors d'oeuvres that make a very colorful platter. Soak herring in oyster juice for a day, or until the fish has a brownish gray color. The piquant flavor is grand.

For a salt herring salad, cut salt herring into small squares and mix with chopped boiled potatoes. Allow to stand for a day. Red herring salad is a sweet dish and is made by chopping the herring fine, adding sugar to taste and then mixing in beet juice until the mixture is dark red.

HERRING'S EYE is Melchoir's own recipe and is served in his homes here and in Europe constantly. Chop the yolk of eggs and encircle with finely-chopped onion. Surround this with a ring of finely-chopped herring and serve on small pieces of toast. As a side dish serve "asea" which is made of plump cucumbers peeled and cut in strips and boiled in sugar and vinegar until they have a glazed appearance.

Then there is Rulepolse, which is made from rib lamb cut in strips and cooked in salt water until tender and then salted down in brine for a day. Remove lamb from brine and roll it out quite flat, like a piece of dough with such spices as nutmeg, allspice, ground peppers, clove and cinnamon covering the top. Roll entire piece up and tie it with string to hold together. Cook until it is of firm consistency. When finished cooking, a weight such as an iron is put on the roll to press it firmly together. Leave standing for a few hours, then cut the strings and slice like a roll. It also can be made with pork.

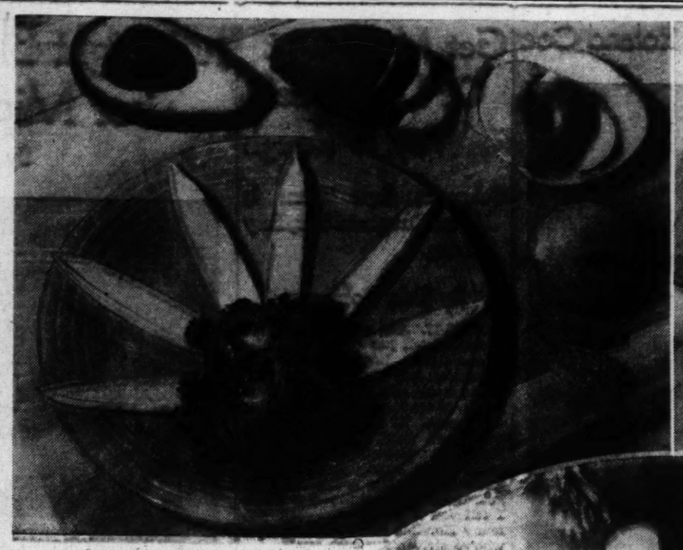
OTHER FAVORITE Melchoir recipes, which the singer also likes to prepare, include a beefsteak and a tasty way of preparing sea or rock bass. For the former, salt and pepper a good-sized beefsteak. Pound it hard for several minutes until quite flat. Sear for a moment in a very hot pan. If any shreds of meat adhere to the pan, scrape them up and saute in butter. Then put the steak into this and allow it to cook quickly for several minutes. In another pan saute shredded onions, and pour these over the meat. Turn the flame very high for a minute and then remove and serve instantly.

For the fish take two carrots, two onions and some parsley, add salt and pepper and paprika and boil them for three-quarters of an hour in two quarts of water. Add the whole fish, uncut, and steam (don't boil) for half to three-quarters of an hour depending on the size of the fish. Remove from water and serve with a lemon and dill sauce made with two cups of soup stock or fish broth added to quarter pound finely-chopped dill. Add thickening made of butter and two teaspoons flour. Stir over fire till smooth and puree-thick.

Jam Containers

Jam and marmalade may not seem like fashionable items, but wait until you see them in their new summer dresses. The jars which are made for these sweets have coverings of woven grass. Earthenware bases are made for utility and the light dresses put over them. Color harmonies are considered so that mint jelly may appear in a yellow scheme, while strawberry jam is surrounded by a rosy atmosphere.



Red, green or yellow fruit gives you the color accent.

Sherbet forms the colorful heart of the fruit-cup flower.

The STARS In Her COURSES

by CLEMENTINE PADDLEFORD

THIS spring's party table is as particular over its choice of color ensembles as fashion is with the matching of gloves to nosegays. Tables bloom like spring bouquets with colorful menus. With a chance to go chromatic, it is hard for menu-planners to keep sensible and remember it is a party they are giving, not a culinary style show. Food itself, remember, is the all-important thing, not frosting frescoes nor pink roses of whipped cream.

Just forget the color scheme and plan the menu first. Let it be a menu of dependable character, featuring foods that, if kept waiting in the kitchen, will not retaliate with bad behavior in the dining room. For even sturdy dishes can be dolled up at the last minute and put into party clothes.

Let fruit cup be the curtain raiser. Choose any well liked combination and make but half the recipe. Two tablespoons of the mixture for each glass is all we need. A mere cushion to hold the good-to-eat flower that will blossom in the cup. Take canned pear halves and slice each one into five or six long slivers. Arrange these, petal-fashion, around the sides of the cocktail glass. Just before serving, add the heart of the posy, a No. 30 dipper of sherbet in any color needed.

If pink and white is the theme, raspberry sherbet is lovely against the white petals of pear. If green is the choice, use mint ice; for yellow, lemon, apricot or orange. Or colored marshmallows, snipped into petals, are a garden-like substitute. Marshmallows are made in yellow, pink and green. To center the petals, use a half of a white grape, a red or green maraschino cherry, a gumdrop snip, or a dip of jelly in an appropriate shade.

A creamed dish in patty shells give the main course an opportunity to steal a lead in the color act. Whether it is chicken, sweetbreads, or veal that you choose to cream, the result is an all-white dish. Now add chopped pimientos, for pink tones, or diced carrots for bright golds. For a springtime green, use pepper, finely cut; or olives, sliced. Garnish, to will do its part. Shake on a crest of paprika, add a meaty square of tomato, finely grated carrot, minced parsley, a sliver of green pepper, or a stuffed olive slice.

Irish potatoes, combined with other foods, offer excellent opportunity for gay color effects. Make a pyramid of mashed potatoes, and with the back of a spoon, press in a deep nest. Fill this with buttered peas for a green and white affair; fill with melted cheese or buttered carrots for a rich gold. Olives may be added to the mashed potatoes or pimiento, finely cut; minced parsley leaf will wreath a mashed potato mound with spring fragrance. For a more ardent flavor, add a sprinkling of minced chives.

With a melon-ball scoop, dip out of big potatoes, little white marbles to roll in butter and parsley or to sprinkle with paprika or turn yellow with buttered toast crumbs. Serve stuffed potatoes in the half shell and stuff them with any of the combinations suggested for mashed potato rings. Stuffed potatoes look very artful topped with butter balls rolled in grated carrots, minced parsley or watercress.

Banquet desserts should be a study in elegance, yet easy to make, with no last-minute touches to be added. We suggest fairy-like meringue nests, heaped high with any dewy-cold fresh fruit that complements the banquet color scheme. For a pink-and-white blending, use fresh red raspberries or strawberries, or currants that have stood overnight in a drift of powdered sugar. For a study in green, choose green grapes. Cut the grapes in halves, remove the seeds, drain, then wrap in cheese cloth, which absorbs the remaining moisture and pack in the coldest part of the refrigerator for several hours. Serve with powdered sugar.

Sliced fresh peaches, or apricots and diced pineapple are to be remembered for a yellow and white parade. Another dessert, delicate as gossamer and with illusive fresh-fruit fragrance, is Fruit Bavarian. Its color will depend upon the fruit you choose to use; peaches lend gold; apricots are boldly yellow; strawberries and red raspberries produce the blush-pink shades; and black raspberries give the deep purple shade of old wine.

Among the nut family, don't overlook the useful green pistachio. Cashews are brightly yellow, blanched almonds, white. For more vivid color effects, use after-dinner mints which can be ordered in any shade, or candied almonds which come for a dollar a pound in a brave array of pink, green, yellow and white.

Fruit Blossom Cocktail.

Two cups orange juice.
One-half cup lemon juice.
Sugar syrup.
Three cups orange segments.
Three cups pineapple, diced.
Three cups grapes.
One No. 10 can pears (about 28 halves).
Five quarts sherbet: mint, lemon or raspberry.

Combine orange and lemon juices and sweeten to taste with sugar syrup, keeping rather tart. Add orange segments, pineapple and grapes. Chill. Drain pears. Cut each pear half lengthwise into five segments. Fill sherbet glasses one-fourth-full with mixed fruits. Arrange pear segments around sides of the glass like flower petals. Just before serving add a No. 30 dipper of the sherbet to the heart of each fruit flower. Choose a sherbet to harmonize in color with the banquet color scheme. This recipe makes 50 portions.

Endive Salad Fans.

Five avocados.
Two bunches parsley.
Four cups French dressing.

Wash endive stalks and separate spikes. Arrange six spikes in fan formation to cover one-half of the salad plate. Cut avocados in half lengthwise, remove seeds and peel halves, then slice crosswise. Lay two of the fan-shaped slices, one overlapping the other, across the tips of the converging endive points. In each endive spike, close to the avocado, place a tiny sprig of parsley. Serve with a French dressing. This recipe makes 50 portions.

Color variations: For pink and white effect, use half slices of tomatoes in place of avocados. Use seven large tomatoes for 50 salads. Half slices of orange with mint garnish turn the salad into gold and white combination. For the avocado substitute six oranges and three bunches of mint. Half slices of pineapple for a yellow and white banquet. One No. 10 can containing 50 slices of pineapple is required in place of the avocados given in the recipes. The same dressing may be used for all.

Six egg whites.
One-fourth teaspoon cream of tartar.
One and one-half cups granulated sugar.
One and one-half teaspoons vanilla.
Fresh fruit.
Powdered sugar.
Whipped cream.

Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry; add cream of tartar and beat until mixture stands in peaks. Add sugar, two tablespoons at a time, beating after each addition. Add vanilla. Cover bottoms of medium-sized muffin tins with brown paper. Do not grease. Pack with meringue cutting with knife to remove air pockets. Bake in a very slow oven (250 degrees F.) for one hour and 15 minutes. Let stand a few minutes before removing. Remove from pans, scoop out soft center from underside, then cool. Serve, filled with fresh fruit, sweetened with powdered sugar and top with a hood of whipped cream. This recipe makes 10 portions.

Mash two quarts of ripe strawberries and add two-thirds cup of orange juice, one third cup of lemon juice, the juice from one-half grapefruit and sugar to taste. Let stand for one hour. Strain through a fine cloth. Add one-fourth cup of rum. Mix well and place in refrigerator to chill. Serve in glasses surrounded with crushed ice and garnish with a sprig of fresh mint.

Chicken Roll

Dough.
Two cups of flour.
One-half cup lard.
Pinch of salt.
One level teaspoon of baking powder.
One-half to two-thirds cup of milk.

Cut the lard into the flour, which has been sifted with the salt and baking powder. Gradually add the milk, stirring with a fork until well mixed, having the dough a little less moist than for biscuits. Toss on a lightly floured board and roll out so that it will be about one-fourth inch thick.

Have prepared two cups of cooked chicken cut fine, one-half cup of rice olives, stoned and chopped, two tablespoons of minced pimientos, one teaspoon onion juice, salt, pepper and paprika. In a double boiler melt three tablespoons of butter, add the chopped pimiento, olives and onion juice. Dredge with one rounded tablespoon of flour and blend. Pour on one cup of chicken stock and stir until slightly thickened. Add the chicken and seasoning. Cool. Spread evenly on the dough and roll as for jelly roll, pinching ends. Place roll in a long buttered pan, brush over with melted butter and bake in a moderate oven from one-half to three-quarters of an hour. Remove to a heated platter and surround with a creamed mushroom sauce.

Mushroom Sauce

Saute one-half pound of thinly sliced mushrooms in two tablespoons of butter for 10 minutes. Dredge with two tablespoons of flour and stir until the flour has melted. Gradually pour on one and a half cups of top milk and let cook until slightly thickened. Season with salt, celery salt and white pepper.

Jellied Green Salad

Two cups of highly seasoned tomato juice.
One cucumber, peeled and cut in small cubes.
One-half minced green pepper (remove all seeds).
One-half small grated onion.
One tablespoon of grated horseradish.
One tablespoon of worcestershire sauce.
One-half cup celery chopped fine.
One slightly rounded tablespoon of gelatin.
One cup boiled dressing.
One cup whipped cream.

Soften the gelatin in one-fourth cup of cold water for 15 minutes. Heat the tomato juice and in this dissolve the gelatin. Cool slightly. Add green peppers, celery and cucumbers adding salt, pepper, onion, horseradish and worcestershire. Fold in the boiled dressing and whipped cream and pack into cold rinsed individual molds. Allow to set. Unmold on shredded lettuce, pouring a little French dressing over the lettuce.

Boiled Dressing

Beat the yolks of two eggs with one rounded teaspoon of sugar, one tablespoon of melted butter, one teaspoon of cornstarch, dissolved in one-half cup of milk, one-fourth cup of vinegar, one teaspoon of salt, one teaspoon dry mustard and a dash of cayenne. Lastly fold in the whites of two eggs beaten stiff. Put in a double boiler and cook until thick and fluffy, about 20 minutes. Cool.

Coffee Maple Cake

Beat one-third cup of butter to a cream. Add gradually two-thirds scant cup of sugar. Cream together until very light. Beat the yolks of two eggs with one-fourth cup of cold water. Sift one and one fourth cups of cake flour with one and a half teaspoons of baking powder and add alternately with the egg and water to the butter and sugar mixture. Lastly fold in the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs. Bake in one large layer. When cold, split and put together with coffee filling and cover with maple frosting and nut meats.

Coffee Filling

Stir one cup of light brown sugar with one-fourth cup of strong coffee and the same of cream until the sugar is melted. Wash down sides of pan with a spoon wrapped in a clean wet cloth to remove grains. Cover and let boil three minutes, uncover and let boil to the soft ball stage, add one tablespoon of butter and beat until cool and thick enough to spread. Spread between layer of cake. Cover the sides and top with maple nut frosting.

Maple Nut Frosting

Boil two-thirds cup of maple syrup with one tablespoon of Karo and a pinch of salt until it threads. Pour in a fine stream onto the beaten whites of two eggs. Add one-fourth cup of chopped nuts. Beat until the right consistency to spread.

To make a stiff drawer glide open easily and freely, rub a tallow candle along the inside edge. This is much better than rubbing with soap, as the soap eventually hardens and makes matters worse than before, whereas the tallow keeps soft and is therefore a permanent remedy.

Cheese as the Main Dish of Enticing Meal

May Be Used Instead of Meat to Give Variety to Your Menu.

SEVERAL words may be said on cheese, as eggs and cheese are such good partners and require much the same methods of cooking, especially as to temperature. None of us can afford to keep house without cheese, for it not only fits in beautifully with many of the everyday dishes we serve but it can frequently replace meat as the main dish of the meal.

Recently, in a long chat with a clever young woman who knows a great deal about cheese, she gave her favorite recipe for cheese souffle—and it is a dish! It is being passed on to you, together with two other cheese recipes.

Jellied Tomato Eggs With Cream Cheese Dressing.

Two and one-half cups canned tomato juice.
Three-quarters teaspoon salt.
Four and one-half teaspoon vinegar.
One bay leaf.
One-half teaspoon granulated sugar.
Two tablespoons granulated gelatin.
Six shelled hard-cooked eggs.
One-half teaspoon dry or prepared mustard dash cayenne.
One tablespoon mayonnaise.
Lettuce.
Cream cheese dressing.

Simmer together for five minutes, the onion, 2 cups of the tomato juice, one-half teaspoon of the salt, three teaspoons of the vinegar, the bay leaf and the sugar. Sprinkle the gelatin over the remaining one-half cup of tomato juice and add to the hot tomato mixture, stirring until dissolved. Cool slightly and pour half the mixture into a shallow pan about 11"x8"x1½". Cool until partially set. Cut the eggs in half lengthwise; remove the yolks and mash with the remaining one-quarter teaspoon of salt, the remaining one and a half teaspoons of vinegar, the mustard, cayenne and mayonnaise. Refill the whites with this mixture and place, cut down side, on tomato mixture. Pour over remaining tomato and chill until set. Cut into six individual servings allowing one whole egg to each serving. Arrange on six individual beds of lettuce; top with cream cheese dressing (see below). Serves six. To serve two or three make half this recipe.

Cheese Souffle

Three tablespoons butter or margarine.
Three tablespoons flour.
One cup bottled milk or one-half cup evaporated milk and one-half cup water.
Three-quarter teaspoons salt, dash cayenne.
Four eggs, separated.

Melt the butter in a double boiler. Remove from heat, add flour and blend thoroughly. Add milk; place over boiling water; cook, stirring until thickened. Then add salt, cayenne and cheese, and stir until cheese is melted. Beat egg yolks thoroughly, add milk mixture gradually while stirring. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites and pour into a one and one-half quart casserole. Bake in a very slow oven of 315 degrees F. for 1 hour. Serves four to 6. To serve two or three, make half this recipe. Note: The cheese may be broken into small pieces rather than grated, to add to the sauce if you prefer.

Cheese Appetizers

One three-ounce package cream cheese.
One-half cup cooked salad dressing.

Cream Cheese Dressing

One-half cup butter or margarine.
Two cups grated American cheese.
One cup sifted all-purpose flour.
Speck cayenne.
One teaspoon prepared mustard.
One-quarter teaspoon Worcestershire or similar sauce.

Cream the butter with the cheese thoroughly. Add the flour, cayenne, mustard and Worcestershire sauce, and mix well. Form into balls about one inch in diameter and arrange about one and one-half inch apart on a baking sheet. Bake in a moderately hot oven of 400 degrees F. for 15 minutes. Makes about 40 appetizers.

Glassware Trends

Every season the designers of glassware think up some new design to make your last year's salad bowls and platters look outmoded. Fluttiing is the 1936 expression of their fertile brains. A year ago everyone was quite satisfied with pineapple cut motifs and not too discouraged over diamond points, but the fluttiing is the badge of spring smartness. Clear crystal is being featured for warm weather use because it looks cooler than most colors.

OFF the LEASH

by H. F. Owen

AN IMPORTANT item in the care of your dog is exercise. A dog running at large, with the free use of all his body for running and stretching, will come into the house at night, find a quiet corner and lie there until needed. The average owner, no doubt wonders, when he takes his dog out on a leash for a walk around a few city blocks, why the dog comes into the house still full of energy, and runs around playing with rugs and tearing things up. This is excess energy.

The small dog does not need as much exercise as the large dog, which needs natural exercise and plenty of it. In the city, of course, it is hard to find a place where one may turn his dog loose for a romp without danger of his being struck by an automobile. But, when it is nice weather, the family takes a ride into the country two or three times a week. Why not put the dog into the car, take him out with you, and give him the feel of the fresh earth?

Do not be afraid to turn him loose. If you have not taught him to come to you when you call, you have been unfair to him, in not teaching him to obey you, no matter what he may be doing. Having confidence that your dog will obey you will go a long way in making him respond to your command.

O IT IS CRUEL to chain your dog. An otherwise gentle dog can be made vicious by being chained constantly. A dog may be chained on a long wire and allowed to run the length of it all day, and still, when he is turned loose he will leave for wider spaces, which proves that running back and forth all day has not been the right kind of exercise for him.

Jumping is good exercise. Throw a ball and teach your dog to get it and bring it back to you. Let him be the judge as to when he has had enough. But if you give him the freedom of a good run, you will surely notice a change in his behavior in the house and he will be waiting for you to take him out again for the next romp. Next to feeding properly, the right kind of exercise is necessary to keep your dog in good health, and his general disposition will be that of a dog who is getting the best out of life.

● TODAY WE WILL teach our dog to carry. Many dogs will carry an object without being shown. Others will carry sticks, stones, their feed pans, etc., in play, but when you wish them to carry something for you, they refuse absolutely to do so. This does not mean that he is stubborn or indifferent. He just does not understand what you wish him to do, so you will have to show him what you mean.

The object you wish him to carry should be something soft, so that he can close his mouth easily upon it. A rolled newspaper will do, but a better object is a piece of garden hose about eight inches long. This is easy to hold and does not get messy and tear as a newspaper would, and will last indefinitely.

Call your dog, snap on his leash and have him sit in front of you. Hold his attention and show him the short piece of hose, by holding it in front of his mouth. Now say, "Take it." If he does take it, be pleased and say, "That's fine, hold it," quieting him with your voice if he chews or plays with the object. When he has held it for a short while, reach out, take hold of the object, give it a slight twist, and at the same time say, "Out." This is your command to make him release the object.

● THE CHANCES ARE that your dog will not know what you mean when you say, "Take it;" consequently you will have to show him. Hold the object in your right hand, close the dog's mouth if he refuses to take it, place your left hand over the top of his nose and press his lips against his teeth with your fingers and thumb. This will cause him to open his mouth. Then force the object into his mouth with your right hand, giving your command "Take it." Continue this process of opening his mouth until he takes the object at your command.

After he has learned to take it from your hand in this manner, lower it gradually until he takes it from the ground. When he has learned to pick it up from the ground, the command for this is "Pick it up," thus showing him the difference between picking up an object and taking one from your hand.

IN THE BIG VILLAGE

"Listen to the silly way they've finished this story!"

The Stamp Review : : by John Chamberlin

THE Dominican Republic has issued a new set of bicolored stamps in commemoration of the dedication of George Washington Avenue last Feb. 22. The stamps show a view of George Washington Avenue, and in a circle, President Trujillo.

The avenue is a broad and beautiful boulevard along the Caribbean Sea in the capital, but the capital is no longer the city of Santo Domingo, which was founded in 1496, the first city in the New World. The city's name has been changed by President Trujillo to Trujillo City, in President Trujillo's honor. At the same time the President did preserve the name, Santo Domingo, by changing the district called National District, in which the capital lies, to District of Santo Domingo.

Gen. Rafael Leonidas Trujillo, using his power as commander of the Dominican Army was elected President in 1930. Then he abolished political rivals in the usual manner of all dictators. In 1934 he was so popular that he was re-elected without opposition, in much the same manner as Hitler in Germany.

It is a common enough thing for "presidents" to issue stamps bearing their portraits, and some have been "out of office" before the stamps could be issued, but Trujillo had a brand-new idea.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE is known, philatelically, chiefly for its triangles, but the provisional issues for Mafeking are of interest, and particularly the stamp showing the portrait of Colonel Baden-Powell, now Sir Arthur Baden-Powell, founder of the Boy Scout movement and now chief scout of the world.

The Siege stamps of Mafeking are among the most interesting relics of the Boer War, and it is interesting to note that the late King George had the most complete collection of these issues. They were prepared in the town during its siege by the Boer forces, the siege lasting from October, 1899 to May, 1900. They are of two distinct types.

First there are various contemporary stamps of Cape of Good Hope or Bechuanaland Protectorate surcharged "Mafeking Besieged." These were also surcharged with new values, and were used to pay postage on letters smuggled through enemy's lines by native runners.

These stamps were provided for use on civilian correspondence by authority of Lord Edward Cecil, the overprints being made at the office of the local newspaper, The Mafeking Mail.

THE SECOND series (Scott's Nos. 178-80) was purely for local use for franking messages from point to point within the defenses and was produced by a photographic process in sheets of 12 stamps by Dr. D. Taylor. There were only two values, the first showing Sergeant-Major Goodyear of the Cyclist Cadet Corps on his bicycle, and the third with the head of Col. Baden-Powell, the commanding officer.

Some members of the garrison stuck these stamps on letters sent through the postoffice to friends outside, in addition to the regular postage stamps. This led to misunderstanding, and the report spread that these were an emergency issue of official stamps. Many unpleasant things were said about a commanding officer who would put his picture on the stamps instead of the portrait of Queen Victoria. It wasn't until nearly 30 years later that Baden-Powell was vindicated, by the publication of the memoirs of Col. Herbert Greener, who actually was responsible for the designing and issue of the Mafeking stamps. The stamps were prepared without the knowledge of the commanding officer, and by the time he saw them, it was too late to change them.

Following the relief of Mafeking the Siege stamps were officially demonetized by order of the Cape Government.

THE Danish newspaper stamps having "Avisporto-Maerke" as their only inscription are for the purpose of prepaying the postage on newspapers sent to non-subscribers. In Denmark, newspapers can be ordered at any postoffice and paid for there. The newspapers are delivered by the postmen, but unstamped. The stamps are used on newspapers delivered in bulk to news agents, and on papers not subscribed for through the postoffice.

Unusual Dishes

Asparagus and Ham Casserole.

One bunch asparagus tips, cooked, or one No. 2½ can drained asparagus tips.

One and one-half cups cooked or canned ham in strips.

Four shelled hard-cooked eggs, sliced.

Two cups well-seasoned medium white sauce.

One-fourth cup minced onion.

Arrange the asparagus, ham and sliced eggs in alternate layers in a one and one-half quart casserole. Add the sauce, in the making of which the onion is cooked tender in the butter. Bake in a moderately hot oven of 400 degrees Fahrenheit for 30 minutes. Serves six. To serve two or three, make half this recipe.

Onions Au Gratin.

Six cups sliced peeled onions.

Two cups well-seasoned medium white sauce.

Cook the onions until tender; drain. Arrange in a casserole and add the white sauce in which the cheese has been melted and to which the paprika has been added. Bake in a moderate oven of 375 degrees Fahrenheit for 30 minutes. Serves six. To serve two or three, make half this recipe. Ten cupfuls of shredded raw cabbage may be substituted.

And this is the way my Hungarian maid taught me to make an Italian dish called mustacholli:

Mustacholli.

One eight-ounce package spaghetti or macaroni.

One-half cup minced onion.

Four tablespoons butter or margarine.

Two 10½-ounce cans condensed tomato soup.

Cook the spaghetti in boiling water until tender; drain and arrange in a one and one-half quart casserole. Cook the onion in the butter until tender; add to spaghetti; pour soup over all. Bake in a moderate oven of 375 degrees Fahrenheit for 45 minutes. Serves six. To serve two or three, make half this recipe.

Linen for housedresses or smocks is not advisable, for it is difficult to iron, and crushes too easily. After working in a linen housedress for half an hour you will appear to have had it on for days.

Lower Necklines

Women who have complained about the fad of high necklines for summer will be glad to note that there are many frocks with lower necklines in this summer's collections. The oval line is featured more extensively than the regulation V, thus giving a more youthful contour to the costume. Often little scarfs are suplied so that one who prefers a high neckline can have it. Rolling collars which may be clipped either high or low also solve the problem of satisfying two types of women.

Bags for Summer

The trim little wooden bead envelope bag which has been the boon of practical women for summer use now has grown up to be a regular satchel. Instead of clutching it firmly in her hand, the owner swings it by a very substantial handle. White and colored beads are featured again, the shades being brighter than formerly in accord with the accessory mood of gayety. This trend toward vivid hues in bags also is apparent in the linen slip cover types which likewise have increased in size.

Get Most Out Of Life When Way Is Rough

Columnist Says There Is Great Danger in Soft, Easy Living.

By Elsie Robinson

SHE'S 17. And will I, "as a small favor," tell her "the secret of a successful life." Some job, youngster, but I'll try.

The secret of a successful life depends, of course, on your definition of success. If by "success" you mean and want guaranteed comfort, safety, pleasure, profit—you've come to the wrong shop. I don't know how to live a life that will guarantee such returns—nor would I tell you if I did. I've seen too many Horrible Examples in people who've striven for such goals.

But if by "success" you mean an abundant life—a challenging, colorful life—which will keep you interested and interesting until the end, then I can give you the answer in three words:

KEEP LIFE DANGEROUS.

Why dangerous? Because that's the only way to keep active. And activity is the secret of growth—and constant growth is the basis of Big and Worthwhile Living.

That's why comfort is such a menace and pleasure such a peril. You'll never be really active, in mind and soul as well as body, if you're comfortable, contented or safe, or "just having a good time."

Human beings never reach their greatest height when they're safe—when they can "take things easy." People get the most out of Life—and Life gets the most out of people—when the going's rough. Pioneering life was never safe or easy, yet there was more downright fun in the days of '49—more red hot drama—more passionate pride in human life in one day—than there is in a year of synthetic, modern living.

YOUR GENERATION, youngster, thinks that it's wild and reckless and hardboiled because it can drive an auto at 90 miles an hour or do stunts in an airplane. But breaking speed records in automobiles and airplanes is no test of your own character, kid. THE MACHINES ARE DOING THE JOB—NOT YOU.

I'm not knocking machines; nor ranting against "modern conveniences." The Machine Age was inevitable. We couldn't turn back to the pioneering days if we would.

But remember, there is deadly peril in machines as welll as convenience, for they give a false sense of achievement. The only real power is the wallop you pack in your own character, not the revolutions of a wheel. And unless you do accumulate that wallop, life will call your bluff sooner or later and show you up for the phoney which you are.

So if you want a successful life, a powerful and exciting life, an interesting and impressive life, you must do a job on yourself, girl. A job on yourself and in yourself. And there's only one way to do that—and machines won't help you. You'll have to build character just as your grandfather did, and your great-great-grandfather who never saw a machine—by your own grit.

KEEP LIFE uncertain and uncomfortable. The old Spartans with their tough technique had the right notion. You can learn a lot from a good dental ad with its rave against soft diets. But the damage done your body by soft eating isn't a patch on the damage done to your character by soft living.

Beware of happiness—or conditions which keep you happy. Beware of people who love you too much, protect or flatter you too much. Deliberately seek people who will tell you frankly that you're not so hot. Expose yourself to meanies. One good, active meanie is worth a hundred yesmen as a spine stiffener.

Above all, live so rigorously that you'll always be curious about life. A Life without curiosity is blotto. If you don't believe me, look at the dead-fish eyes of some of the sophisticates and multi-millionaires. Don't grab all you can get, or indulge yourself until you're burnt out before you've even started. Live so loanly that there'll always be a new experience ahead, a new emotion untested, untasted.

Life is desirable only as long as it is puzzling. When you find yourself no longer inquisitive you might as well phone the embalmer and tell him to finish the job.

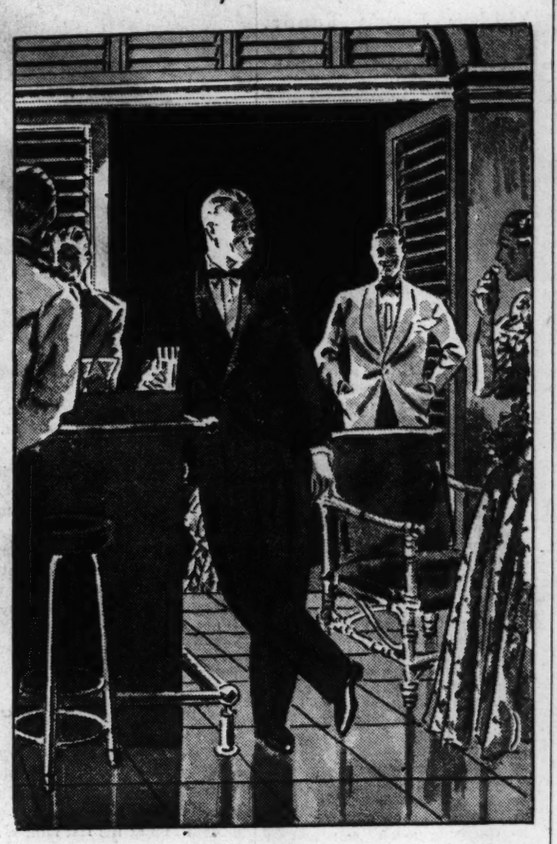
Colorful Shoes

Shoes share with gloves the new feeling for colorful accessories. Carrot red is worn much with gray; for instance, a carrot-red calfskin oxford, laced with strips of the same leather, sets off a gray worsted walking suit. Most colorful is a sandal in mimosa yellow suede with gray or blue. For wear with dark colors or dull yellow is a pump of pine green suede, the same model being also available in a deep sky blue for wear with prints or light wools.

Jam rapidly ferments if it is kept in a damp larder; a two-pound jar of lime placed on the floor under the shelves will quickly absorb the dampness.

Midnight Blue Favored For Midsummer Outfits

By ESQUIRE



SO POPULAR is the midnight blue shade for dinner jackets and tailcoats that they are now available almost everywhere. This is not surprising when one considers that midnight blue, under artificial lights, looks blacker than real black.

The above model bears a shawl collar and is made of tropical worsteds with the collar of satin. This collar is also of midnight blue. Double-breasted dinner jackets may button on either top or bottom button, and the above model shows the former cut. With it is worn a soft silk shirt with an attached soft collar, and the new, club-shaped tie, having a large knot and blunt rounded ends. The studs are of plain gold and look extremely well with the dinner jacket. The handkerchief is of blue also, but of a lighter shade than the dinner jacket. The use of a colored handkerchief, or for that matter a bottle green or maroon tie, is acceptable with dinner jackets at country clubs and similar casual gathering places during the summer.

Flowers and Plants Add to Home's Beauty

Window and Wall Brackets Will Be Helpful; Easy to Install.

IT IS all very nice to be able to give a standing order to the neighboring florist and so find our house fresh with glorious flowers. But not all of us are able to do so, and many of us don't care for this arrangement. We want the beauty and the color that fresh flowers give and so we decide to get this color and beauty in our own way.

And this way is through potted plants not standing about, but placed in wall brackets, a new and delightful arrangement. Window and wall brackets are easy to install. They can be moved around to fit in with room or furniture changes, they are inexpensive.

So there is little or no excuse for not creating these wall gardens and so bringing a little "nature" into your home, even if it is in the thick of the city, away from all growing things. If so, all the more reason to have these wall gardens. With a little artistry and ingenuity, lovely garden-like places may be introduced into the home.

Wall brackets are not expensive and thus with a minimum of expense, the beauty and dignity of flowers may be part of the appointments of the home. Of course, the brackets must be firmly affixed to the wall before we decide what to put into them.

In one apartment we saw, wall brackets and window brackets filled with lovely African violets. These are tiny, perfectly formed flowers of a rich violet color, and they grow in a mass of frosty green foliage. They are potted in miniature jars and they will bloom almost the year round, with scarcely any bother, since this flower is extremely hardy. They will cover their particular place or niche with a glorious riot of color and there you'll have a garden with bright flowers, with little expense.

Your florist will tell you of other varieties that will be just the thing for your wall brackets. And even if you don't want any growing flowers, you'll find that wall brackets offer an excellent solution of where to place flowers.

If it is a small apartment or room, often a vase of flowers seems out of proportion to the rest of the furnishings or there is the fear of upsetting the case and contents. But brackets act as lovely and artistic flower holders. But remember that a short, squatty vase should be used, rather than a tall, thin one, otherwise such a vase is likely to topple off the bracket and shed its contents, especially the latter, right over the room, with the possibility of harming delicate rugs.

So order several wall brackets, place them in advantageous corners and spots and then you'll be able to enjoy flowers the year round at a minimum of expense. White brackets are very handsome and are available in various pottery compositions, as well as in wrought-iron wire, painted white. Wall brackets with plants and trailing ivy are very delightful when placed near a window. The possibilities are endless, as you'll discover, once you've gone in for bracket gardening.

Glasses and Curls.

Be careful when using a curling iron if you wear tortoise shell glasses, that the hot iron does not come in contact with the rims. They are highly inflammable and might cause serious injury to the wearer. Remove the glasses before the curling process.

Men's Summer Suits to Have Comfort, Color

Several Smart Fabrics Now Available for Warm-Weather Wardrobe.

NOW that the head colds and other ailments and indispositions attendant upon the early Spring are evaporating beneath the genial beams of the warming sun, the young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of cool and comfortable apparel. While we warmly welcome the early days of summer we well know that later on the intensive heat will not be over-pleasant and the most sensible way to combat this is to take care that one's clothing provides the maximum of coolness and comfort. The man who chooses his summer wardrobe carefully will stand the best chance of preserving both his health and his temper throughout the long hot months.

Comfort and color are the keynotes of summer wearables for men. Never before have so many smart and colorful ensembles been available for the masculine wardrobe. These all bear the stamp of approval of men of unquestionable taste and the Winter resorts of Florida, which are the barometers for summer fashions in the North, were thronged with men in brighter and smarter costumes than have been seen for many years.

Not so long ago very few concessions were made to the warm weather. Suits of such cloths as Palm Beach and seersucker, silk and linen were reserved for country wear and never appeared in town. For one thing, they were only available in white or very light shades, and while even these shades, are now accepted in many metropolitan cities the development of the dark shades have won many men of conservative taste to summer clothes for city wear.

In addition to linen, seersucker and Palm Beach cloth such fabrics as gabardine, tropical worsteds, and synthetic fabrics are firmly established in the masculine mind as ideal hot weather kits. Nowadays, the heavier fabrics, or even those light suits which appear in the Spring and Autumn are relegated to the shelves and the discerning male selects his summer wardrobe exclusively from Summer fabrics which are especially designed to give the maximum of comfort during the dog days.

The general health and well being of the country has been enormously improved by the adoption of sensible clothing in both the masculine and feminine departments, and not only are summer suits more comfortable and healthier, but they have been styled so skilfully that their smartness rivals the cut of the custom tailored suits. Gone, forever, is the baggy, wrinkled, ill-fitting drill suit that was once the only alternative to woolen garments for summer wear. Further, constant washings or cleanings will not shrink these fabrics owing to the widespread use of sanforizing.

For town, gabardine in a natural tan, or darker shades, makes a very handsome suit for town wear and is equally appropriate for the country. The jacket looks extremely well, when cut in a three-button notch lapel model and when one is out of the city it may be worn with a pair of odd slacks. Both Palm Beach and linen are available in dark blue, dark gray and dark brown and many of these materials bear the smart patterns of winter snitings.

Seersucker in brown or gray Glen Urquhart plaid patterns or Shepherds checks looks extremely well in either single or double breasted models and is wearable both at resorts and in the city. Brown buckskin shoes are smart and comfortable and are ideal for hot weather wear, in addition to being as appropriate in town (when made in a town last). If they are out of the city a white buckskin shoe and the new brown and white Norwegian shoes are very smart and most of the leading shoe stores stock black and brown calf shoes in special lightweight models designed for summer use.

GAIN IN BRIDGE

By Ely Culbertson

THE conversation at the after-bridge supper table had drifted to the old subject of the amazing improvement in both bridge theory and practice during the last eight or 10 years. One of the company, A. Moyse Jr., had an amusing tale of his experience as a beginner.

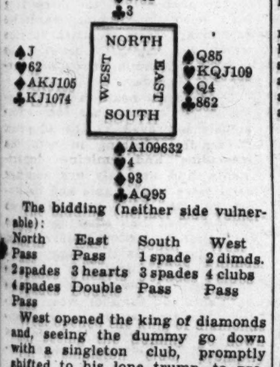
"I had just joined the —— club," he said, mentioning one of the foremost and oldest bridge clubs in America, "after having played auction for about six months, here and there. Mike Gottlieb and I were admitted at the same time. Of course, we were 'kids' to the old-timers that formed the 'expert' group of the club—the first time we played there I heard murmurs about 'taking candy from babies.' The very first hand that Mike and I played as partners, the bidding went: One no trump by the dealer, double by Mike, pass by third hand, and, having a very decent hand, I naturally passed, too. At this, not only the declarer and his partner, but a group of kibitzers gasped first and then began to chuckle. The declarer said, very patiently, 'Your partner doubled, son.' 'I heard him,' I said meekly. 'Can't I pass, anyway?' 'O—if you insist,' the declarer said. He laughed and added, 'Well, I pass, too, of course.'

"Well, we set one no trump doubled 500 points, which was, as you'll remember, an enormous penalty at auction. But—you'll find this hard to believe—I was still severely criticised by everyone but my partner for having done the unprecedented thing (in that club) of passing the double of one no trump!"

Today, there are in this country alone several dozen master players. There are hundreds of experts. Ten years ago there were not 30 players in the entire country who deserved inclusion in either of these groups. Bridge has certainly put on long trousers!

—o-o—

● WHEN THE distribution of the dummy discloses to the defenders that a cross-ruff plan will in all probability be used by the declarer, it is often vital to nip the plan in the bud by leading trumps. It doesn't follow, however, that this type of defense always is correct—there may, on individual hands, be a much better one. Take the hand shown below, for instance:



The bidding (neither side vulnerable):

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 spade	2 dimds.
2 spades	3 hearts	3 spades	4 clubs
4 spades	Double	Pass	Pass
Pass

West opened the king of diamonds and, seeing the dummy go down with a singleton club, promptly shifted to his lone trump, to prevent at least one club ruff. Dummy's king won; the ace of hearts was cashed and a second round was ruffed in the closed hand. The ace and a small club were led, the latter being ruffed with dummy's spade four. Another heart ruff by declarer and another club ruff by dummy followed. Now the fourth round of hearts, ruffed by declarer, reduced all hands to four cards. Declarer still had left the ace-ten of trumps, a losing diamond, and a losing club. All he had to do was exit from his hand with a loser and wait for the lead to come up to his trump tenace for the final two tricks of his contract.

● WEST'S ATTEMPT to stop a cross-ruff was not without merit—but a different plan would have been successful. Three rounds of diamonds would have given his partner the opportunity for a club discard—and that would have been fatal to the declarer! Dummy's trumps, it is true, would have remained intact, but with East reduced to two clubs, only one of the small trumps in dummy could have been used for club ruffing. No matter what plan declarer should adopt, he could not win more than nine tricks.

● QUESTION: Using the new "asking bids," will you kindly show how the following North and South hands should arrive at the proper contract? Opponents do not bid.

Answer: Correct use of asking bids makes a grand slam easy to reach. The bidding should be:

North	South
1 diamond	3 diamonds
4 hearts*	4 no trump†
5 hearts‡	5 no trump‖
7 diamonds

*After trump agreement, the jump bid in hearts to the four-level is an asking bid.

†Answer shows North—considering his own holding—that South has two aces and second-round heart control.

‡To decide between a small and a grand slam, North must find out about third round heart control.

Facial Animation Always Is A Decided Asset to Appearance

By Helen Follett

THERE'S nothing like animation to give the complexion a good color and to make the eyes shine. And how, asks Doleful Dora, does one get animated when the whole world is a horrible kettle of fish? Oh, ho! No use talking to Dora. If she feels that way, there's no use in her scrambling along the path of beauty. She'll never get any place.

Good health, fresh air and exercise create a sense of well-being and inspire one to get out and do things. There is also another source. It can be found in the brain that functions, that gets up and goes round like a wheel. It is a dynamo producing forces that are reflected prettily in the feminine countenance. It is a broom that sweeps out old grievances and other mental cobwebs.

The woman who is naturally animated usually has a romping circulatory system, hence a better musculatory system. She is good company, laughs at everything, especially herself.

Animation means that the face is ever changing and that makes for charm. Lights come and go.

Maybe we shouldn't deal with subjects like this, yet temperament and disposition have so much to do with charm and lovely appearance that they are a large part of the beauty formula and should not be undervalued.

—o-o—

All soaps and all creams don't suit all complexions. The facial coating can be very finicky; a sensitive epidermis can kick up a big fuss. Now and then it will refuse to accept any kind of soap, in which event one must use a cleansing oil, a cold cream or a meal. Now and then a cosmetic jelly, one of those milky liquids used for chapped hands, will give relief to a skin that smarts and burns.

Business women know well enough that plain, smart attire and good appearance are necessary to hold down the job. There is another subject to be kept in mind and that is daily exercise. Activity is the law of life and there's no physical activity in sitting at a desk or answering a telephone. For spiritual well being the body must have fresh air and exercise.

Unless the wage bringer has recreation, she is likely to find that her work is dragging. She goes stale, gets a what's-the-use attitude and possibly may develop a snap-and-snarl policy toward her family and the office force.

With the early morning rush and weariness at night, it might look as if exercise were impossible. Yet 15 minutes of calesthenics in the morning can be arranged and before going to bed a little floor rolling will be fun. It will do a lot to keep the mid-section from spreading. That horror looms ahead of any woman who gets no exercise, and who is inclined to collect adipose tissue.

While spots on the finger nails are caused by injuries to the matrix that cause air bubbles to form in the tiny overlapping scales that form the nail fabric. So, avoid steel instruments, never push back the cuticle. Soak finger tips in warm soap suds, lift the flesh gently with the orange wood stick.

Brittle nails probably are the result of diet deficiency. Drink milk which contains calcium, a food element necesarry for the health of hair as well as human talons.

—o-o—

Hair ornaments are fashionable, even aigrettes are used. But they are a problem; too likely to make a woman appear overdressed.

Ribbon bows are chic on the right girl. During the day time they are worn by duckies who would appear gay and youthful. With the hat tilted over the left ear, there can be a ribbon bow on the right side of the head, holding the finger wave where it rightly belongs.

—o-o—

Powdering the face with boric acid after the facial tubbing at night will heal pimples and discourage blackheads. Don't rub it in, the fine grains may irritate the skin if it is inclined to be sensitive.

A diet that is fairly free of fats, sweets and starches is recommended when such an unhappy skin condition is present.

—o-o—

Now that the hatless season is with us, the upped hairdress is more popular. To build it requires hair of shoulder length. Brush the strands up at the back, tie, form the puffs by rolling the strands over the fingers, sport a Recaimer coiffure, look quaint and romantic.

Those women who are sticking to short hair, clipped and waved at the back, needn't feel out of the style picture. It suits some to whom the more elaborate arrangement is completely out of harmony.

● FLOWERS ON THE LEGS is the latest fad. Painted flowers, chosen to suit your personality (you hope!) and match your bathing suit, and worn to edify the public at the beach. Patricia Ellis, Carol Hughes, Marie Wilson and Jeanne Madden, are a quartet of cinema youngsters who've gone in for this fad of late, and when I saw them, Pat had a pink and bronze tulip harmonizing with her one-piece brown satin bathing suit. Marie was in pale yellow with a golden daffodil matching her long blonde hair. Carol, in nubby blue wool, wore an enormous white gardenia, and Jeanne, in mustard wool with brown polka dots, had selected a brown and yellow pansy. It seems that the trick, as evolved by a studio make-up artist, is fairly simple. You just take a piece of cardboard, trace a flower on it and then cut it out. Then you place the cardboard firmly just above one knee, paint over the holes where the petals and leaves were with greasepaint in the desired colors, and lo, when the cardboard is removed, there's your flower!

A cute stunt and a guaranteed attention getter. There is one drawback tho. It's recommended only for the sunbathers, not the swimmers, because of course the grease paint comes off as soon as you go in the water.

● JUNE LANG, who takes a good time with her wherever she goes was seen dancing at the Trocadero the other night in a pale yellow cotton evening frock. Cotton is very smart in both its plain and fancy moods, and the new note here was that each of the white polka dots, with which the yellow was sprinkled, contained a dainty little woodland scene in miniature. It gave the effect of the fairy like pictures one glimpses in a soap bubble.

● HUSBANDS WILL HAVE to keep their closet doors locked from now on as suspenders are being shown out here for women to hold up their skirts. They are of course worn under the sport blouse, and instead of button holes and buttons, they clip onto the skirt band. I am told they keep the skirt in place and so prevent it from getting all out of shape, especially when one sits down. Not having tried this innovation I cannot vouch for it.

Elderly Women Dress to Type

OLD AGE has lost its terrors. There's no such thing any more now that birthdays aren't recorded, black on white, in the family Bible. The silver crowned contingent—silver when it isn't dyed—is golfing, playing bridge and tearing round at the same rate as the young fry. An improvement on the old regime which required every woman past the age of 50 to settle down to black robes and a rocking chair at the fireside.

Even with all these changes going on there's a widespread opinion that old ladies should wear old ladies' clothes. We beg to take a pot-shot at that idea. Elderly women should dress according to type. There are women of 60 with slender figures, and spirits who look ridiculous in what is known as middle-aged hats and somber draperies. They should wear gay colors and youthful styles because such raiment suits their characters.

Large women with serious faces who are lacking in smartness and style must keep in character. They look appropriately dressed when they appear in dark colors and garments designed for those who look their age.

Novelty Print

The astrological print is a new favorite, designed by Mary Garrison of New York and used in a series of Shirley Temple dresses. It has white sun, moon and stars on a background of bittersweet red or marine blue, and is made up into dainty dresses for little girls. The small frocks are fitted as to waistline, flared as to skirt, buttoned all the way down the front and finished with crisp ruffled collar and cuffs of lace-edged white organdie.

If the cords of window sashes are occasionally rubbed up and down with soap they will last twice as long.

An Inexpensive Way of Fixing Summer Porch

IT isn't necessary to invest in a new set of handsome porch furniture in order to do right by your porch. Of course, it is nice if one can do so, as the shops are beginning to feature most attractive sets. But let's look at them and then go home and see what we can do with that set that we put away at the end of last summer.

Why not make up your mind to fix it up as nice as you can? So begin by doing a good painting job, first, of course, having decided on a color scheme for the porch in general as well as for the set. The color scheme selected as well as the individual colors must be in harmony with the exterior colors of the house. Red, green and white is nearly always a safe scheme.

First of all, we'll get to work by scraping the paint and getting the set ready for its new coat of color. Brushing lacquer or outdoor enamel are the best media and both are easy to apply.

If you have room on your porch, why not fix up a nice couch by utilizing any cot-bed, cleverly treating is so that it looks cool and refreshing? Use waterproof or washable materials for the cover. Red and white striped or checked gingham bound with a band of white sail cloth would be good. A band of scalloped oilcloth can be tied to the legs of the cot. White sail cloth with a red bias binding would be nice, as would a scalloped binding.

A look at the exhibition terraces and porches now in the stores should help you to garner some clever ideas for treatment of a porch cot. Have plenty of cushions and cover them with sunfast fabrics. A six-way cushion to either end will make for comfort on a flat couch. A day bed can be covered in the same way and made to be just right for the porch.

A glance will show you what the shops have stocked in the way of floor coverings for the porch. Grass rugs are so inexpensive that they can be renewed every season. There are nice wool rugs with gay colorings in the borders and the clever people responsible for the new Guatemalan scheme have evolved some grand native rugs particularly adapted to the porch. Then there are rugs made of cellophane that are as handsome as they are cool and colorful. And, in the midst of all these novelties there is still that good old standby, the rag rug.

Goodness Can Be Attractive To Youngsters

By Angelo Patri

"EUNICE, I do wish you would not be so friendly with Lilybelle. She is not the sort of girl I'd like for your friend. The less you see of her the better I'll like it. It is all right to be friendly and all that, but don't be intimate with her."

"Now, mother, what is the matter with Lilybelle? She's pretty and bright and has a word for everything and everybody. She's got some life and sparkle in her. You'd like me to go with Cora. She hasn't an idea beyond, 'Isn't that sweet?' or 'How attractive!' She is a lady, of course, but what good is that if it leaves you stranded?"

"Better be stranded than marked as loud and forward and vulgar."

"That's your age talking, mother, dear. When you were young it was a crime for a girl to send a come-hither look at a boy. Not so today. If you can't master that look you might as well give up and go home to your knitting. If that is all you have against Lilybelle it is nothing."

"Words are only sounds, my dear, until meaning is put in them. I have meaning in the words I used. Loud, vulgar, forward means to me that this girl has gone beyond the limits of behavior set by decent people. There are stories going about—and from what you have told me yourself they are likely too true—that I should hate to have circulated about a child of mine. Mud sticks to a girl for a lifetime. A boy can shake it off, but not the girl. What's this I hear about Lilybelle's being mixed up in a scene at the roadhouse on the long hill?"

"Well, that wasn't exactly pleasant for Lilybelle, but she is not to blame if a boy takes too much drink, and all that. She won't go out with him again. That's all."

"The boy's mother says that it is Lilybelle's influence that made all the trouble. This is not the only instance of it. You will have to drop her. I am not going to have you mixed up in her affairs. She is not our kind. I hoped you would see it for yourself, but as you are blind to everything undesirable about her I shall forbid her the house and your association with her. I'm responsible for you yet a while."

All very well, but it rarely works out. Orders, bans, denunciations alike fail in the presence of the attractive, dramatic child. It is too true that goodness often appears very drab to young people. Too often it is negative, inactive, colorless. The wayward child is dramatic. He dares and does and rarely dies. There is always one or two of him in any adolescent group, and leadership is undisputedly granted him. Like sheep the others follow.

It is idle to talk against him. Idle to ban his company. The only thing to do is to beat him at his own dramatic game. Make goodness more attractive than daring lawlessness. That is very difficult because goodness is usual while the lawlessness of the dramatic child is extraordinary. It makes someone's task difficult and delicate, this combating dramatic behavior of the wrong sort with dramatic behavior of the good sort. But it is not an impossible task, and certainly it is a worthy one.

Plan entertainments; train leaders; learn to laugh with youth; adjust your ways and your surroundings a bit to meet the gayety they extend toward life. Save the words and put drama into your activities, and you will win.

Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of the Post-Dispatch, inclosing a three-cent stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

On Diseases That Appear, Flourish, Die

They Spend Themselves, But Other Ills Take Their Places.

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

DISEASES appear, flourish and die. Some of the most devastating epidemics that the world has ever seen were caused by diseases which most modern physicians have never had an opportunity to become familiar with, such as typhus or spotted fever, jail fever, the plague, the Black Death. Few modern physicians have much acquaintance with smallpox. And yet these diseases have wiped out more populations than all the wars from Alexander to Napoleon.

Modern civilization, however, has its own diseases. For instance, death and disability from automobile accidents. The introduction of the wholesale use of new drugs frequently uncovers new diseases, such as the curious blood disease called "agranulocytosis," in which the white cells of the blood disappeared, which was due to the use of the drug, amidopyrine, quite popular a few years ago.

For one reason or another we have also had entirely new infectious diseases in the United States—for instance, undulant fever and tularemia.

The greatest mystery, however, is the disease which used to be very common, called "chlorosis." I notice in the Annals of Medical History an article which is called "Chlorosis—An Obituary," and the phrase represents the true fact, because chlorosis apparently no longer exists.

THE disease occurred entirely in young girls at about the onset of womanhood, and was often called "the green sickness." The name is supposed to describe the color which the patients presented and which made diagnosis possible on sight, but those who are old enough to remember it will echo the words of an eminent physician who said, "It takes the eye of faith to see any justification for the title of the disease. If one exercises a great deal of imagination, one may possibly see the slightest imaginable tint of olive green in the shadow beneath the chin, but that is all. To the ordinary eye, the color is a yellowish pallor in brunets, and a whitish, although extreme, pallor in blondes."

It was a form of anemia which was cured by iron. Why it should have been so prevalent 50 years ago and gone today, nobody knows, unless modern food habits, with the use of green vegetables, include more iron in the diet. I have a little theory of my own that it is not quite so infrequent today as we are led to believe, but that it is covered up with cosmetics.

When I was in Edinburgh a good many years ago, there were several wards of the Royal infirmary filled with these patients. On my last visit I asked where they were and was met by a shrug of the shoulders, so I suppose my cosmetic theory only covers a few of the cases, and that there really is a great diminution. Let us hope it means that in our generation a better and richer diet is furnished to all groups of the population.

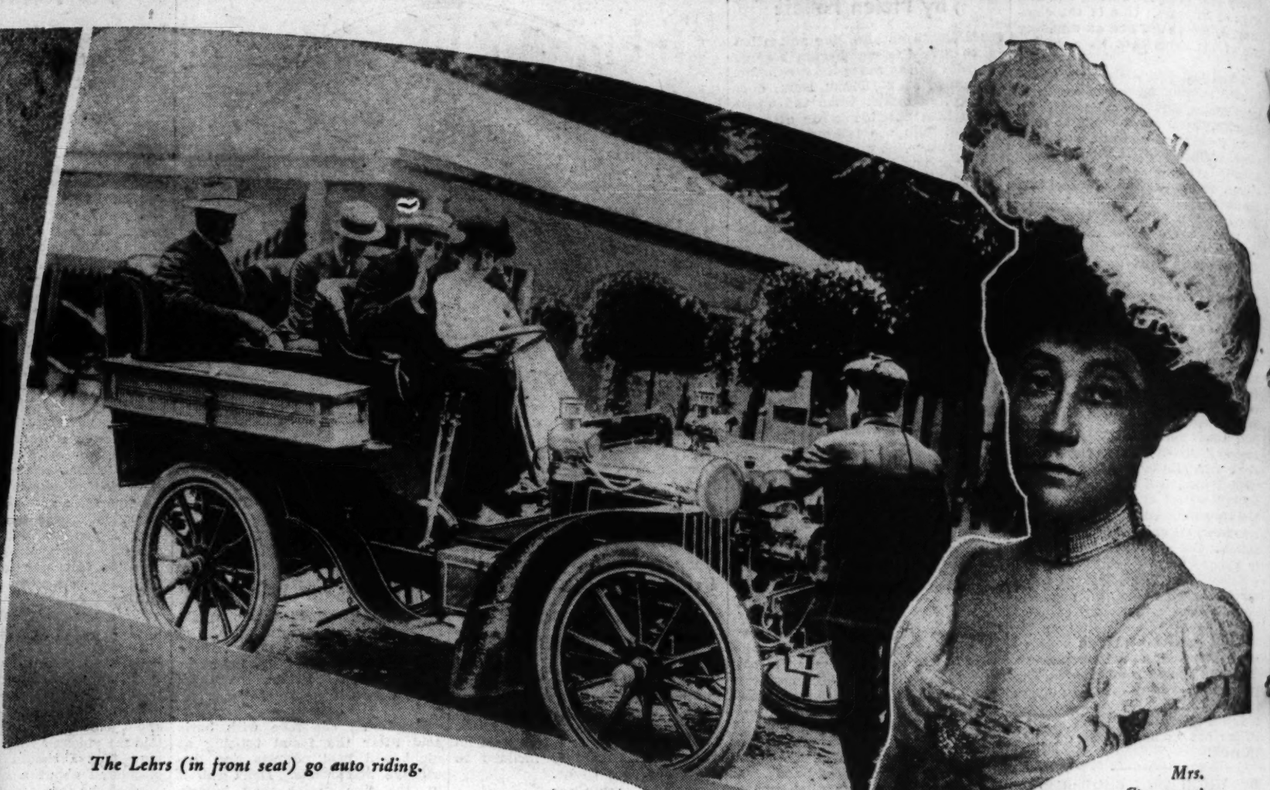
KING LEHR And The GILDED AGE

By Elizabeth Drexel Lehr

Mr. and Mrs. Lehr on their honeymoon.



The Lehrs (in front seat) go auto riding.

Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish.

Beginning the Story of the Champagne Salesman Who Was America's Social Dictator In An Extravagant Era.

CHAPTER ONE.

"I NEVER confide in anyone," Harry Lehr was fond of saying . . . "explaining oneself is the refuge of the weak; it always puts you at a disadvantage.

He put his maxim into practice. Looking back on the long years we spent together I realize how rarely he talked about himself. On the few occasions when he did so it was usually to boast of some fresh triumph, some social fortress that had fallen to his siege, for he had the vanity of a child. It was months before I gained a glimpse of the real personality of this strange man I had married, years before I grew to understand him. Only in unguarded moments did he ever lift the veil, generally when he was smarting from some wound to his self-esteem, for he was morbidly sensitive to snubs, and then as though he feared having said too much, he would scarcely speak to me for days. Since his childhood he had so cultivated the habit of reticence that it was almost impossible for him to break it.

Henry Symes Lehr was born in Baltimore on March 28, 1869. His father, Robert Oliver Lehr, was a prosperous tobacco and snuff importer; his mother, Mary Moore, had been a beauty. Harry, the third son in a family of six, grew up in the conservative background of a city which prided itself on its exclusive society composed of people whose ancestors had been pillars of Baltimorean respectability for generations. Such a community was inclined to despise New Yorkers as vulgar, and affected disdain of the new aristocracy of wealth.

In spite of his connection with trade, Robert Lehr had a fashionable position in Baltimore, a fine town house with a ballroom and a country place in Green Spring Valley. He was Consul of Portugal and Belgium and governor of the Maryland Club, which widened his circle of friends and, as Harry once told me, "was the means of wafting up the family to social summits which they would not otherwise have scaled." Mrs. Lehr travelling in Europe met the Duchesse de Bassano (nee Symes of Montreal) and the two women laid the foundations of a lasting friendship which resulted in Harry having the Duchesse for a godmother and Symes for one of his names. . . . "So you see I started off well," he said with that light laugh of his.

I think that his childhood was happy enough until the crash came when he was just seventeen and his father died leaving the family practically penniless. The eldest daughter, Alice, was already married to a Frenchman, John Morton of the famous wine firm of Bordeaux; Mrs. Lehr decided to take her children over to Europe. They settled in Cologne, where one son, Louis, studied medicine and Harry got a post as clerk in a bank. He only spoke to me once of those days, "It was like Hell . . . the wretched poverty, the grayness and squalor of it all. One day passing just like the next behind the counter of the bank, getting spoken to like a dog, always counting out sums of money for other people to spend, money that would have lifted us out of all our worries, and then drawing one's own miserable pittance of a salary."

Those days in Cologne gave him a horror of poverty that he never lost even in the days when he had the great fortune my father had left me to draw upon. . . . "I have been spending the whole morning paying bills and writing cheques," he wrote in his diary years afterwards. . . . "Such enormous sums of money they almost frighten me. I get a nightmare horror, supposing there should not be enough, although it is really absurd, for I can never be poor again, no matter what else I may be."

After two years the unexpected happened. Robert, the eldest son, was offered the chance of a post in the business that had been once his father's, and they all returned to Baltimore. In one way the move was infinitely better; it meant more comfort, comparative security, but to Harry it was almost more painful than those days in Cologne. He could not accustom himself to the new circumstances since his father's death, the changed attitude of their former friends. . . . "People treated us so differently. In our days of success there had been so many invitations; now we got more snubs than anything else. We could not afford to entertain; so people did not want to bother with us. . . ." He grew bitter and sarcastic, shut himself up at home, avoided going anywhere where he would meet acquaintances of the old days.

"But I was too sensible to let that mood last long," he told me once. "I realized that no one ever got anything out of life by retiring into a shell, and that the only wise thing to do was to adapt oneself to one's circumstances. I found out that it was no good dwelling on the past and expecting people to sympathize with me because of it; it did not take long to show me that if I wanted to get back into the social set I had been in in my father's lifetime, I should have to offer something in place of the money and position we had before."

So he offered them laughter. . . "I saw that most human beings are fools, and that the best way to live harmoniously with them and make them like you is to pander to their stupidity. They want to be entertained, to be made to laugh. They will overlook most anything so long as you amuse them. I did not mind cutting capers for them if I could gain what I wanted through it.

"Other men have to sweat in offices. I made up my mind I never would. I had only to be amusing to get a living, much better than working for one. . . ."

AFTER the first heartbreaking realization that my marriage had been a cruel farce, a marriage in name only, I began to accustom myself to the situation. My pride at least was left to me; no one should suspect the agony of disillusion and humiliation through which I had passed, the bitter irony of my pose as a happy young wife. It was almost a relief that Harry played his part of a devoted husband so perfectly when we were with other people, for at least it saved me the necessity of painful explanations.

He was incessant in his demands for money, and still more money. I gave it to him with open hands, never even discussed his extravagance. I found a fierce satisfaction in the giving; it salved my pride a little. He had married me for my money, and for that alone. . . . Well, he should have it.

And so the years slipped by and the world accounted us happy. I went to balls and receptions, entertained at Newport, in New York, traveled in Europe. One day succeeded another in the continual round of entertaining and being entertained against the background of that brilliant, glamorous social life which New York will never see again. It was easy to cheat oneself, to imagine that one was as happy as the majority of one's friends.

We spent most of the year in New York at the house which I had bought in West Fifty-sixth street. We entertained a great deal, for by mutual consent we avoided whenever possible being left in each other's company.

There were always luncheons and dinner parties either at home or at someone else's house; on the rare occasions when we had an evening free I would dine in my room and Harry would go to Tom Wanamaker, his best friend. "I went to supper at Sherry's alone with Tom Wanamaker," he writes again and again in his diary. . . . "As always his company was like a draught of wine to me. How different from the chatter of women. . . ." he comments in describing an evening spent with him.

We lived in the midst of a perpetual whirl. In those first golden years of the twentieth century, when every season could be called "brilliant," each week brought its quota of parties. Stately musicales at the beautiful house in East Sixty-fourth street where Orme Wilson, handsome, gray-haired, distinguished with his air of a Louis XVI courtier, and his wife, gentle, lovely Carrie Astor, dispensed dignified hospitality. Informal dinners given by Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, leader of the gayest set, often frowned upon by older, staider society matrons for her unconventionality, when the whole table would be convulsed with laughter at the sallies of Harry Lehr and his hostess. Dinners of lavish Southern hospitality at the Pembroke Jones' house, newcomers from North Carolina who had burst triumphantly into society, perhaps because they had profited by Harry Lehr's tip given in their first season, "Feed New York well enough and it will eat out of your hand. . . ." And so their table groaned under the weight of rare Southern delicacies, rice birds and Indian corn brought up from their own estates, chicken and corn fritters, Sally Lunns and muffins cooked to perfection by their Negro cook who had his special little kitchen while their famous Russian chef lured from the Czar's own household by a fabulous salary, prepared his elaborate menus in his own domain. The combined efforts of these two culinary artists were so successful that those who were inclined to raise disdainful eyebrows at Pembroke Jones' full-flavored jokes and noisy laugh dined with him and thereafter became his stanch champions.

Splendid costume ball . . . Louis XVI . . . Roi Soleil . . . Elizabethan . . . Venetian . . . Stuart. Strange complex that made us who belong to a society so new seek always inspiration for our amusements in the past! No one would have dreamt of anything so plebeian as modern fancy dress; we had all to be kings and queens and courtiers. Princes of trade could represent none lower than princes of the blood; it was like children playing some fascinating game of make-believe. Cotillions with a dozen lovely intricate figures, original features introduced by Harry Lehr . . . an enormous papier-mache watermelon dragged in at the Pembroke Jones' ball out of which sprang a tiny Negro pickaninny to distribute gold cigarette-cases and enamel watches to the guests . . . a huge pasteboard box delivered with ceremony in the Rollins Morse ballroom and opened to reveal Mrs. Lawrence Townsend picturesquely attired in the costume of a Chinese doll.

Harry Lehr was the acknowledged cotillion leader now. He had outstripped Elisha Dyer in popularity. There were occasional bitter words over it. . . . They took themselves very seriously.

"I dined at the Dyers' and Elisha and I had a fight about the Jones' dance," writes Harry in his diary. . . . "He was very nasty and I was calm and quiet. He will not realize that it is useless for him to challenge my supremacy. . . ."

But there had to be a trade next day for they were both to lead the cotillion at the Oliver Harrimans' ball. . . . "I led with Elisha as my second. . . ." "I was dignity itself and did not speak to him more than was strictly necessary, but afterwards we had an awful fight, he and I and Mrs. Fish. We went at it hot and heavy. Mrs. Fish took my side, which was just what he did not expect."

THOSE were the days of magnificence, when money was poured out like water. Nothing but the best was good enough, and so the best had to be procured regardless of cost. The new kings of trade might work at their offices 12, 14 hours a day, but their wives would have something to show for it. Festoons of priceless jewels draped ample bosoms, yards of historic lace trimmed under-petticoats, the greatest dress designers of Europe vied with one another to create costumes that would grace some splendid ball for one night and then be thrown away.

Gold plate gleaming on dinner tables laid for 150 guests . . . fleets of lorries coming up from the South in depth of winter laden with orchids to decorate the ballroom of some great hostess. No one thought of the cost. Cotillions with jewel favors, diamond bracelets for the women, sapphire cravat pins for the men . . . ball suppers of terrapin and quail, vintage wines, nothing but the choicest champagne . . . No one would have dreamt of giving anything else! The entire entertaining floor at Sherry's redecorated and upholstered in rose brocade just for one night . . . the entire staff of musicians, footmen and attendants equipped with Louis XVI liveries—a hundred thousand dollars as the price of an evening's amusement! James Hazen Hyde's ball cost twice that sum—but it also cost him his position in New York society.

When Henry Baldwin Hyde died, leaving his only son just graduated from Harvard complete control of the powerful Equitable Life Insurance Co., every hostess held out welcoming arms to one of the most eligible young bachelors in New York. All doors were open to him; he was feted everywhere. Only his father's old business friends looked grim and prophesied disaster. It was enough to turn any young man's head, they said.

Everyone began to talk of his extraordinary clothes, his affectations. He imported his horses from the greatest studs in Europe, stabled them at his town house.

James Hazen Hyde began telling us about his costume ball which was to eclipse in splendor any entertainment that had ever been given in New York. All the dresses were to be of the period of eighteenth century France. Stanford White was hard at work with an army of painters and sculptors transforming Sherry's into a replica of the court of Louis XVI. He had engaged Rejane to come over specially from France to recite "Racine." In all, it would cost him a cool $200,000. "Don't let that get into the newspapers," said Harry Lehr.

Even New York, accustomed to scenes of splendor, was startled at the magnificence of that ball. Stanford White had surpassed himself. The whole floor of the supper room was strewn with rose petals, thousands of orchids were massed in clusters on the walls, priceless statuary brought over from France stood in niches garlanded with flowers. All the waiters wore the authentic dress of Louis XVI lackeys. Caviar and diamond-back terrapin on the supper menu, the most expensive wines that France could produce. Harry Lehr dismayed the waiters by asking for hard-boiled eggs and a glass of cold milk. . . . "I always love to do it at a party of this sort . . ." he explained maliciously. . . . "Champagne may flow like water, but you will see the whole staff won't be able to produce a bottle of milk. . . ." He got it in the end, but he had to wait half an hour for it.

EVENINGS given over to balls, to dinner parties. Evenings at the Opera, where every woman wore full regalia, to outshine her neighbors. Diamond tiaras, ropes of pearls, enormous sapphires and emeralds, such a profusion that the problem was to find a noval way of wearing them. Mrs. John Drexel, "Cousin Alice," as Harry Lehr insisted on calling her, wore her priceless pearls set in a wide band which crossed over her imposing bosom and down her back like a Sam Browne belt. Mrs. Frederick Vanderbilt having heard that the Venetian beauties liked to toy with a single jewel on the end of a chain, decided that it would be even more original to have hers hanging before her feet. So she always progressed to her loge at the Opera kicking a great uncut sapphire or ruby attached to her waist by a rope of pearls.

Evenings at the theater where I wept over the pathos of "Camille," where Harry Lehr left in the middle of "Everyman" ("which surpassed anything I ever knew in the line of boredom," he described it in his diary), where we both laughed at the drolleries of Raymond Hitchcock in "The Yankee Consul" and enthused over Fritzie Scheff in Victor Herbert's operetta "Babette" and Elsie de Wolfe in "The Other Girl."

SHOPPING in the mornings, with Harry Lehr to choose my dresses. He had an unerring instinct about clothes and consequently his advice was always sought by all our friends. He would spend whole mornings happily at the dressmaker's with Mrs. Fish and Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, comparing models, choosing colors, telling them what they ought or ought not to wear.

As one journalist wrote:

"Mrs. Harry Lehr will sport some remarkable toilets at Newport this summer. Everyone may be included in the catalogue that spells 'dreams,' for everyone has been carefully thought out by her liege lord. I ran across him at Worth's recently, where he had the whole establishment in commotion that was heard even out on the Rue de la Paix, while the presiding genius of the temple of clothes was literally tearing his hair out in handfuls in his atelier. The particular creation that was troubling Mr. Lehr's brain, the morning I saw him, was a combination of five colors which he insisted could be made into a unit. When Mrs. Lehr trips across the lawn of the Newport Casino in this characteristic get-up she will look like an animated rainbow. . . ."

In the afternoon we would drive in the park. Those were the days when you had to love, or pretend you loved, horseflesh or be socially damned. Every house with any claim to fashion had its stables of horses from the finest strains in Europe and Kentucky, its smart turn-outs for every occasion. The John Drexels boasted of 26 different carriages, Mrs. Fish and the Pembroke Jones' must have had nearly the same number. Even the most moderate stables included light phaetons for morning, with silk-fringed white canopy tops in summer, small one-horse victorias driven by a coachman in corded livery for shopping; a more elaborate version of the victoria with two men on the box for afternoon drives, and the resplendent "grand daumont de visite" with its liveried footmen perched up behind for state occasions. In the fashionable afternoon hours there would be a long procession of carriages round the park, Oliver Belmont driving his spider phaeton, the Orme Wilsons' victoria, Mrs. Astor's chestnuts and green-liveried men, Mrs. Fish's strawberry roans, Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs' magnificent daumont.

Harry and I would often drive on James Henry Smith's coach. "How I admire that man," wrote Harry Lehr in his diary. . . . "It takes a lot of personality to bring a newcomer to society to the front like that. . . ."

—o-o—

ACTUALLY I think it was wealth rather than personality which made his social career, for no one seemed to have discovered much charm in the plain, stocky, undistinguished little man who went by the name of "Silent Smith" until his eccentric old uncle died and left him a fortune of $40,000,000. Thereafter he was presented to the world anew, so richly gilt and covered with diamonds, with such an aura of wealth around him, that no one ever thought what he was like himself. He immediately bought the William C. Whitney house with its famous gates imported from the Palazzo Doria, and there he lived alone, the quarry of all the match-making mothers in New York. He was dazed at the sudden change in his fortunes, uncertain where to look for interests. He wanted to get into society, he did not know how to do it. Edith Gould and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish came to the rescue. . . . "We are going to launch you in the right set. You must give a ball. We will organize it for you."

He gave them carte blanche to order what they would, choose the decorations, buy the gold cotillion favors. His ball at the Waldorf was the greatest success of the season, and from that moment he became "the fashion."

NEXT SUNDAY . . . Mrs. Lehr will tell how Mrs. William Astor made Lehr king of the social arbiters and of the fight for control of the "Four Hundred."

The Author.

Mrs. Elizabeth Drexel Lehr who wrote "King Lehr and the Gilded Age," is the widow of Harry Lehr, the Baltimore champagne salesman who made himself the arbiter of New York society in the latter years of the mauve decade. Her father was the late Joseph Drexel, Philadelphia banker, and she was formerly married to John Vinton Dahlgren. In the opening chapters of her book she tells of Lehr's courtship and how he informed her, on their wedding day, that he had married her for her money. After Lehr's death in 1929, Mrs. Lehr moved to Paris and has resided there since. News dispatches of last week said that she is now engaged to marry Lord Decies of London.

The League Is Dead; Long Live the League! But—Whither Bound?

Chances Are Old World Will Revert to Pre-1914 Political Standards of Secret Alliances and Military Force.

By ALBIN E. JOHNSON,
Geneva Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, May 16.

THE League of Nations, which since its creation back in 1919 has passed through many vicissitudes, has come face to face with finalities. As originally conceived by its founders—Woodrow Wilson, Lord Cecil, General Smuts and Leon Bourgeois—the League covenant is passing into history. "Its face," to quote Ramsay MacDonald's official news organ, "has been so blistered by mustard gas that it is past saving." Foreign Minister Anthony Eden's swan song before Parliament was equally outspoken, albeit more diplomatic language was used. The fact is that the covenant today, after Mussolini's African adventure, bears no resemblance to the "spirit and letter" of the document framed at Versailles.

At Geneva, where incorrigible optimists persist in clinging to their dream, one hears the cry: "The League is dead; long live the League." They say that the covenant, as such, has not failed, and until some better or more practical system for governing international relationships is devised, the League of Nations must limp along; because statesmen and Governments have failed the institution must not be allowed to crumble and the world to revert to pre-war systems of secret diplomacy and military force.

Back to Pre-War Basis?

What the future will produce to replace, or bolster up the present League, is hard to foretell. The chances are that the Old World will first revert to pre-1914 political standards and alliances.

Since Mussolini's march into Addis Ababa twilight has descended on Geneva. It may be the twilight that precedes dark night, or it may be the twilight that heralds a brighter dawn. The writer has followed the fortunes of the League and reported its proceedings since it was in swaddling clothes in London the winter of 1919-20, through the halcyon days of the Briand-Stresemann period which came after Locarno, and on through the Greek-Bulgarian and other crises which preceded the Manchurian affair and finally terminated in the Italian-Ethiopian fiasco.

In retrospect and with the League constituted as it was, it is easy to see that all that which has just happened was inevitable. Governmental psychology, which is collective human nature, made it that way. The little weaknesses which developed through the years at Geneva were cracks in a dam. Now that dam has burst and to repair it is impossible. Only an entirely new structure, which takes into consideration the deficiencies of the organization which was undermined by the Fascists, Japanese and Nazis, and bitter experiences, can successfully replace it.

Whether building a new League, based on universality and with the collaboration of the United States, Japan, Germany, Soviet Russia and an enlightened Fascist Italy, is an international task beyond the capabilities of the statesmen of the world, remains to be seen. But, if they fail to perform it there would seem to be but one alternative—back to the days of secret alliances, diplomatic bartering and military force.

Eden's Significant Words.

If anyone doubts that the League —the organization that Woodrow Wilson, Gen. Smuts, Viscount Cecil and their colleagues created —is dead he needs but ponder over the words of Foreign Minister Anthony Eden, who speaks with the weight of the British Government and people back of him.

"We have to face the fact that we have got to admit the failure of the League . . . a blow has been struck at the structure of the League and at collective security absolutely indispensable to the ordinary . . . what of the future? It is clear that the League must go on. In the modern world it is organization of international affairs . . . we have to admit that the action of the League has neither stopped the outbreak of war nor arrested it once it was begun. . . ."

It was hard for Eden, one of the staunchest defenders of the Covenant since the death of Aristide Briand, to make those admissions. Following this he went to Geneva to start a salvaging process which will continue for many months, perhaps years.

The questions he will ask his Council colleagues are:

Can we expect that in the future more vigorous League action will be possible than in the Manchurian or Ethiopian dispute?

Are nations likely to be willing to take under the covenant graver risks than they have been prepared to take hitherto?

Is it possible to organize League action that it can be preventive rather than repressive?

The answer to all those questions is no, but the delegates assembled at the death of Ethiopia, will phrase their negatives in diplomatic language.

Looking in Other Directions.

Evidences are plentiful that both the big Powers and the smaller nations members of the League are looking in other directions for guarantees of the one thing the League was expected to assure—national security. The Balkan States, banded together in the Little Entente and the Balkan Pact, which include Jugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Turkey, Greece and Rumania, have definitely decided to strengthen their alliances. France, realist to the core, has never, in the past, overlooked an opportunity to bolster up the League defenses by multi-lateral and bi-lateral defensive pacts, aimed chiefly at her traditional enemy, Germany. Britain, belatedly but earnestly, is trying to make up for lost time and is spending $1,500,000,000 on aerial and naval defenses. Russia came into the League with eyes open and without sacrificing any of her national prerogatives. She used the League rather then permitted it to use her.

Since the armistice most countries have made the League Covenant the alleged cornerstone of their foreign policies. Now their foreign policies will be the cornerstone around which a new League will be built. The revised covenant will conform to national necessities instead of national needs conforming to the "spirit and framework of the covenant."

Of more than passing importance will be the decisions of the Scandinavian and neutral states. These countries have been designated as the "conscience of the League." They have marched behind its ideals rather than behind political realities. They had something to sacrifice for a principle, it is true, but not nearly so much, materially, as did the big Powers. If any of the idealism of Geneva survives, it will be due to the solicitude of Stockholm, Copenhagen, Oslo, The Hague and Madrid. Had Washington been their leader over the past five years their task would not now be so hopeless.

In ringing down the curtain on the old League—and it is down, no matter what internationalists may say—Italy's action was the

Debunking the "BACKWARD STATES" Thesis

Huge Federal Taxes From Single State Really Paid by All

Farley's Boast of New Deal Benefits and G. O. P. Assaults on States That Seemingly Get More Than They Pay in Taxes Are Alike in Error.

Michigan, Where Autos Come From, Paid $147,900,000 Tax, Which Car Owners of Whole Nation Helped Pay.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, May 16.

STATISTICS don't lie but politicians can use them to suit their own purposes in a campaign year.

The Republicans are just now viewing with alarm the seemingly enormous amounts paid in Federal taxes by the industrial Eastern states which are being siphoned off to subsidize relief in the so-called backward states of the West. At the same time the Democrats are pointing with pride to the exceptional bounty of the Federal Government and asking for re-election on the basis of bigger and better handouts from Washington.

An eastern syndicate writer recently demonstrated that, in 1935, 24 states received more in relief payments from the Federal Government than they contributed in Federal taxes. While at the same time the other 24 states, in this "horrible example," paid far more in taxes than they got back in relief.

Expanding the Theory of 'Backward States.'

The "backward" states, it was shown, received $310,320,220 from Washington and paid $170,636,788 in Federal taxes, exclusive of processing taxes. The other states paid in $2,857,418,953 and got back $1,049,658,246. These figures were made graphic by a map on which each state was shown with either a plus or a minus amount, indicating whether it got from Washington more than it sent there in taxes.

In contrast is the proud boast of Postmaster-General-Democratic National Chairman Farley who has lately made campaign speeches in several states pointing to the size of the handout from the Federal Government. Farley has made such speeches in West Virginia, North Dakota, Connecticut and Vermont. West Virginia and North Dakota are both, by the Federal income and outgo formula, "backward" states. North Dakota in 1935 paid in Federal taxes, including processing taxes, $1,394,809 and received in relief $11,860,493. West Virginia paid in $11,816,737 and got back in relief aid $17,679,604. Boasting of the bounty of the Federal Government, Farley has spoken specifically of the sums paid out in rental-benefits, for CCC and for relief.

Myth Is Dispelled By Simple Figures.

Using relief figures to make a case, both sides ignore certain significant facts. In the light of these facts both the Republican and the Democratic points of view must be drastically modified. Take first the case against the "backward" states built up by Eastern Republicans.

They don't use the phrase "backward states." That was coined by Joseph R. Grundy, former Republican Senator from Pennsylvania, at the time he was lobbying for the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill in 1929 and proved something of a boomerang. But the Republicans today mean the same thing when they set out to show that New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Michigan, are being compelled injustly to pay taxes to support the idle in Arkansas, Kansas, Montana, Oregon.

First of all the "backward" theory ignores the fact that the Federal tax payments made by an individual state, have very little relation to the amount actually contributed to the Federal Government by the citizens of that state. To take one example, the automobile sales tax paid by the big motor manufacturers in Michigan has come from automobile buyers in every part of the country. The purchaser of a Ford car in Arkansas paid the same sales tax as the purchaser of a Ford in Michigan or New York. And what is more, the Arkansas purchaser contributed in the same proportion to the corporation income tax paid by the Ford motor Co. and the personal income tax paid by Henry Ford as the Michigan or New York purchaser. But in the tabulation by states the automobile sales tax, the Ford Corporation tax and the Ford personal income tax are all credited to Michigan.

Customs Figures Make Absurdity More Apparent.

The absurdity of applying the Federal income and outgo formula is made even more apparent if it is applied to customs duties collected at ports of entry such as the great port of New York and even St. Louis, where hundreds of cars of green vegetables from Mexico are cleared every year, as well as to internal revenue. In a tabulation by states these customs collections would be credited to the few states that have such ports whereas actually the tariffs collected are passed on to and paid by consumers in many of the 48 states.

Michigan is shown in the state tabulation as one of the plus states, paying in taxes $147,938,348 while receiving in relief aid in the same year, 1935, only $49,892,323. Only those misled by propaganda believe that the $147,000,000 was paid by the citizens of Michigan. It came from every corner of the United States.

Delaware is the best illustration of how this works. Thousands of corporations doing business in every part of the country are incorporated, because of Delaware's lax laws, in that state and pay their Federal corporation income tax through a nominal office in Delaware. Those payments show up in the Delaware total. It is not surprising to find that Delaware paid into the Federal Government a total of $35,006,001 and got back in relief the comparatively paltry sum of $642,928. Delaware's total as shown by the syndicate writer, was much larger than the Federal tax paid by all the "backward" states, with on exception and that was Minnesota which paid into the Federal Treasury $49,346,369.

The Anaconda Copper Mining Co., which derives virtually its entire wealth from the ground in Wyoming and Montana, pays its Federal taxes in New York State. The operations of this company show very well what makes the "backward" states — using the Eastern definition — backward. Mineral wealth taken out of Montana goes to pay dividends to large stockholders living mostly in other states and to pay the salaries of executives living in New York. When the depression set in and the world demand for copper dropped, Anaconda workers in Montana were thrown onto relief. Montana had little wealth to tax and so the Federal Government preforce sent aid in to meet the relief burden. The figures show that Montana in 1935 paid in all forms of Federal tax $5,663,250 while that state received in relief aid from Washington $9,085,409 or 92 per cent of the total amount spent in the state last year for relief.

Similarly the United States Steel Corporation pays Federal income tax in New York State although but two of the corporation's nearly 150 plants are in New York. The Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific railroads, without a mile of track east of the Mississippi, pay their income taxes in New York. These instances could be multiplied many, many times if it were not for the limitations of space.

How North Carolina Collected From Whole Nation.

Federal excise taxes show this even more clearly. Thus North Carolina is represented by her politicians as a plus state, paying into the Federal Treasury in 1935 a total of $285,138,571 while it got back in relief but $16,294,426. The reason for this striking disparity is the fact that most of the big cigarette manufacturers are located in North Carolina and pay their taxes there. Actually these taxes—six cents on every package of Arctic Navigator to Fly From Pacific to Archangel — Boy Pioneers Debate Right to Break Word of Honor.

By S. J. RODMAN.
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
MOSCOW, April, 1936.

READINESS to defend the Socialist fatherland and internationalism were the keynotes of the tenth congress of the Young Communist League which was recently held in the Kremlin.

Alexander Kosarev, General Secretary of the League, made a fighting speech at the opening session, in course of which he pledged that all the 7,000,000 young Soviet workers would offer their lives in defense of the Socialist fatherland, should it be attacked—a statement that was wildly cheered.

"Victory in the future war will rest with the nation possessing the strongest air force," he said. "Last year 3500 reserve pilots were trained by Russian amateur clubs. This year we shall train 8000 more."

Of the total membership of the Young Communist League, Kosarev revealed, 990,000 were trained riflemen, 50,000 sharpshooters, and 21,000 experienced parachutists.

Basic changes were made in the Young Communist constitution, by this congress, at the behest of the parent Communist party. The Young Communist League is now stripped of political power and is made a "mass youth organization," which is to devote itself primarily to education and the inculcation of Communist principles among the youth of the country.

In no field, not even in their creation of gigantic industrial enterprises, have the Bolsheviks been more successful than in the cultivation of their youth. From the very beginning, the regime realized that its future lies in its youth, and it strained all of its resources to give it every advantage and rear it as the militant partisan of the Soviet system.

Grain for Export.

Russia will soon regain her position as one of the world's greatest grain exporters, economic observers in Moscow believe. They base their assertion on the recent disclosure that Soviet grain exports jumped 100 per cent last year over those of 1934, as well as on the expectancy of a 20 per cent larger crop this year over that of last year.

A total of 1,650,000 tons of grain was exported in 1935—less than 2 per cent of a crop of 100,000,000 tons. This summer, Soviet farmers expect to reap an additional 20,000,000 tons, as a first step toward the increase of approximately 70,000,000 called for by Joseph Stalin before 1940, when he wants Soviet grain fields to yield 170,000,000 tons.

The grain available for export will therefore be considerably more this year than for some time past. In addition, millions of peasants, who formerly kept their surplus for a "rainy day" after the Government collections had been made, have now laid up an ample reserve supply. A much greater proportion of the total crop is therefore expected to be turned in to the Government collection stations in 1936.

It is probable, for these reasons, that Russia will have as much as 10,000,000 tons of different grains available for export next fall. Last year's exports of 1,650,000 tons were but 5 per cent of the world total. The Bolsheviks, however, will certainly assume a much more commanding position in the market this year.

Acre Yield Gains.

The increase in the crop will be the result of a higher yield per acre, rather than an increase in the sown area, which will be expended only slightly. Better seed, earlier spring sowing, deeper plowing, more careful cultivation, and more combines working during the harvest will be chiefly responsible for the higher yield.

Spring sowing has already been completed in many southern provinces, and the sowing campaign is progressing much more rapidly and smoothly than ever before. Unlike previous years, when many tractors were not in operation at the height of the spring season for want of sufficient spare parts and a supply of gasoline, this year, it is reported, ample supplies are available at all collective farms.

Nearly 400,000 tractors—about 20 per cent more than last year—will serve collective and state farms this spring, and the great Soviet tractor plants will have turned out many thousands more by the fall.

Russia has put its faith in the harvesting-combine and is eagerly awaiting the day when every bushel of grain will be reaped by such machines. Stalin told the reason for this last winter, when, in an address on agriculture, he stated that combines increase the yield of a given acreage by more than 25 per cent simply by salvaging grain which is lost or damaged when antiquated hand harvesting methods are used.

A total of 54,600 new combines will come from Russian conveyer belts this year, and 85,400 will be in operation by the beginning of the harvesting season.

Arctic Navigation.

The Soviet program of Arctic navigation this season is the largest ever undertaken. Encouraged by last year's achievements, when four ordinary freighters, for the first time in history, crossed the Polar seas in one navigation season—two traveling from Leningrad to Vladivostok and two in the opposite direction—the Kremlin will this year send eight vessels along the same route, bearing a cargo of 280,000 tons. Six will travel from Leningrad to the Far East and two westward. Four icebreakers, each having airplanes aboard, will be stationed along the route. The planes will reconnoiter and report ice conditions, while the icebreakers will be ready to fight ice floes that may encircle the vessels, should they be marooned. In addition to these, Russia's 47 scientific stations and weather bureaus, established in recent years along this route, will be in communication with the vessels, supplying additional information on the movement of ice packs, and weather conditions ahead.

Determined to open up the barely tapped vast natural resources which abound in northernmost Siberia, and to provide a new means to transport a large part of the North Siberian timber, coal, iron and gold, the Government has placed unlimited funds at the disposal of the now famous explorer, Prof. Otto Schmidt.

Fresh Exploration.

One hundred and seventy million rubles, as compared with 100,000,000 last year, have been assigned to Prof. Schmidt as his budget for this year. Additional settlements will be established in the Arctic, more permanent living quarters for residents in the Polar stations will be built, and wharves and dry-docks will be constructed. The navigation season does not extend beyond the few summer months, and the Russians are constructing more powerful ice-breakers, so as to extend it. Far from their offices in Leningrad and Moscow, Prof. Rudolph Samoilovich, the Director of the Arctic Institute, and Prof. Otto Schmidt will spend the summer in the Arctic. Samoilovich will head an expedition to the DeLong Islands, the northernmost land known to exist above Eastern Siberia, which

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Problem of the Machine.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

WILL the increasing and widespread use of the machine under our present economic regime eventually absorb all the unemployed? Or has our national economy reached a point of human labor saturation, virtually unchangeable, unless there is a complete change in our traditional methods of doing business? These are questions of profound importance to the American people, so profound indeed as to far transcend all other things.

What are we to do about the problem of the machine? Or is this a mere fantasy of a fevered national conscience, to be automatically dispelled by some beneficent power over which we have no control? We cannot happily exist half free, half slave, for to have millions permanently subsisting upon the bounty of others is a condition of slavery.

Yet clearly the drift of economic evolution is in the direction of an increasing use of the machine, which is a bountiful producer, but consumes none of those higher things which distinguish an advanced civilization. These inorganic devices have no superiative desires, no ambitions, no mental processes which demand and absorb the pre-eminent output of a civilized people. They are non-living producing units that displace living producing units, leaving these living units without the means to consume industry's products.

Superficially at least, they are a continuous subsidy to production, without a corresponding subsidy to consumption. They exemplify and satisfy the immutable law of economics which says that accomplishment must be in the direction of the least human exertion. Yet there is a moral law which says that he who would enjoy the good things of life must labor to obtain them. Are we then continuously to be ground between two vicious millstones, one an indulgence which demands the most for the least, the other a non-indulgence which certifies that man can live only by the sweat of his brow? One an economic law, the other a moral law.

We have yet much to learn, much to endure, much that will tax our mental and moral fiber. Such is the common lot of man. Were this not so, our wits soon would become dull, our brains feeble and higher evolution cease to function.

Favors Six-Year Presidential Term.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE 1936 presidential campaign has started. In one way, it really started March 4, 1933. Now, we listen to the many words that are hurled over the air, and, sad as it is, we come to the conclusion that the brand of statesmanship possessed by some of the speakers is very poor.

The forgotten man dreams that some day there will be an amendment to the Constitution fixing the term of the President at six years, without a succeeding term. In that time, a President could work for the good of our 130,000,000 people without having to think of his own re-election; and he could at the same time be awarded all the honor that goes with the highest office we can give to any man. We could still have campaign speeches and march and shout at conventions, but the speeches would contain facts instead of fiction.

MARY MANNING.

Bells at 5:30.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I WAS amused at an item in your paper saying that milk wagons and horses of certain dairies had been equipped with rubber tires and rubber shoes, making for quieter milk deliveries during the summer months.

This seems like a step in the right direction, but what I'd like to ask is whether relief can be obtained from a really big noise. I live in Baden, and there are two churches about a block from my home which begin clanging their bells each morning at 5:30 o'clock. What purpose this serves is beyond me. Even on week-days, I don't think laborers have to get up at 5:30, and on Sunday, everyone is entitled to sleep. One of these churches has a very powerful carillon, which rings fully five minutes every half-hour, and it might just as well be right in my room.

I have lived in three other cities, and it seems to me this practice has been abolished years ago in those places. I have written to both churches and twice to the Board of Health, and haven't been accorded the courtesy of a reply from any of them.

Surprise Subpena.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

RECENTLY, I advised the Excise Commissioner's office of a continuous violation of the daily and Sunday closing law.

To my surprise, I was at once served with a subpena to appear as a witness. In order to comply, I must get away from work for a half-day, anyway, and probably for a full day.

The policeman on the beat, who gets paid to see such things, never comes around except at intervals, which I have observed to be about twice per month.

Certainly this will be a lesson to me. Next time, I will keep my eyes closed, as seems to be customary.

DISGUSTED.

"NOWHERE TO GO BUT OUT."

What of the Senator from Idaho? Will Mr. Borah bolt at last? That is a question agitating Republican leaders. It has often been asked. In the present circumstances, it is not academic. It is taking on the color of reality.

The Senator is talking bolt as he never before has talked. To be sure, his position today is different from what it has previously been. For the first time, he has offered himself as candidate for the presidency. His canvass has been characteristic. It has been a one-man effort. As a Senator, Mr. Borah has been one of the most outstanding individualists in our history. It is as an individual that he has sought preference in the primaries. He has had no organization, in the modern sense of the term, no financial backing, none of the ballyhoo with which an aggressive candidacy is pressed.

The Republican party organization, if the high command may be called such, has been against him. Conclusive proof was furnished in the Ohio primary. His opponent, Robert A. Taft, was a "favorite son," brought out by the party machine, not as a contestant for the nomination, but as a stalking horse to be used in the jockeying at the Cleveland convention. Had Gov. Landon or Col. Knox, both accepted as avowed candidates, entered the Ohio primary, the contest would have measurably shown the respective strength of the legitimate contenders. As it was, young Mr. Taft won an empty honor, and the Ohio party organization, or machine, won the victory.

That Mr. Borah resents the tactics employed in Ohio is revealed in his speech at Newark, N. J. He is ready to leave the Republican party. He is determined to do it, "unless the Republicans select a candidate who will take hold of the question of monopoly." To Mr. Borah, monopoly is the paramount issue. It is the country's evil genius. He is persuaded there can be no honest prosperity—a prosperity that reaches all the people—until we get rid of this monster. To that end Mr. Borah has dedicated himself. The party that joins battle with the monopolistic regime, whatever it is, is Mr. Borah's party. There he will be found.

Is it likely that the Republicans at Cleveland will name a candidate satisfactory to Mr. Borah, a man he can wholeheartedly support? Does Gov. Landon meet the requirements? That is the first, and logical, question, inasmuch as Mr. Landon, at this moment, seems the probable nominee.

Only a speculative answer can be attempted. The country knows Mr. Landon as an independent oil man. In no other industry has monopoly achieved such perfection and dominance as in oil. The Standard Oil Co., in its heyday, was the apotheosis of monopoly. Legally, it was dissolved. Actually, it was divided into numerous companies, theoretically competitive. In its dispersion, the various Standard units are far richer, far bigger than was ever the parent corporation. That Standard today exercises enormous power in the oil industry does not have to be asserted. As an independent oil man, Mr. Landon ought to have had an illuminating practical experience with monopoly. How does he feel about it? What is his political philosophy as a whole?

The Kansas Governor recently answered those questions in his radio interview. As a small independent oil producer, he had, he explained, encountered "concentrated wealth in the shape of the big oil companies, pipe line companies and railroads." He went on:

> Naturally, I became conscious of the problems of monopoly, of the power and tendencies of big aggregations of capital. I suppose it is human for a business man to want to get into the position where he can fix prices and eliminate competition. . . . He thinks it will make things easier for him, but my experience has convinced me that monopoly is bad for everyone, including business itself.
> Men in monopolistic positions aren't on their toes fighting; prices are fixed and maintained so high that buying power is shut off. . . . All other groups outside the field of monopoly, particularly agriculture, are put at a disadvantage, and opportunity is closed to the small man. It will not do to think we can put monopoly on its good behavior and forget about it.

Philosophically, that statement seems to parallel Mr. Borah's ideal. Certainly, the cardinal crime of monopoly is, as Mr. Borah asserts and Gov. Landon agrees, its destruction of "fair and decent opportunity." The restoration of such opportunity, to which Mr. Landon is committed, may conceivably, perhaps logically, bring him within the purview of Mr. Borah's approval.

Suppose it does not. Suppose the nominee of the Cleveland convention fails to pass the Borah examination. By his own voluntary pledge, Mr. Borah will be obligated to bolt, to identify himself with a party that sees as he does, speaks as he does, declares war on monopoly as he does.

Is there such a party? Surely not the Democratic party, considered in the light of the Roosevelt administration's policies. Surely not in the avowed collectivism of the Socialist party, as sincerely preached by its authorized spokesman, Norman Thomas. Surely not in the Communistic credo.

Perhaps Mr. Borah, after the Cleveland convention, will choose to remain with the party of his life-long affiliation, to which he has always been faithful on election day, at whose service he has usually placed his great intellectual gifts in the hour of need.

But he is talking bolt. And if he leaves the Republican party, where can he find a party home?

In the jocund despair of the whimsical Ben King, there seems to be no option for Mr. Borah—"nowhere to go but out."

ANOTHER ARGUMENT FOR COUNTY REFORM.

The commonly cited arguments for the reform of local government were listed in the editorial from the Memphis Commercial Appeal which we reprinted a few days ago. These include the elimination of duplicated services, the promotion of efficient administration and the like.

County government in Missouri is adding another argument to the case for the reform of local administration. The other day, the former Collector of Randolph County pleaded guilty to a charge of embezzling $27,101 in county tax funds. In March, the State Auditor reported that 20 officials in Stoddard County were short a total of $48,940, the shortage growing out of statutory violations and slipshod methods.

Not long before that, the woman Treasurer of Mississippi County was found to be short upward of $58,000, and resigned. Closer at hand, in St. Louis County, the present Sheriff and County Clerk and the former Assessor and Deputy Collector all are under indictment on fraud charges.

These instances of misuse or alleged misuse of public funds indicate how readily county government lends itself to abuses. Lying between city government and state government, county government escapes with but little of the popular vigilance which it should have.

The case for reform of these outmoded units of administration—they truly do belong in the horse-and-buggy era—grows stronger all the time. The more county officials defraud taxpayers, the more this will become a popular conviction.

SAUCE FOR THE GANDER.

The business man has a great stake in seeing that this is a campaign of education and not one of vituperation. It should be the endeavor of all to see that the economic and social issues involved are presented fairly and thoroughly to the American people. The issues demand this consideration, and the public and business, which carries the economic load, are entitled to this fair treatment. In no other way can the people be properly prepared on our far-reaching problems to take wise and constructive action at the polls. . . .

If there is disagreement as to specific policies and procedures, the criticism should be forthright and specific. It is destructive to masquerade such objections behind the cloak of generalized attacks.—Secretary of Commerce Roper in a radio speech May 11.

That's fine, Mr. Roper. That's splendid. The judicious, of all shades of political opinion, will give three cheers. But why not make it apply all around? What's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander.

We seem to recall occasions on which Mr. Roper's boss, the President of the United States, has swung his shillalah among his opponents without bothering to see whose skulls were being cracked. Some of the President's criticism, Mr. Roper, has cut a pretty wide swath. "Tories," for example; the President has made that word—not an urbane word, as he has used it—cover a lot of territory. "Tories," we should say, has been the President's principal Scathing Denunciator, as "Malefactors of Great Wealth" was T. R.'s. These "Tories" of the later Roosevelt have seemed at times to embrace not merely the minions of "entrenched greed" and those who opposed driving the "unscrupulous money changers" from the temple, not merely "gentlemen in well-warmed and well-stocked clubs" and "political puppets of an economic autocracy," but all who happened to oppose the New Deal policies on any ground.

And to follow the advice of Mr. Roper and be specific, here are a few more of the President's wallops at his opponents:

In a sockdolager at newspaper publishers, when signing the newspaper NRA code: "The freedom guaranteed by the Constitution is freedom of expression, and that will be scrupulously respected—but it is not freedom to work children, or do business in a firetrap, or violate the laws against obscenity, libel and lewdness."

Pouring it on American bankers by inference: "Let it be recorded that the British bankers helped." (Vocal italics over the radio.)

In a speech to farmers (1935): "A great many of the high and mighty—with special axes to grind—have been deliberately trying to mislead people who know nothing of farming by misrepresenting—no; why use a pussyfoot word?—by lying, about the kind of farm program under which this nation is operating today." (Note—The program was killed by the Supreme Court a few months later.)

Isn't the White House the place, Mr. Roper, to begin your crusade? Why not start with the boss?

GOV. HORNER AND GOV. PARK.

Gov. Horner has announced that he will call a special session of the Illinois Legislature to meet before June 1 to take up permanent registration of voters. This action means that the Governor of Illinois has not yielded in his determination to secure a law whereby the people of his State will enjoy the economies and other benefits that result from permanent registration. The movement is backed in Chicago by a number of outstanding citizens, such as State's Attorney Courtney, who view permanent registration as a bulwark for honest elections.

There are many Missourians who will be interested in Gov. Horner's refusal to accept the Illinois Senate's rejection of the last permanent registration bill—a rejection dictated by the Kelly-Nash combination in Chicago, which has since been overwhelmingly defeated in the nominating primary. However, Missourians will be most concerned with the fact that Illinois has a Governor who is willing to assemble the Legislature in the interest of a worthy cause.

Illinois can have a fourth special session to take up permanent registration because it has a Governor who is convinced that an adverse vote in the Senate did not represent the views of the people, but the demands of a pair of bosses. Missouri cannot have a first special session to provide unemployment relief and improve the old-age assistance legislation because it has a Governor who places the convenience of politicians above public necessity.

That is the difference between government in Missouri under Gov. Park and government in Illinois under Gov. Horner.

BETTER CONDITIONS AT THE AIRPORT.

Sweatshop conditions in the control tower of Lambert-St. Louis Field, criticised by the Post-Dispatch in an editorial of May 9, have been alleviated by the appointment since then of two additional dispatchers to share the work with Archie League. At the time our criticism was made, League and Milton D. Girton, who has just been dismissed as superintendent of the field, were required to spend 12 hours a day seven days a week in the tower at the exacting job of controlling air traffic.

Since then, Girton has been replaced by Ralph Page, formerly assistant superintendent of the airport, and Capt. Frederick Johnson and Lawrence Jewell have been given control tower jobs. The tower will henceforth be operated in eight-hour shifts. It is ironic that Girton, who fought for this change, should see it achieved only at the cost of his own job; morever, that Lawrence Jewell, whom Girton had vainly recommended for one of the dispatcher jobs, and over whom arose the dispute that led to Girton's dismissal, should at last have been selected.

Apart from this regrettable phase of the changes made at the airport, it is well that the City Hall decided to take action in a situation which might easily have produced a bad accident. No man can work 12 hours at a job requiring instant and accurate decisions without fatigue and the consequent danger of lapses of good judgment. That no accident occurred is a piece of good fortune.

We renew the suggestion that the airport be removed from the Department of Public Welfare, whose director has a multitude of duties in fields remote from aviation, and placed under some other supervision where it can receive constant and expert attention. With increasing air travel, only eternal vigilance at the airport can insure against tragic occurrences.

Law and the Jury in Damage Suits

Discussing "the inanity of instructions to the jury in a damage suit," law professor says this ostensibly objective function now is largely legal strategy; jurors, not the Judge, in reality apply the law to the facts, he adds, and are sole appraisers of defendant's liability; assails also the "ancient and hackneyed phrases" employed.

WHEN we speak of the law controlling a jury's verdict, what we usually have in mind is that it will reduce to a minimum the chances of the jury's own notions determining what is right and what is wrong, as distinguished from what is true and what is false. Legal theory puts this idea into the familiar horn-book rule that the jury's function is solely to find the facts in a case, while it is the Judge's function to find and reveal the law applicable to these facts.

Unfortunately, in actual practice this simple demarcation of the functions of Judge and jury cannot be strictly maintained, for the plain reason that one of the two has to exercise a third function—that of applying the revealed law to the revealed facts. Under the "general verdict" system which prevails in Missouri and many other states, this third function is left to the jury. To apply the law to the facts, however, the jury—consisting as it does of laymen—must be informed as to what the law is. This process of enlightening the jury is supposed to be accomplished by what are known as "instructions to the jury."

It will probably come as a surprise to most laymen that, though these instructions purport to be the instructions of the Court, actually they are for the most part written out by the lawyers in the case, and then submitted to the Judge, who has the right to read to the jury those which he thinks correctly state the law and to revise or reject those which he thinks do not. This system in turn accounts for a very interesting bit of lawyer strategy in the trial of many a damage suit.

The plaintiff's lawyer submits as few instructions as possible, while, on the other hand, the defendant's lawyer submits as many as possible, including a number that he has purposely framed to appear doubtful, in the hope that the Court will refuse them. The reasons for this strategy reveal only too clearly the opinion shared by lawyers on both sides of the case as to the practical value of the Court's instructions to the jury.

The plaintiff's lawyer, knowing the jury's sympathies are ordinarily with the plaintiff in a damage suit, and that ordinarily the evidence is technically sufficient to prevent the trial Judge from setting aside the jury's verdict as being against the weight of the evidence, realizes that his only risk lies in the Court's reading an instruction that does not correctly state the law—not, however, for fear of any adverse effect that it might have upon the jury, but for fear that because of such an erroneous instruction the appellate court might order a new trial.

In other words, being fairly sure of a verdict in his favor at the hands of the jury, regardless of the instructions, his chief concern is to make it "stick" should the defendant take an appeal. To lessen the danger of the case being ordered back for retrial because of some erroneous instruction, he refrains from submitting more than one or two instructions—only those that he thinks he must have read to the jury for technical reasons, or perhaps to counteract the small effect that an instruction from the opposing side might have upon the rare juror who pays attention to instructions.

The defendant's lawyer, taking the same view of the practical effect upon the jury of the Court's instructions, realizes that his only real hope is to have an appellate court set aside the jury's verdict for the plaintiff on the ground that the trial Judge either gave an instruction which he should not have given or failed to give one which he should have given. His strategy, therefore, is obvious.

In the first place, he makes no effort to persuade the Judge not to give an instruction for the plaintiff that he knows is wrong. Indeed, he rather hopes that the Judge will make the mistake of giving it. In the second place, he submits as many instructions as possible for his side—not, however, for any practical effect that they might have upon the jury, but mainly in the hope that the Judge will refuse an instruction that happens to be material and does correctly state the law.

To increase the possibility of such an error by the Judge, it is common practice for the defendant's lawyer to frame instructions that purposely appear wrong, though upon close examination they turn out to be so sound and material that an appellate court will set aside the jury's verdict if the Judge has refused to give them.

The inanity of instructions to the jury in a damage suit is further accentuated by the extent to which the law seizes upon ancient and hackneyed phrases to express the objective standards by which a jury is expected to arrive at its verdict. Thus, in seeking to guide the jury in deciding whether the defendant's conduct was negligent—and nine out of every 10 damage suits at present are based upon negligence as the particular misconduct of the defendant—the standard which the law prescribes for the guidance of the jury is "the conduct of a reasonably prudent man under the same or similar circumstances." This phrase has become so deeply embedded in the law of negligence that to uproot it would take a juristic revolution. Each word is uttered with almost religious awe, for the proper incantation of the phrase to a jury is supposed to have a talismanic power—the power of enabling the jury to determine objectively whether the defendant's conduct was negligent or not.

It takes but a moment's reflection, however, to see that the phrase does not possess the objectivity which the law claims for it. For the type of man whom the jury will conceive as being the "reasonably prudent man" must necessarily come out of its own individual ideas of what is reasonable and what is prudent. Far from being the coldly objective person envisaged by the law, the "reasonably prudent man" becomes in reality a person of very warm flesh and blood—for he is none other than the juryman himself.

Equally subjective and therefore ineffective is still another standard by which the law presumably controls the private notions of the jury in a damage suit. Among the so-called "facts" which a jury must find in order to render the defendant liable is that the plaintiff's injuries were caused by the defendant's alleged misconduct.

The hair-splitting phraseology—"proximate cause," "efficient cause," "direct cause," "immediate cause," "real cause"—by which the law attempts to define the meaning of causation for a jury of laymen is just so much jargon, utterly incapable of controlling the jury's private notion as to whether the plaintiff's injuries should be legally attributed to the defendant's misconduct.

The candid opinion of most lawyers, experienced in the trial of damage suits, is that, so far as the jury is concerned, the problem of causation is simply a problem of liability, i. e., should the defendant be made to pay for the plaintiff's injuries? In the final analysis, therefore, the jury, which theoretically is supposed to be only a fact-finding agency, becomes the actual and uncontrolled judge of the defendant's legal liability.

What Should the League Do?

From the Milwaukee Journal.

AS the Italian delegates walk from the League of Nations session, it ought to be clear to the other countries assembled that there can be no compromise between the League position and the Italian position.

Three real courses are open. One is to wipe the slate clean and forget the last seven months, as the Italians propose. In other words, for the League to eat its own program and its own Covenant. That, bluntly, is what the Italians ask.

Another is for the League sharply and definitely to challenge the Italian victory, deny Mussolini the right to his new empire on the ground that he obtained this right through aggression, and prepare to cross swords with Italy. A trial by force would be the inevitable conclusion of such a policy.

A third course would be a complete reorganization of the League, including the rewriting of its Covenant. Such a course has also been suggested by Italy, and by some League students in this country. They argue the impossibility of pursuing any of the other lines of action without disaster to the world peace movement. To do this would be also to wipe the slate clean automatically. But it would also put the new organization under the handicap of weaknesses already admitted.

A fourth so-called course, and the one that is always in favor among those who think only in terms of diplomacy, is to stall and temporize, pass meaningless resolutions, put things off. That is just what the diplomats seem to be cooking up at Geneva right now. And it will not work. To put the whole problem off until June is to have things no better, and probably a little worse.

The League has listened to the kind of reasoning from Italy that disgusts anyone. At the start of the war, Italy would not sit in with the Ethiopian delegates, claiming not to recognize the very nation she had voted for when Ethiopia was asking membership in the League. Now the Italians will not sit in because they say there is no Ethiopia, when the question now is, Why is there no Ethiopia?

The impotency of the League in its present course is so patent that it cannot be concealed from anybody in the world.

A GOOD deal of Britain's national debt, like our own, has been built from extravagant follies of past years, and a good deal of the burdensome new taxation, also like our own, is to pay for these. But they and we are learning that it is a Via Dolorosa that leads to the land of balanced budgets, yet it must be traveled.

URGES U. S. SPEND $6,000,000 FOR AIRWAY SAFETY

NO PROTECTION FOR 6000 MILES

Statistics Show How Safeguards Have Decreased Accidents, Increased Efficiency.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
201-205 Kellogg Bldg.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—A report urging installation of additional aids to air navigation on American and Alaskan airways costing $6,000,000 was made by the Committee on Air Commerce Planning today, a part of Secretary of Commerce Roper's business advisory council.

As in recent testimony before the Senate committee that investigated air safety, the report pointed out that on many airways the aids to navigation have become obsolete "due to their being five, six and even eight years old."

"The science of aerial navigation," said the report, "has advanced beyond the aids provided on the ground. The existing aids need improvement, modernization and additions."

While there are 28,000 miles of Federal airways installed under authority of the Air Commerce Act of 1926, aids to navigation exist on only 22,000 miles, the report states.

Statistics on Efficiency.

"The aids already installed," the report stated, "have increased safety and efficiency in air travel to a great degree as shown by the following comparisons: In 1926 scheduled air lines flew 4,318,087 miles and carried only 5782 passengers. In 1935 they flew 60,000,000 miles and carried 860,000 passengers. Where in 1931 the passenger miles flown per passenger fatality were but 5,000,000, safety has increased so that in 1935, 29,000,000 miles were flown per passenger fatality.

"While in 1928 a fatal accident occurred for each 890,000 miles, by 1935 safety had increased to such an extent that a fatality occurred only after an average of 8,700,000 miles. The aids herein requested will still further greatly increase safety as well as regularity, reliability and dependability of service. An increase in these factors will lessen the fear of air travel.

A decrease in fear of air travel will considerably increase passenger business, thus permitting the air lines, which are now annually running millions of dollars "into the red," to approach operation in black ink, and thus make it more nearly possible for air lines to conform to the existing law, which anticipates the air lines being "in the black" in 1938.

Division of Funds.

Of the proposed new aids, the report recommends that $5,000,000 be spent in continental United States and $1,000,000 in Alaska. The $5,000,000 coincides with a request made by the Department of Commerce for additional funds for new aids.

The Bureau of Air Commerce is still working on its report into the crash of the TWA plane, the Sunracer, at Uniontown, Pa., near Pittsburgh. Twelve persons were killed in that crash and members of the Department of Commerce held extensive hearings at Pittsburgh in an effort to determine the cause.

Also a report is awaited from the Senate Investigation Committee which held a lengthy inquiry into air safety as a result of the crash at Atlanta, Mo., in which Senator Cutting of New Mexico and four others were killed about a year ago. This report is being prepared under the direction of Col. H. H. Hartney, air expert employed by the committee.

Lines to Spend $15,000,000.

The air lines are now planning to spend $15,000,000 on "new, more modern and safer equipment," according to the report of Roper's Air Commerce Committee. "It is believed," the report added, "that this administration can and should insure air travelers that degree of safety which they are entitled to expect when they purchase transportation or proceed by private plane over the Federal aerial highways.

"Air traffic," said the committee, "has increased so greatly within recent years that our airways are now badly congested around certain major air terminals. Aids for air traffic control are just as necessary at this ever-increasing number of air terminals as are traffic control lights for highway traffic in congested cities.

"These aids are to air traffic what safety devices are to railroad traffic. In good weather neither are necessarily used but one cannot choose atmospheric conditions over protracted distances of travel. Under adverse weather conditions, airway aids are indispensable.

"These proposed and necessary future airway aids, while in some cases subject to modernization and improvement as years go by, will last the Government a number of years into the future."

Chairman of the committee is Col. R. G. Elbert. Recently there have been numerous resignations from the Business Advisory Council by business heads who charged it was entirely dominated by Roper, to large part for political purposes.

The "Backward States" Thesis

20 cigarettes—were paid by smokers in every state in the union. The same explanation applies to Virginia and to Kentucky where, in the latter, excise taxes on liquor as well as tobacco make the total large. As with the cigarettes, the liquor made in Kentucky is not consumed solely in Kentucky, but in every state, and the tax is paid by citizens of Oregon as well as Florida, New York as well as New Mexico.

Again with the Federal processing taxes levied under the defunct AAA the same disparity is plain. The Negro share-cropper who bought a cotton work shirt in Mississippi paid a processing tax. But the cloth was woven and the shirt made in Pennsylvania, let us say, and the tax was paid to the Federal Government from that state. The flour mills of Minneapolis and St. Paul processed the wheat of the entire Northwest and the flour was sold throughout the country, but the tax was credited to Minnesota.

At first glance it is surprising to find Oklahoma among the states with a large tax balance in excess of relief received from Washington. It is surprising, until it is recalled, that the Federal gasoline tax is collected from refiners although, of course, this tax is ultimately passed on to consumers everywhere. Oklahoma paid a total in Federal taxes of $44,144,765 and received in relief aid $19,430,856, which was 89.7 per cent of Oklahoma's whole relief bill. The same is true of Texas, where there are numerous oil refineries and to a lesser degree of Louisiana.

Certain striking coincidences may be observed in the statistics of taxes. Thus corporation and personal income tax for the whole country amounted in 1935 to $1,230,804,700, which is very close to the total sum paid out by the Federal Government for relief to the states—$1,359,980,575.

It is interesting to note here that the Eastern syndicate writer, who went to such pains to show half of the states were subsidizing the other half, excluded processing taxes from his Federal tax total because "they were paid in the states where farm products were processed, not where the final burden fell." This assumes that income tax, both personal and corporation, and excise taxes were paid in the states where the ultimate burden fell which is plainly not true as has been shown thus far in this article. But here is a striking fact: By omitting processing taxes from the Federal tax total, the syndicate writer got 24 "backward" states and 24 states that were paying the bill. By including processing taxes, which is done in the table accompanying this article, there are only 15 states in which the cost of their Federal relief aid was not matched by the amount they paid into the Federal Treasury in taxes.

The basic flaw in the "backward" states thesis is the assumption that wealth is created in, say, New York City. Those who make out this case ignore the fact that the actual producer of the goods which are sent to be processed in the great industrial centers of the East receives a relatively small share of the ultimate cost of the goods. The manufacturer, the middleman, the broker, get the larger share. The New York cotton broker, who is one of three or four middlemen aiding in the sale of the cotton crop, is likely to have an income anywhere from 10 to 100 times greater than that of the average cotton grower.

Nation's Money Siphoned Into Few Financial Centers.

During the last 15 or 20 years the nation's distribution system has evolved more and more to the function of siphoning money into two or three centers of finance, but particularly into New York. Money taken in by the manager of a chain store in a small Missouri town does not stay there very long. It is often sent daily by postal money order to headquarters. Most of it sooner or later finds its way into two or three central banks in Chicago or New York. A part of it goes to pay the overhead cost of the central organization—for the salaries of executives in the parent office, for example. Of the balance a considerable part goes into dividends for the relatively small number of persons who have large stockholdings. The whole elaborate holding company system has helped this process along.

But regardless of these facts those in the East who damn the "backward" states assume that the Federal taxes collected in New York State are all contributed by citizens of that state. In actuality, of course, since wealth has been siphoned into New York, the Federal tax collector must go there to get it. Some striking contrasts are shown in the personal income tax records. In New York State Uncle Sam collected $189,368,042 in personal income tax last year; from the same tax in North Dakota the total collected was $254,816. This is at the rate of about $15 a person in New York and about 37 cents a person in North Dakota.

The "backward state" propaganda goes back many years to the origin of grants-in-aid to the states, for vocational education, maternal care, the National Guard, agricultural advancement and so on. Geographical rather than political lines dictate the "backward state" point of view. The late Albert C. Ritchie, four times Democratic Governor of Maryland, was always denouncing subsidies to "backward states." Senator Copeland (Dem.) of New York, has had many caustic things to say about benefits to "backward states" under the New Deal.

New Deal Benefit Really Paid by Consumer.

So much for the "backward" theory. Now for Jim Farley's boast that the New Deal has been a bountiful godfather to the poorer sections of the country. Last Thursday he went into the only northeastern state that shows in the syndicate writer's tabulation as a "backward" state—Vermont — and reminded the citizens of Barre how much they owed to the New Deal.

". . . It has been conservatively estimated that more than $62,000,000 has been allotted, loaned, expended or disbursed in the Green Mountain section since March, 1933," Farley said." . . . You know better than I how many banks were saved, how many people were kept employed, and how many merchants were kept from going out of business. You know that relief money was cash money and that without it the retailers of Vermont would have been hard pressed indeed."

First, he might have added that the Vermonters themselves were in considerable part paying for their own benefits. When a relief client in Barre used a part of his relief allotment to buy a pound of bacon, he was paying, under the AAA, a tax out of which the boasted benefits were paid. This would apply even more directly in North Dakota where Farley reminded the farmers they had received $30,000,000 "in rental and benefits." When a farmer in North Dakota bought a work shirt, he contributed to the benefits received by the cotton farmers of the South. And correspondingly the farmer in Alabama in buying his salt pork helped to pay the benefits sent out to the farmers of the Middle West.

This illustrates how the recipients of benefits contributed directly to the benefits they received. In innumerable indirect ways also the cost of Government benefits has been passed on to the consumer, both on the farm and in the city.

Farley's Boast Ignores the Real Question.

In the second place, Farley's boast is a crude one which ignores the real question. If one of the chief functions of the Federal Government is to equalize the differences between wealthy states and poor states, between the centers of finance and the rural areas, as Farley's boast implies, then it is logical to ask if North Dakota, Arkansas, Montana, are getting their fair share. Farley told his North Dakota audience of the benefits sent there by the New Deal, but the fact remains that the citizens of North Dakota paid an average of 37 cents a person in personal income tax, while the citizens of New York State paid an average of $15.

The Federal Government, considered as a colassal machine to equalize the wealth of sections, has glaring faults which a politician must necessarily ignore. Politics gums up the works. It seems clear that the amount of Federal relief sent into Pennsylvania, for example, has been dictated by political considerations. The Federal Government paid 76.8 per cent of Pennsylvania's relief bill in 1935. Three "backward" states, Kansas, Vermont and Oregon, contributed a greater percentage to their total relief bill. The Federal Government paid only 65.3 pr cent of Vermont's relief bill, which may be compared with Rhode Island, the prize state, where only 35 per cent of Federal money went to pay the cost of relief. And in North Carolina, the State of the tobacco millionaires, where the Federal Government collected $285,138,571 in taxes, the Federal Government met 99.7 per cent of the total relief cost.

Apart from politics, the machine itself, as an equalizer, is cumbersome, very costly and subject to frequent delay and breakdown. Because of legal and other restrictions, it must function in large part indirectly. With each change of administration the organization politicians make strenuous efforts to get their hands on the controls, so they can operate the machine for their own purpose, which is in no small part to perpetuate the control of their organizations.

How Hopkins Makes Up Federal Relief Budget.

Describing for the House Appropriations Committees how his experts made up the Federal relief budget, Harry L. Hopkins, Administrator of Relief, said that they applied three measuring rods. First they drew up a chart indicating the relative position of the States in accord with 12 tests of wealth—net retail sales, gasoline consumption, personal net income reported, etc. Second they considered relative need, the fact that in April, 1934, 4 per cent of the population of Vermont was on relief and 35 per cent of the population of North Dakota. Third they determined the State's ability to pay for relief as based on its tax structure, debt, borrowing power, and so on. And finally they adjusted these measuring rods in accord with the "case method," analyzing the problem of each individual State; in the light of a law, for example, restricting the debt limitation as in Nebraska and Kansas, or in the light of a racial problem as in Alabama, where most of those on relief are Negroes and where there is, therefore, a fixed hostility to giving relief.

Having done this, a final composite yardstick was applied to the entire estimated cost of the relief bill for the year. It was found, for example, that New York State's ability to pay was 20 times that of the lowest State on the list. The total relief bill was $500,000,000. New York's share was allocated as one-fifth of the total or $100,000,000. This is the "block grant" system, made a law in Great Britain, as applied to all subsidies to local government, in 1929. This is contrasted to our system of grants-in-aid, in which subsidies are allocated on a basis of population.

What Happens When Politics Steps into the Picture.

Hopkins' experts then, and they are first class in their respective fields, have drawn up a budget for each State. But that only is the beginning of the battle. Governors, Senators, a host of lesser officials, descend on the Relief Administrator to argue that their State should get more. And if they are potent politically, as Senator Guffey and Gov. Earle of Pennsylvania, a "doubtful" State, are potent, then they get the budget hiked up. Aside from the fact that he is inevitably subject to political pressure, Hopkins' powers to compel a State to accept his budgetary estimate are limited. He can withdraw Federal aid and in Ohio and one or two other States he has done just that. But this form of coercion works grave hardship on innocent persons dependent on relief.

This then, in general, is the picture. The truth lies in a thorny thicket of facts, figures and intangible relationships. But the basic truth is a simple one; the producers of raw materials in the South and West receive a small share of the nation's income while the processors, brokers, manufacturers and middlemen in the East get an exceedingly large share; and Federal aid for relief is an attempt to make up that difference at least to such a degree that the producers of the West and South shall not be permitted to starve to death.

SOCIALISTS TO OPEN CONVENTION SATURDAY

Dispute Over Seating of Delegates Expected at Cleveland Session.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, Ohio., May 16. — Socialist leaders predict a spirited skirmish over seating of delegates when the convention of the Socialist party of the United States opens in Cleveland's public hall next Saturday.

An intra-party split between so-called "Militants" and "The Old Guard" is expected to reach a climax when rival factions attempt to seat separate delegations from New York and possibly other states.

"The dispute will be in fact a 'vote of confidence' in the National Executive Committee and Norman Thomas, who has borne the brunt of the Old Guard attack," said Hy Fish, the party's labor and socialist press service editor.

Apparently Thomas, leader of the Militant group, will not be opposed as a candidate for the party's presidential nomination, Fish added, "since no one else has been suggested."

To Criticise New Deal.

Leo Krzycki of Milwaukee, Wis., Executive Committee chairman, keynoter for the convention, said the party would take issue with social legislation of the New Deal.

"We must clearly show in this campaign the differences between Socialism and the New Deal," Krzycki said. "This social legislation is merely a palliative, a patch.

"Our 1936 platform will stress cures. We will emphasize that what was offered in the past four years is not the Socialist remedy. The fact that 12,600,000 people are still out of work is evidence of it."

Fish said the "Militants" and "Old Guard" differed on the "degree of aggressiveness the party should employ in the achievement of power." At Detroit in 1934, he said, a dispute arose over the party's declaration of principles. It grew in New York State, he added, when each faction put up its respective slate in the primary.

"Further evidence of it is seen in the fact each has chartered its own special train for the convention," he said.

Vice-Presidential Possibilities.

He said that among those prominently mentioned for the vice-presidential nomination were Krzycki, Powers Hapgood of Indianapolis, so-called "Harvard coal miner," and the latter's wife, Mary Donovan Hapgood.

The proposed workers' and farmers' right constitutional amendment, introduced in Congress by Senator Elmer A. Benson, Minnesota Farmer-Laborite, will probably be made a plank in the party's platform, Krzycki said.

Convention headquarters said in addition to the 250 delegates the attendance would probably exceed 2500 persons. The convention is to adjourn May 26.

The late Morris Hillquit of New York and the late Victor Berger of Milwaukee, with a group of associates, founded the party in 1901.

After six years of retirement from active Soviet film production, Sergei Eisenstein, who has been acknowledged to rank with the world's outstanding film producers, is now again back at work in the studios. His latest film, "Bezhin Meadow," which recalls the title and locale of a Turgenev story, is expected to be released for Soviet and foreign showing some time this spring.

This picture, as all of Eisenstein's previous films, deals with vital problems of contemporary Soviet life. It mirrors the struggle in the village between the last remnants of the kulaks (former well-to-do peasantry) and the collectivised majority of the village. Stepok, 11-year-old member of the Pioneers—juvenile Communist organization—seriously believes in the Kremlin policy of collective farming. Though a son of a kulak who has remained steadfastly opposed to collective farming, Stepok is the leader of the Pioneer group in his village.

There is a sharp clash between father and son. Stepok finds it impossible to remain under the roof of his father whom he has discovered to be an enemy of the collective. He leaves home and expresses to the authorities the intention of his father to set the collective crop on fire. The conflict between father and son, by means of which Eisenstein symbolically portrays the struggle between the old and the new, reaches its dramatic climax when Stepok, while on night-guard in the wheat fields, is murdered by his father.

This is no imaginary plot. In the course of the collectivisation of Russia's 25,000,000 peasant households there were numerous recorded instances of embittered parents resorting to torture and even murder of their Pioneer children who had exposed their anti-State activities.

Professional Actors Used.

In "Bezhin Meadow," for the first time, Eisenstein resorts to the use of professional actors to play the leading roles. In his earlier films, such as "Potemkin," "October," and "The General Line," he painstakingly avoided casting professional players. These were films in which large masses of people were employed and consequently called for no profound individual characterizations. In "Bezhin Meadow," however, Eisenstein selected his main characters from among Moscow's leading theatrical performers. The role of the father is played by Zakhava, actor-manager of the Vakhtangov Theater in Moscow, the role of the woman president of the collective farm by Telesheva of the First Art Theater and that of her husband by Garine of the Meyerhold Theater.

For the role of Stepok, Victor Kartashev, 11-year-old son of a Moscow chauffeur was selected from among a 1000 Moscow school children.

Last spring, when the Soviet Union celebrated the eighteenth anniversary of the Soviet cinema, seven producers received the highest Government honor, the Order of Lenin. Eisenstein was not among them. This was the Kremlin's way of rebuking him for his inactivity in picture production within the last few years, when he has devoted his efforts primarily to the State Film Institute. With "Bezhin Meadow" now nearing completion, the rumor is current that the Order of Lenin is awaiting Eisenstein.

On Breaking Word of Honor.

Is a Pioneer—the Soviet equivalent of a Boy Scout—ever justified in breaking his word of honor? If so, when? This question was widely discussed recently in the leading Soviet children's paper, "The Truth of the Pioneer." No less an authority than Emelyan Yaroslavski, a veteran Bolshevik who is reputed to be the world's outstanding authority on Soviet ethics, has been called upon for the closing word.

"The word of honor of a Pioneer is a serious matter," he says. "It is a grave responsibility. It should not be given light mindedly and thoughtlessly, nor should it be violated, unless there is serious reason for its violation. When the interests of the Socialist state demand it, it is perfectly permissible for a Pioneer to break his word given to an enemy of the state or those who help the enemy."

The case of a child who had trapped a gang of thieves by giving them his word of honor not to reveal their activities, provoked this discussion.

Little Andrei, aged 10, wandered into a state garage near his home one day and discovered men who were busy making off with spare automobile parts. He swore to tell no one what he had seen. Then he set to work to learn all he could about the gang, with the express purpose of exposing them, which he eventually did.

Children's Arguments.

When the story was told in the children's paper, the numerous comments of children showed a wide diversity of opinion. A majority approved Andrei's deed. A vociferous minority, however, maintained that to break one's word of honor was not permissible under any circumstances, especially for a Pioneer, a member of the Communist children's organization, which should set the right example to children in general.

The minority even delved into pre-revolutionary Bolshevik history to find precedents. It had often happened, they held, that revolutionaries in jail would be let out for a brief period, after having pledged to return within a given time, and that they kept their pledges. By analogy, Andrei should have kept his.

But Yaroslavski, who served more than one prison term himself under the Tsar, pointed out that such prisoners returned only because their comrades within the walls would otherwise have had to suffer for them. If they could have avoided such consequences, they would have been justified in breaking their word of honor.

League Is Dead, Long Live League! Whither Bound?

decisive factor. Those who have followed Fascism's progress since Mussolini first felt sure of himself back in 1925 or 1926, knew what lay ahead. He never concealed his ultimate goal; statesmen simply refused to take him seriously.

Japan started the break-up, but the Japanese were polite about it. That is a national characteristic of the Nipponese. They tried by every means to compromise, to obtain their aims in Manchuria and at the same time remain in the League. They even ran the risk of a civil war at home and invited the political assassination of some of their wisest public officials. Eventually they resigned from the League in good order, paying their full dues and observing all their obligations, except in respect to Manchuria, until the two-year notification period had elapsed.

Germany, likewise, committed no overt act against the League although Hitler chose dramatics as his method of exit. Berlin paid her bill last autumn and bade the League a final farewell. Geneva had no legal claim on the Nazis when they scrapped Locarno and entered the Rhineland.

With Fascist Italy it was entirely different. For years Mussolini has held the League in contempt, using it when convenient, and scorning it otherwise. Rome rejected the Council's decisions in advance. The Fascist attitude toward Geneva, if it has had any merit, has had the merit of having been frank and outspoken. Mussolini has never sought an alibi. He did move progressively, from a step "to rectify a frontier," to punitive measures to "discipline the Ethiopians," to a sacred duty to "abolish slavery and barbarism" and finally to outright "conquest of an empire" and a Pax Romana. It was not Mussolini's fault, rather his gain, that the world refused to believe that he really meant what he said.

U. S. and Other Factors.

Aside from the foregoing observations there were many other incidental factors involved in the discrediting of the League, Who, or what, killed it does not now matter much. Some will argue that it never really had a chance—that Washington could have, and perhaps can still save it. They say that had the United States entered, even as late as five years ago, before the Manchurian episode, the League would have progressively developed instead of deteriorated. Had Washington seen fit officially to throw all its moral and physical force behind the covenant there is no doubt that the policies of every member of the League would have been greatly influenced. Great Britain, France, Italy and perhaps Nazi Germany would or at least could have followed a different course. France and England, with the United States back of them, might have stood ready for world peace.

Disarmament obviously is a shattered dream and an armaments race on land, on sea and in the air, such as the world has never before witnessed, is under way. And the result? The world is at peace—an armed peace. Governments declare repeatedly that they have no aggressive intentions, yet they pile up instruments of war.

Why did the League fail? The best answer is that already given—that is, the world is not yet up to it. The League ideal is perhaps generations ahead of its time. Woodrow Wilson admitted as much, in a conversation with Philip Kerr (Lord Lothian), before he died. As a system for regulating internal relations the League Covenant is the best that has thus far been devised.

Failure of Sanctions.

Explanations of Geneva's inability to apply the articles of the covenant, first against Japan, then Germany and finally Italy, are easy. All three of these transgressors were big and powerful states. Where the covenant worked against Greece and Bulgaria it failed when put to a real test. In dealing with Tokio the League members had to take into consideration the fact that Japan's two most powerful neighbors—the United States and Soviet Russia — were non-members. Although they agreed to collaborate, "morally and unofficially," neither Washington nor Moscow had the legal responsibilities which signers of the covenant shouldered. Countries, like most small states, which had nothing to gain, and something to lose, in antagonizing Japan, saw no reason why they should pull America's and Russia's—and Britain's—chestnuts out of the fire. Britain, alone or with France and Italy, was in no position to use force against the Japanese, and China, like Ethiopia, was helpless against the aggressor.

When Italy challenged the League things took on a different light. The scene was nearer home. War could easily spread across the Mediterranean into Europe. Germany stood on the horizon. England's and France's immediate interests were menaced, the former's by Italy and the latter's by Nazi Germany. London, through Geneva, used every diplomatic facility at her command to stop Mussolini and save Ethiopia. The Royal Navy—last argument of Britain's ambassadors—was sent into the Mediterranean, but the formidable show of naval force did not work. Mussolini would not be bluffed. He said: "I may lose my head but England will lose half her fleet."

Britain could not afford to lose half her navy even if Mussolini was willing to risk his head. The price was too big, for the time being. When the present armaments program is completed, 18 months from now, there may be a different story to tell.

Germany's blow against the League was expected. Hitler's opportunism has worked well to date. He tore up Locarno, re-armed the Reich and is militarizing the Rhineland without running any great risks. So long as he stays in his own backyard he will be safe. The result of the dual by-play of Hitler and Mussolini, independent and unco-ordinated, has been that France and England presumed to work together at Geneva, have both lost. The former in the Rhineland, the latter in Africa. Tomorrow they may have to fight their enemies alone.

The outstanding question now is: "The new League—whither bound?"

REPORT ON HEALTH IN 6 AREAS IN CITY

Conditions So Bad They Are Menace to Community, Says Irving Weissman.

Health conditions are so unfavorable in six areas of St. Louis that the community as a whole is menaced, according to Irving Weissman, research director of the Community Council, who reported his findings in the latest issue of "Social Studies of St. Louis." He listed the districts as Sherman Park, Garfield, Beaumont, Mill Creek, Soulard and Hyde Park.

These districts, the report says, have a persistent excess of deaths over births and were charged with half of all deaths of children under one year of age during the last five years.

The Beaumont district, which lies east of Grand boulevard, had nearly 20 per cent of all the city's tuberculosis cases and four adjoining districts account for nearly 25 per cent of the remaining cases, Weissman reported. Diphtheria, the report continued, spreads over a wider area, although half of the cases are found in seven districts.

Birth and Death Rates.

A falling birth rate and rising death rate generally are characteristic of periods of great economic stress, but exactly the opposite was the case here during the last five years, it was stated. Last year the city's birth rate rose to 1546.6 per 100,000 estimated population, as compared with 1468.7 in 1933. That represented a gain of 5.3 per cent.

The city's death rate last year was 12.4 per 1000 population as compared with 14.6 in 1931.

During the last five years the St. Louis Negro birth rate increased three times faster than that of the white population. The rate also was higher for each of the five years. However, the Negro death rate was about one-third higher than that of the whites in 1935 and more than half higher in 1931.

Smaller Increase Among Negroes.

Because of the higher death rate in comparison with the white rate, the Negro areas showed a small increase. The white population during the last five years increased 1.5 per cent. The natural increase for the total population was 1.2 per cent.

A decline in the death rate of children under a year of age, both white and Negro, was pointed to in the report as a gratifying feature.

Heart disease caused 20.6 per cent of all deaths in St. Louis during the five-year period. Nephritis, cancer, pneumonia, violence and accidents, nervous disorders, tuberculosis and diseases of the digestive system were other major causes in that order of importance.

Tuberculosis showed a continuous decrease in rate of fatalities, but the mortality dropped also for virtually all diseases listed above last year.

U. S. TO DUN 13 EUROPEAN NATIONS AGAIN FOR WAR DEBTS

Notes Asking for Payment of More Than $1,000,000,000 Being Prepared.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Requests to pay more than a billion dollars due and payable on June 15 were in preparation today for transmittal to 13 European nations in the American Government's semi-annual effort to collect war debts.

Treasury officials estimated that the debtor nations, already $971,255,092 in default, had installments totalling $193,256,154 falling due next month.

Although Leon Blum, popular front leader and probable next Premier of France, has hinted that his Government would reconsider the debt question when it assumes office, June 2, officials here remained pessimistic that any of the debtors except Finland would pay next month's installments. Finland has been paying in full and is expected to make its June payment of $164,315 on time. Congressional leaders said they did not think any action would be taken by Congress this session on the debt question. A recent recommendation by Senator McAdoo (Dem.), California, that a new commision be set up to review the question was not acted on.

LINER QUEEN MARY INSURED FOR $24,000,000, A RECORD

Government to Take $9,000,000 of the Amount—Annual Premium $300,000.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, May 16.—Great Britain's new super-liner, the Queen Mary, will be insured for a record amount of about $24,000,000 when it sails on its maiden voyage late this month from Southampton to New York.

About $15,000,000 of the total, said to be the largest amount ever covered for an individual hull risk, is being placed with Lloyds and marine insurance brokers. The remaining $9,000,000 will be insured by the British Government. A premium of $300,000, it is understood, will be paid annually.

The announcement that the Queen Mary steamed 32.84 knots on trial runs—faster than any liner ever went before—was disappointing to sections of the British press. This speed is only a fraction more than the top speed of 32.125 knots attained by the French liner, Normandie. There has been no confirmation of reports that the Queen Mary can make 34 knots if forced to it.

Closing Time for Foreign Mail.

Parcel post for Germany and Great Britain and full European mail will close at the Main Post-office, 100 South Eighteenth street, at 9 o'clock tomorrow night.

"Of Making Many Books"

EDITED BY JOHN G. NEIHARDT

Missing Glove Still Sought At Eighty

MY LIFE AND WORK. By Dr. Adolf Lorenz. (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.)

EVERY doctor's book contains a prescription for right living, and in this regard Dr. Lorenz has not upset tradition. "Moderate drinking, moderate eating and moderate smoking," he says, "will help you all to reach an average age of eighty." But in almost every other respect the doctor has flung tradition to the winds and written, in English, "a simple human story of ups and downs."

The book was not written for publication, but for the author's family. However, he happened to mention it to reporters on his eighty-first birthday and was promptly besieged by publishers. The father of modern orthopedic surgery uses as a sub-title "The Search for a Missing Glove," a whimsical phrase reminiscent of an incident in early childhood. "Searching for the missing glove," he writes, "is an endeavor to solve the question: What is the sense of life and what is life for in the end?"

Son of a poor harness maker in Silesia, Adolf Lorenz was taught from the beginning by his mother that he was to be "a grand gentleman." Her brother, Uncle Gregor, abbot of the Benedictine monastery of St. Paul in Carinthia, had promised the lad a chance in the school there if he could sing and play the violin, and at the age of 11 he was admitted as choir boy and pupil. Study was easy for him, and before long Adolf was earning extra money as a tutor.

At 20 he made the choice between studying medicine and becoming a monk. Only by borrowing from a foundation was he able to scrape together enough money to begin his medical studies in Vienna. He became docent of surgery, and was advancing rapidly in his profession, when the constant use of carbolic acid as an aseptic developed a skin disease which closed that branch of surgery to him forever. So he set up as an orthopedic surgeon, pioneering in an unexplored branch of surgery with such success that his fame ran around the world. Finally he was called to treat 7-year-old Lolita Armour of Chicago. After curing her of congenital hip disease, he traveled about America, demonstrating his bloodless surgery.

In 1903 he visited St. Louis, the city "of black smoke and brown dust," where "in the bathtub the muddy water of the Mississippi invited me to take a Moorish mud-bath." The late Adolphus Busch was his host. He recalls that Dr. Ravold of St. Louis organized the American Medical Association of Vienna in that year.

Dr. Lorenz was past 50 before he could indulge his taste for travel. He has collected pictures, furniture and "stones"—battered sculptures which he has had restored. He delights in good food, and becomes almost reverent in his account of "poems" in flour and eggs and raisins. He has loved life and savored it to the full. He still loves it, and he was 82 years old last month.

Plugs a Gap

COWBOY LINGO. By Ramon F. Adams. (Houghton Mifflin Co., Boston.)

"ALL about the cowboy," remarks the publisher, describing this breeze off the range. And as the author himself might say, "It's as plain as the horn on your saddle that it doggone near is."

For the author doesn't stick to a roundup of the pungent, pithy lingo of the "man with guts an' a hoss" but tells what the cowboy wears, what he does at the home ranch, on the trail, at the cowboy dance. He has a chapter on "guns," one on roping, another on rustlers and outlaws, and gives a pictorial list of brands and earmarks.

Then the author rambles along into nicknames and figures of speech, which roll out "thicker than red ants pilin' out of a burnin' log." And when the reader has cantered through some reading that's just as "easy as eatin' striped candy" he may stake the book out on his favorite bookshelf against the day he goes back to the dude ranch, or starts that yarn for the wood-pulp periodicals, or just against any old winter night when it's raining.

"Cowboy Lingo" plugs a gap in cowboy literature and, with its excellent index, provides an almost indispensable reference work for the writer on the West. W. J. C.

THE GENERAL GOES TOO FAR. By Lewis Robinson. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.)

AMONG the hundreds of mystery stories that are poured out from year to year, Lewis Robinson's "The General Goes Too Far" may be written down as unusual, for Robinson has not found it necessary to invent any master mind to untangle the skein of his own twisting. Indeed, he even takes the reader to the scene of the first murder and tells all about it, including the identity of the murderer. Later there are a murder and a suicide about which he isn't so explicit, but, as appears, each action grows out of character and everything is satisfactorily cleared up at last in a finely ironic finish. "The General Goes Too Far" is an original and really good piece of writing.

Wickedly Witty — and More

LEWIS J. GORIN JR. (Princeton '36), national commander of the Veterans of Future Wars, here publishes what may be regarded as his inaugural address—a formidable document for those whose patriotic fervor may too greatly exceed their sense of humor.

"Ah, take the cash and let the credit go,
Nor heed the beating of a distant drum,"

Commander Gorin by no means ignores the drum-beat, nor does he seem to regard it as excessively distant. He welcomes it, even going so far as "to suggest that we could solve our unemployment problem with ease by plowing under" the millions of men who, as he views the matter, are apparently no longer needed in our highly developed society. He is willing to admit that it is sweet and fitting to die for one's country, whatever that may have meant in the last war or may mean in the next. He only points out the advantages of a cash-and-carry system in the hero industry.

Therefore, approaching Congress with the ancient gladiatorial cry, "Te morituri salutamus," he and his fellow veterans-to-be—with an alleged potential strength of 30 or 40 millions—demand the immediate passage of a law guaranteeing each a bonus of $1000 due in 1965. But, since "it is customary to pay these bonuses, or boni, well in advance of the date set," he demands immediate cash payment "plus 3 per cent interest, retrogressively compounded, from the first of June, 1965, to the first of June, 1935."

This much of the plan is already generally known; but now for the first time the advantages of the scheme, not only to the "veterans" themselves, but also to the national economy, are set forth in detail.

Take, for instance, the example of any citizen. Call him Van Murphy. Van gets his "adjusted compensation," so called, we are reminded, by way of being "diplomatic with taxpayers who are pained by the word bonus." Being something of a sport Van takes a trip around the world, has the time of his life, and comes back "broke." Obliged to work, if he can locate a job, he immediately begins helping to pay off the huge Government indebtedness. By the time war comes—say in two or three years—he is so sick of taxes that he rushes to the nearest recruiting station and volunteers with fine enthusiasm. Later, at the front, when he "happens to be standing up instead of lying down," he dies "happy that his country is rewardingly aware of his services, and proud of him." Unlike the "Unknown Soldier," he has already "heard the gracious golden accents of his Government, and is satisfied."

But what of the "veteran" who can't learn how to drill and therefore remains in a training camp through the war? Returning to civilian life, he is faced with the debt created to pay his bonus. Much of this Camp Dix veteran's energy, for 30 years, the author hopes, will be spent in paying off the obligation. And then what happens? Maybe by that time (the author is doubtful) taxation will actually lessen to such an extent that the lighter burden will give the impression of retirement.

"It may be," Commander Gorin remarks, "that the future slacker will be the fellow who goes away to fight and leaves the braver ones toiling at home to pay off the debt as best they can!"

But what of the future widows and gold star mothers? The Commander was coming to that, having overlooked nothing. He demands that each and every one of them not only be paid a pension of $50 per month, beginning at once, but that all of them be sent abroad at Government expense to enjoy a good "cry" on the battlefields of the future where their prospective loved ones will sleep the sleep of the brave.

Among the multitudinous advantages claimed for the plan, including a vast increase in purchasing power among the masses, the Commander suggests that the future war will be fought with amazing gusto, since "few enough will be willing to brave the hazards of the next peace."

Having set forth his plan in detail, Commander Gorin discusses the necessary peace-time organization of the "Veterans," and the best methods for handling Congress—since after the spending of the bonus the matter of pensions will naturally have to be considered. He has even discussed such matters as appropriate uniforms and impressive parades, requiring nobody knows how long to pass a given point. As to the salute of the "Veterans," it is touchingly simple in its symbolism—the hand horizontally extended — the receptive palm upward.

It is a wickedly witty little book with many a chuckle in it. But back of all the sprightly kidding, what potential tears! J. G. N.

A Saintly Woman

THREESCORE: THE LIFE OF SARAH N. CLEGHORN. By Herself. With an Introduction by Robert Frost. (Harrison Smith & Robert Haas, New York.)

TWENTY years ago a sensitive woman from Vermont, steeped in the New England tradition at its best, spent a winter in a Southern cotton mill town. The mills, opposite one of which lay a golf course, employed many children and ran day and night on only two shifts. After a trip through the mills—"the fearful humidity in one of the rooms rained down the inside of the windows as if buckets of water had been thrown against them"—she wrote the following lines, first printed in Franklin P. Adams' column, the Conning Tower, in the New York Tribune:

The golf links lie so near the mill
That almost every day
The laboring children can look out
And see the men at play.

In the two decades that have followed, this graphic reaction to ruthless exploitation of child labor for profit has become one of the most quoted quatrains ever written by an American. From F. P. A.'s column it has gone from lip to lip and has been reprinted and illustrated many times.

"Threescore" is the story of the woman who wrote those lines, told with the tenderness and humanity that have characterized her life. It is what may be expected — a charming and inspiring volume. Not every cause in which Sarah Norcliffe Cleghorn has joined has been of the same merit, but she has brought to them all the support of a rare character. One can only wish that her report on life, interspersed with much of her delicate verse, will have the many readers which it richly deserves.

Southern Problems

SOUTHERN POLICY PAPERS. (The University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill.)

THESE seven brief pamphlets, issued by the Southern Policy Committee to stimulate interest in questions of public importance in the South, deserve wide attention. Students of social and economic affairs, particularly of the status of the low income groups in the admittedly most chaotic section of the country, will find the papers a useful compendium of information.

The writers, all Southerners, agree with singular unanimity that leadership in the region is bankrupt and unable to offer a solution for the complicated problems of agricultural and industrial readjustment. Their view that national legislation alone can promote security for the sharecropper, the tenant farmer, and the factory worker, white and Negro, is borne out, as if by plan, in T. Levron Howard's discussion of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The other papers are "Southern Population and Social Planning," "Social Security for Southern Farmers," "Industrial Security in the South," "Social Legislation in the South," "How the Other Half Is Housed," and "The Southern Press Considers the Constitution."

A Half-Baked Baker

GIVE US THIS DAY. By Louis Zara. (Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis.)

THE trouble with Charles Alexander Brabant was this: He was too honest for his own good. His high standard of honesty was his chief handicap throughout life. His Uncle Henry, the dentist, had also been devoted to truth for truth's sake, had even begun to compile a "Book of Honest Men" and never made an entry, but Uncle Henry had grown mellow and philosophic, convinced that "we must sacifice many untruths to reach a great truth." Charles Alexander never became mellow or philosophic.

He could have been happy with his wife Cecilia, for he loved her devotedly, but he learned she had tricked him into marriage, and it took years before he forgave her. He became a baker, like his father, and the bakeshop seemed always a sanctuary of honest work and honest products, but he took in a dishonest partner, and ruin followed.

Though fate did its worst, Charles' high standards did not falter. In desperate need, he still could not remain at the work as strike-breaker he had unwittingly accepted. His conscience would not let him take relief money without an effort to earn it, but the enterprise he originated, a bakeshop manned by unemployed men, was closed by outside pressure. To the end, he repeated his simple affirmation: "I am a baker. I must bake."

The bounds of credibility are passed at times in this tragic story. The protagonist is so human in his weaknesses and errors that his adamantine resolution in matters of fundamental honesty comes as a surprise. It is difficult to accept this martyr to principle as a flesh-and-blood hero. The writing, too, while realistic enough, particularly when the technical details of the baker's craft are discussed, fails to make of him a flesh-and-blood hero, nor do the other characters on the broad canvas come effectively to life. No Organic Pattern

THE WEATHER IN THE STREETS. By Rosamond Lehmann. (Reynal & Hitchcock, Inc., New York.)

ROSAMOND LEHMANN'S "Dusty Answer" attracted attention a while back. "The Weather in the Streets" may attract some more, for Miss Lehmann can write; she knows the mechanics of her craft, her style is fluid, facile and vivid. She knows people. She is a careful and competent observer and what she reports may pass for real without challenge. . . . But so, too, would a photograph. There is no necessary implication of art or philosophy in a recitation of facts.

Miss Lehmann's facts: Olivia and Rollo are unsatisfactorily married, she to Ivor who has left her, he to Nicola, a victim of a shadowy invalidism that interferes with home life. Both neglected, Olivia and Rollo warm up a childhood attraction into an affair—they call it love, and believe in it for a time. Nicola's health improves so that when it appears that both she and Olivia are going to have babies, Rollo goes back to his wife and Olivia goes to a doctor.

This bald statement does scant justice to Miss Lehmann's intuitive, minutely detailed study of their conduct and states of mind, nevertheless that is what it all boils down to. The novel stands as a mere account of what Noel Coward once bluntly described as "a roll in the hay"—just that.

Of course, circumstances as commonplace and banal have been made into great works of literature before now. An author may imbue his characters with peculiar qualities, high or low, or arrange his exposition in such a way as to give it portent of truth and significance, or, absent any of these recommendations, the characters and their story may make wide appeal because of their common denominator in the experience of the many; but Miss Lehmann hasn't quite hit it off on any of these points, although there are evidences that she had all of them in mind as she went along.

She writes well, but she doesn't say anything. H. T. M.

Just What It Is

IF WE could think of J. B. Priestley's "Good Companions" going bad—bawdy bad—and endure the thought, we would have something like this Sally, foster girl, and her bad companions, mostly troupers of a sort, as the "Good Companions" were troupers of a better sort. Sally, "a predicamental infant," had a bad start; but if she had fallen in with Mr. Priestley and his "Good Companions" instead of with the sort supplied by John Metcalfe, she might have turned out better.

The near-London bungalow where Sally was born had, for a bungalow, a certain character, for "it maintained a decorous if dingy aspect of ignoring rectitude." Its slatternly integrity did not, however, confer anything upon the life that started there. Sally was a mischance, but not the mischance that she was supposed to be. At one time or another she was the foster daughter of her real mother and the foster daughter of her reputed father, only to find out, at long last, that her foster father was her real father and her real mother was somebody else.

It takes more than 650 pages of Mr. Metcalfe's minutiae to clear all this up and it is not to be wondered at that Sally, going through all of that, found life rather difficult. And, because Mr. Metcalfe does not see fit to let his readers find it out any sooner, he makes life rather difficult for them. Worse than need be, because Sally and her friends, mostly low-life London folk, are always talking about something that they understand, but which a reader has no means of understanding; and there is a "stream of consciousness" flowing through the pages that is deep and dark.

When Sally complains that the only way she can find anything out is by piecing facts together bit by bit, she is complaining more or less for all of us; and when, as late as the 600th page, she is moved to say, "Oh, hell, it's all a mess," why that's just what it is—a mess.

Sally, in spite of her bad start, might have turned out better if she had not fallen, early in life, into the hands of John Metcalfe, literary foster father, an author with a talent for making it hard for a girl who has had a bad start. F. A. B.

THE CATHOLIC LITERARY REVIVAL. By Calvert Alexander, S. J. (Bruce Publishing Co., Milwaukee.)

THIS is a scholarly summing up of the contribution made by English-speaking Catholic writers to contemporary literature. Covering a period of 90 years, the book is divided into a Victorian phase, a middle period that ended with the World War, and a contemporary period that carries on to the present.

The author points out how changes in the non-Catholic world have determined the characteristics of Catholic literature in each phase. The revolt against existing conditions was represented in the works of Newman and Patmore; the artistic renovations of the 90's found expression in the poetry of Francis Thompson; contemporary writing reflects present-day problems.

The book, written by a St. Louisan and former newspaper man; is a fine piece of work and swings along in very readable prose. It is not dogmatic, and the writers quoted strikingly illustrate the author's thesis. F. D.

THE LEADERS IN SALES

ACCORDING to reports from 73 booksellers in the principal cities throughout the country, the books most in demand during the past week stand as follows in the order of their popularity:

Fiction

The Last Puritan, by George Santayana, reported by 67 booksellers; Sparkenbroke, by Charles Morgan, 64; The Thinking Reed, by Rebecca West, 43; The Hurricane, by Nordhoff and Hall, 34; Jamaica Inn, by Daphne du Maurier, 23; South Riding, by Winifred Holtby, 22.

Non-Fiction

The Way of a Transgressor, by Negley Farson, reported by 56 stores; Wake Up and Live, by Dorothea Brande, 50; Man the Unknown, by Alexis Carrel, 45; Around the World in Eleven Years, by Patience, Richard and John Abbe, 40; North to the Orient, by Anne Morrow Lindbergh, 38; Inside Europe, by John Gunther, 30.

It is to be noted that "Around the World in Eleven Years," on the list for the first time a month ago with four reports, has advanced to fourth place. Among novels, "Jamaica Inn," which stood ninth in sales a week ago, now holds fifth position. "Sparkenbroke" continues to gain, being now only three points below "The Last Puritan" which it seems likely to displace soon.

A "Mountain Man" of Old St. Louis

Bill Williams, Master Trapper

After Ninety Years

OLD BILL WILLIAMS, MOUNTAIN MAN. By Alpheus H. Favour. (The University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill.)

DOWN from his undiscovered grave in the Rocky Mountains, where he has lain since 1849, comes the shaggy figure of Old Bill Williams, master trapper, trader, trail-finder, guide, interpreter, Indian fighter and, very likely, the greatest mountain man of them all. After nearly 90 years, between the covers of a book, at last!

Born in North Carolina, and in 1795, at the age of 8, journeying with his clan to the Spanish possessions across the Mississippi, William Sherley Williams spent most of his early years on a St. Louis County farm, which sprawls within a great bend of the Missouri River, just east of Vigus on the Creve Coeur Mill road.

The life there palled, and he set out for the Osage villages in what is now Southwestern Missouri. There he annexed an Indian wife and became so influential with the tribe and accomplished in the use of the Osage tongue that he was made the Government's instrument for the acquisition of the coveted Osage territories. For this service he now receives tardy credit.

Many years he trapped, traded and fought through the country of the Pawnees, Blackfeet, Apaches and other hostile tribes. From the Missouri to the western ocean his Indian enemies chased that spectacular red scalp, but Bill never lost a hair. During his marches to the Pacific, Bill Williams discovered new trails across the mountains. His knowledge of the routes to California led Col. John C. Fremont to press him into service as guide for the Colonel's fourth expedition to California in the winter of 1848-49.

The unprecedented snowfall obliterated all landmarks, and for days the party floundered hopelessly in the mountain drifts. Eleven men out of 34, and the entire train of 120 horses and mules, died from starvation and exposure; and the costly equipment was lost. For this disaster Fremont blamed Bill Williams, but important documents discovered about 15 years ago refute rather emphatically the Colonel's charges, and Bill Williams emerges a vindicated man.

What of the man, Bill Williams? All these years a mysterious legend, he seems once more to have eluded his biographer, and to remain pretty much a mystery. Strangely, Mr. Favour relates none of Bill's amazing early adventures in the desert, nor does he reproduce any of Bill's delightful barroom sermons.

Although, for the first time, we have many personal details, the unfilled gaps in Bill's career, and the unanalyzed facets of his rare personality serve to keep him among the enigmas of Western history.

The reviewer has knowledge of much contemporaneous material, both published and in manuscript, on Old Bill Williams that seems to have escaped the author of this work. Had these sources been tapped to fill in the gaps and round out the figure of the old trapper, the value of the present volume would have been greatly increased. As it stands, this work is a plowing in a field hitherto almost untouched. As such, despite some errors of fact and omission, it honestly deserves commendation.

Let it be recorded that Old Bill himself, were he alive, would be the last to applaud the production of a volume, or even an essay, on his life, which he seems to have regarded as just so much time killed. The complete story of Old Bill Williams and his pals is to a great extent the history of the opening of the West. It remains to be written. F. E. V.

Sowing Deeper Soil

THERE has been much comment on the middle years of life, generally in lighter vein; but here is offered a very serious study of the transition years of the forties, from a woman's point of view, and the readjustments necessary to make later life successful rather than tragic or merely futile.

More attention should be directed, thinks the author, to education of the individual for the whole of life. Our reactions are first instinctive and such as will gain the necessities. They are elevated to successively higher levels as we acquire individuality and achieve maturity —which may be defined as the ability to control our reactions and direct them into creative channels.

The final, and perhaps the most difficult phase, is, according to the author, that one encountered in those bewildering years when further growth is conditioned upon the relinquishment of the dearly bought individuality by sowing it in the common soil of life, whence it emerges richer than before. The woman of 40 who is confronted by diminished physical powers and curtailed social opportunities may thus provide outlets for the deep urges of life.

The physiological and psychological aspects of the problem are treated, as are also the religious implications.

One senses a deep undercurrent of human sympathy in this book, sometimes obstructed, perhaps, by the use of a technical style.

There is an extensive bibliography. M. B.

A LITTLE PARABLE FOR MOTHERS. By Temple Bailey. (Fleming H. Revell Co., New York.)

THIS parable of universal motherhood, inspired by the author's mother, appeared some years ago in a popular magazine. In response to a wide demand it is now offered in permanent form and dedicated "to all mothers who travel with their children towards the light."

Simple Annals

AS the jacket "blurb" promises us, there is in this journal of 60 years on an Iowa farm "no villain in the person of the town banker, no seduction, no meanness, no bucolic sentiment."

To carry the publisher's faint praise a little further, there is practically no love interest, no incident exciting enough to accelerate the reader's pulse, no strikingly portrayed character.

What there is in Miss Saltzman's first novel is a simple tale, simply told, of the life of Joseph Mueller, introduced to us as a philosophic child of 5 who can find no satisfactory answer to his questions as to the nature of tomorrow.

Tomorrow brings to Joe an ever-increasing love for the soil, for his father's farm, not lessened even by the accidental deaths there of two of his loved ones. Only once does his affection for the old home place waver, and then the death of his father brings him to the realization that he must carry on.

His first son, who would have shared Joe's love for the farm, is killed. The younger son, eventually, goes to the city, only to return, a little rebelliously, with his family after losing his job.

Etymologists may be interested, even surprised, to note that on page 2, in the year 1871, one of Joe's brothers calls him a "dumbbell," thus starting a fad that was not to reach its full dismal flower for some 50 years. On page 35, A. D. 1879, Joe, taken to task for teasing a girl, explains "she asked for it." The author does not tell us whether Joe Mueller also merits our curses for originating the twins, "Oh, yeah?" and "So what?" C. R. H.

Great Dancer's Life Depicted By His Friend

ROMOLA NIJINSKY'S story of the tragic career of her husband was the story of a strange slant-eyed god; Anatole Bourman's account is of a slow-witted, generous genius who was his best friend. It is impossible to say which of Nijinsky's biographers, both of whom loved him, saw him in the true light; but if in reading Romola Nijinsky's book you wondered at a hero who spoke so seldom and who never bought his own railroad tickets, look to Anatole Bourman for the answer.

All those events in the great dancer's life and all the flaws in his character, which make him seem other than the remote faun pictured by Mme. Nijinsky, are discussed in a matter-of-fact way, and even humorously, by his fellow student, Bourman. The wife, for instance, gives a childish prank as the reason for Nijinsky's having to stay an extra year at the ballet school; but Bourman says he "flunked" history. Mme. Nijinsky fails to recount, too, the utter dislike and contempt shown the unresentful Pole by his classmates, his flares of temperament and willingness to trick the Imperial Ballet, to which he owed his entire training, into dismissing him. The authors, however, do not consciously contradict each other or overlap in their stories to any great extent, and the theme and conclusion of both is the same—that Nijinsky was the greatest of all male dancers and a person to be adored.

Interesting as a biography, "The Tragedy of Nijinsky," rewritten by D. Lyman from the Russian manuscript of Anatole Bourman, is fascinating as an informal history of the ballet and a joyously remembered picture of upper-class life before the revolution and the gaudy, extravagant life of the Imperial dancers in contact with their royal patrons. Seats at the Marinsky Theater, the author tells us, were not to be bought, but were inherited from original sponsors of the art of ballet.

Unforgettable is his description of his first performance, with Nijinsky and the other students, at the Hermitage, when the jewels in the crowns of the royal audience shot the darkened theater with many-colored lights, and the picture of the Grand Dukes playing host to the whole company after rehearsals at riotous banquets of caviar and wine, in quantities to shock, if not to sicken, an Occidental. Ballerinas danced in costumes made entirely of precious stones, and at least one of them owned three palaces and two villas. Western readers, though interested, will be amazed, and at times repulsed, by this picture of a people so lavish, artistic, bloodthirsty and gross all at once, but they will also be moved by the sincerity of this tribute of a man to his best friend and a genius. A Best-Seller

JAMAICA INN. By Daphne du Maurier. (Doubleday, Doran & Co., New York.)

"PERILS OF A BARMAID" would be a fitting subtitle for this striking story of the Cornish moors, in a time when England's agencies of law enforcement had not attained their present celerity and thoroughness. In the social order which Mary Yellan entered when she went to live with her aunt Patience, smuggling was a venial offense, and a horsethief, respectable in comparison with his ship-wrecking brother, was able to appear a Prince Charming to the distracted Mary. The night-riding Vicar tempts the reader to incredulity, but Miss du Maurier may have found authenticated records of an albino in holy orders, and unholy disorders. The author is the granddaughter of George du Maurier, and the biographer of her father, Sir Gerald du Maurier. This, her fourth novel, has an unusually effective jacket design, by Rex Whistler. C. F. Harbord's Memoirs

THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE. By Major General James G. Harbord, U. S. A., retired. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston.)

GEN. HARBORD, now chairman of the board of the Radio Corporation of America and member of various industrial directorates, was a professional soldier, who rose from the ranks to be successively Gen. Pershing's chief-of-staff in France, commanding officer of the Marine Brigade, commander of the Second division, and finally, in the closing days of the World War, chief of the Supply Service.

After publishing several fragmentary accounts of his experiences in the great conflict, he has at last set them all down together in a book, which is a valuable addition to the history of the World War, as well as an interesting self-revelation of a cultured soldier and industrialist.

Gen. Harbord passes lightly over most of the controversial issues, of which the feud between Pershing and Wood, and the rivalry between Pershing and March, chief-of-staff on this side of the Atlantic, are examples. To him Pershing was the ideal soldier, the beau sabreur of the American army; but he has words of praise for both March and Wood.

It is history that Pershing's hard-headed determination to have the American army fight as an organization instead of being split up among the allied forces, was a success, and that his insistence on this and the American style of fighting in the open, made possible the allied successes at St. Mihiel and in the Argonne. Into this long campaign to preserve the integrity of the American force Harbord goes thoroughly, leading from the account of its final success into his own experiences after he had been transferred from the staff to command of the Marine Brigade, just in time to direct the two regiments in the battle of Belleau Wood. "I look back on my service with the Marine Brigade," he writes, "with more pride and satisfaction than on any other equal period in my long army career."

From the line Harbord went to the rear where he worked with Atterbury of the Pennsylvania, Col. Charles G. Dawes and other industrialists, directing the vast machinery that was carrying up supplies to the fighting men. There was less thrill, and smaller reward, here than in the line, but the task was well done, and the story of its accomplishment is as compelling as Gen. Harbord's accounts of line service.

The volume ends with a eulogy of Pershing as "one of the unchallenged best three of our Generals" of American history, and, after the account of tactical and administrative ability that the author has given, the reader is inclined to agree with him. E. R. A.

LET THE KING BEWARE. By Honore Morrow. (Wm. Morrow & Co., New York.)

DO you care to entertain the thought that George III of England, employer of mercenary Hessians and long the bogey-man of our grade-schools, was really a very nice fellow, handsome, devoted to peace, a lover of music and the arts, and not above sitting up nights with the Prince of Wales when the poor boy had the measles?

Mrs. Morrow must have realized how such a thought would strike many red-blooded Americans unless they were made quite sure, for she parades a goodly list of books and chronicles as proof: Arkins' Annals of the Reign of King George III, Beer's British Colonial Policy, 1754-1765, Melville's Farmer George, etc. Not only does she give us the low-down on a man whom all history must now reconsider, but she has much to say of other notables, such as Benjamin Franklin, "lover of the Empire," Lord North, "an amiable gargoyle," and so on, all of it from what she calls England's point of view in the troubles that led to the American War for Independence.

But the story is not concerned primarily with history. It is not concerned with economics, war, blood, death, literature, people or truth. Nor is it concerned exclusively with George III. Mostly it is concerned with love. In the first chapter the hero, an American Tory, leaves America and comes to England. In the second chapter he meets Miss Stuart, the girl. And in the last chapter, just at the moment when the reader is prostrate with emotion, he marries her.

It is not too much praise to say that the summer set, in between early-morning tennis and late-morning chukkers, might like this tale. J. S. B.

T. E. LAWRENCE OF ARABIA. By Charles Edmonds. (D. Appleton-Century Co., New York.)

BRAVE is he who first ate an oyster and equally brave is the man who undertakes to retell the story of Col. Lawrence's Arabian campaign. Col. Lawrence himself told this story in his "Seven Pillars of Wisdom." He told it for all time, in prose that scintillates and touches all the heights and explores all the caverns of the human spirit. No doubt Mr. Edmonds, in his pedestrian way, has done a good job. He has plugged up a few statuses that Lawrence scorned or neglected. He has pulled together the facts about pre-Arabian and post-Arabian Lawrence to give a coherent view of Lawrence's entire life.

But to turn from "The Seven Pillars" to this book is something like averting the gaze from the finished glory of the Taj Mahal to examine the architect's blueprints. R. C.

JAFSIE TELLS ALL! By Dr. John F. Condon. (Jonathan Lee Publishing Corp., New York.)

IN this not utterly unworthy account of the Lindbergh tragedy Dr. John F. Condon depicts himself, with heartfelt admiration and great enjoyment of his own luxuriant phraseology, as mediator between kidnaper and father. His story is disgustingly maudlin, irritatingly garrulous and indubitably sincere. No one can doubt, after reading the book, that this veteran writer-of-letters-to-the-people acted only from the noblest of motives in offering his services to the Lindberghs. It is only this obvious sincerity, in fact, and the truly dramatic composition of the book that entitle it to any but a yellow paper binding. It has a certain value, too, in that it should dispel any doubt as to Hauptmann's guilt in the minds of those sentimentalists who were disconcerted by his silence.

It is to be wished, however, that this may be the last journalistic savoring of a tragedy too deep to be converted into amusement for a public that enjoys a good cry. S. F. K.

Tragic Comedians

SATAN CAME TO EDEN. By Dore Strauch, as told to Walter Brockman. (Harper & Brothers, New York.)

IN a Berlin hospital a doctor paused to talk to a young woman patient. The subject was philosophical, but from that conversation sprang a friendship so close that it led to a joint renunciation of families and civilization for a visionary ideal—and ended tragically in the Galapagos Islands. "Satan came to Eden," says Dore Strauch, who was the young woman; but on reading her account one inclines to believe Satan was abetted by an insufficient practicality to balance the ideal.

The world has been pretty well familiarized with the story of Dore Strauch, Dr. Frederick Ritter, her philosophical "affinity," "Baroness" Wagner and her retainers in the primitive surroundings on Floreana, one of the Galapagos group. Dore, in her account, adds details of her early life and marriage to a professor 25 years her senior; tells of her meeting with Dr. Ritter, 15 years older than she, and how she became a disciple of his philosophy of the Nietschean superman combined with the contemplative man.

She gives much interesting minutae of their daily life on the island, which was no Eden so far as hardships and work were concerned. Dr. Ritter believed that hardship was necessary for cultivating the inner man. One feels, as the story unfolds, that the transposition from urban to primitive surroundings was too much for even the strongest philosophy. And the philosophy yielded to primitive forces.

Of the "Baroness" Wagner, self-styled "Empress of the Galapagos," Dore has few kind things to say. She doubts the authenticity of the "Baroness" title, and insists that many of the colorful accounts of the eccentricities of the "Baroness" carried in American and European papers were fabricated by the "Baroness" herself. The woman, she says, should have been an actress.

She further maintains that there is no mystery about the disappearance of the "Empress," who did not seek isolation in the South Seas, but with her companion, Philippson, was murdered by a discarded lover, who later died of thirst on another island. And Dr. Ritter, we read, died of eating chickens that had been fed on preserved pork. He lies buried on Floreana. Dore, still young, but physically affected by her terrible hardships, has returned to civilization, convinced, obviously, that the island is under an evil spell. O. F. F.

THE plight of the sharecroppers, particularly those of northeastern Arkansas, as seen through the eyes of the Southern Tenant Farmers' Union, is graphically outlined in this 96-page pamphlet by Howard Kester of Nashville, Tenn., one of the sponsors of the organization.

The booklet, which refers frequently to newspaper accounts of the conflicts between tenants and landowners, affords a detailed history of the union movement. Many of the opinions advanced in it, however, as well as certain phraseology falls inevitably under the category of sheer propaganda. No attempt is made to present a complete analysis of varying economic and social factors which imprison not only the tenant but the planter.

The author's solution of the problem embodies the Socialist conception of a co-operative society based on production for use. It would abolish the tenant system, substituting large scale co-operative farming, providing a rural community life with educational and social advantages. S. R. McC.

PHILO VANCE MURDER CASES. By S. S. Van Dine. (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.)

PHILO VANCE is the dilettante detective created by S. S. Van Dine, detective-story writer, and S. S. Van Dine is the detective-story writer created by Willard Huntington Wright, critic, essayist and authority on esthetics and philosophy. All this may sound exceedingly complicated, but the present volume tells how it was done.

In the first place, Wright, recovering from a prolonged nervous breakdown and forbidden his previous literary associations, invented Van Dine as a convenient nom de plume for his venture into another field of writing. Next, Van Dine wrote nine detective novels in which the learned and languid Vance solved all the mysteries and, so doing, made more money per volume, plus motion picture rights, than Wright's nine scholarly volumes together had made.

It is a highly satisfactory omnibus volume, covering more than 1000 pages, satisfactory both for its detective-story content and the interesting material about the evolution of Wright into Van Dine. F. G.

Milwaukee Socialists Rebuke Congressman Berger's Widow

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 16.—Mrs. Meta Berger, widow of the late Congressman, Victor L. Berger, whose organization genius built the Socialist party in Milwaukee to a dominating position, was virtually ostracised last week from the party of which she had been a member for 40 years.

The Socialist county central committee fell only a little short of expelling Mrs. Berger from the party on the demand of Mayor Daniel W. Hoan. Hoan had asked that strong disciplinary action be taken because of Mrs. Berger's anti-Nazi and pro-Communist statements that proved so embarrassing to him a few weeks ago in his bitter fight for re-election.

The differences between Hoan and Mrs. Berger became so serious at the time that the Mayor's committee dropped her from the list of authorized campaign speakers. Mrs. Berger without doubt lost Hoan a large number of German votes when, in appearing before a school board committee, she objected vigorously to granting leaves of absence to two recreational instructors who wanted to go to Germany to observe the Olympic games and study the youth movement. "Why don't they go to Russia, where they can learn something?" Mrs. Berger demanded.

Committee's Resolution.

After administering a reprimand, the county central committee virtually served an ultimatum on Mrs. Berger by adopting a resolution providing that in the future any Socialist making unauthorized public statements on Communism or on the proposed "united front" with the Communist party be expelled.

In a statement sent to the County Central Committee today, Mrs. Berger charged that Hoan and other leaders had permitted the Socialist party to go to a "quiet suicide."

Mrs. Berger, since spending five months in Russia a year and a half ago, has made dozens of public addresses before Parent-Teacher associations and other groups in Milwaukee and elsewhere praising the Soviet system and picturing it as in most respects far superior to the American system of government.

Hoan and the other party leaders paid little heed to these speeches until, shortly after the municipal campaign got under way, the Communists announced they were supporting him and his ticket. The mayor told the Communists he didn't want their votes, but the opposition pounced on their indorsement and made all possible capital of it.

Then when Mrs. Berger made her argument before the school board committee it was generally recognized she had put the mayor in a hole. Hoan hastened to issue a statement repudiating Mrs. Berger's stand, which he said did not reflect the views of the Socialist party. "Out of respect to the memory of her husband and her long membership in the Socialist party," he explained, no protests had been made against her earlier speeches praising Russia.

Mrs. Berger's Attitude.

Whether Mrs. Berger, who displays no fear of the party bosses, will observe the county committee's resolution to muzzle her is regarded as doubtful. She has for some time regarded Hoan and the present party bosses as dictatorial, and may permit herself to be driven into the Communist camp. She is friendly toward the League Against War and Fascism, attending and speaking before its national congress in Chicago two years ago in defiance of the wishes of the Milwaukee Socialists.

Mrs. Berger was further shoved out into the cold by the Socialists when it was announced she had failed of election as one of the party's 21 delegates from Milwaukee to the national convention opening in Cleveland May 23. Among the 60 on whom the party members voted she stood in twenty-fifth place. Hoan was named to head the delegation, and other leaders with whom Mrs. Berger has crossed swords in party councils stood high on the list.

Her husband having been elevated almost to the position of patron saint of the Milwaukee Socialists, Mrs. Berger has been a powerful figure in the party here since his death 10 years ago.

For more than a quarter of a century she has been a member of the Milwaukee school board; for 10 years she has served on the board of regents of the University of Wisconsin. She has been a member of the state board of normal school regents and before that was a member of the State Board of Education.

Mrs. Berger has thus become a national figure in her own right, after having been widely known in Washington as the wife of America's only Socialist Congressman.

Berger Hoan's Patron.

Hoan's stand, in what has amounted to demanding her ouster from the party "to rid it of the tag of Communism," has not been an easy one for him to take. For Milwaukeeans whose memory goes back 25 years recall that it was Victor Berger who "discovered" Dan Hoan, then a struggling young lawyer, and encouraged him to run for city attorney in 1910.

Under Berger's tutelage and backing, Hoan won re-election as city attorney, and was elected mayor in 1916. An apt student, he quickly developed into a resourceful politician, and has kept himself in power ever since.

There appears little prospect that the breach between Hoan and Mrs. Berger will be healed. Friends of both predict that if the situation is aggravated further, the 70-year-old widow of the old party warhorse will be formally expelled from the fold.

LETTER DOUBTS THAT UNION REPRESENTS CITY TEACHERS

Challenge Made to Dr. Preisler By District Committee of State Association.

A challenge to Dr. Paul W. Preisler of Washington University medical school, president of the Teachers' Union of St. Louis and St. Louis County, to "show that he represents any teachers employed in the St. Louis public schools," was contained in a letter to the Board of Education yesterday from the Executive Committee of the St. Louis District, Missouri State Teachers' Association.

The letter, signed by Hugh H. Barr, president of the district, and Miss Mathilda Winkelman, secretary, expressed confidence that members of the association were not represented "in opinion or sentiment" by the union. Nearly all of the local teachers belong to the association. The union has refused to disclose its membership because of the board's dead-letter rule prohibiting teachers from belonging to labor unions, but school officials have expressed doubt that any considerable number of teachers here belonged or wanted to belong to the union. Some board members have said that teachers urged them not to repeal the anti-union rule.

An unsuccessful effort has been made by the union to have the rule rescinded. Last Sunday it failed in a request to Central Trades and Labor Union to declare a boycott on 11 members of the board who opposed dropping the rule. The boycott proposal and other acts of Dr. Preisler were denounced by the association letter as "inimical to the cordial relations that have always existed between members of the board and the teachers." The association officers suggested that the board make their letter public to correct any public misunderstanding the the situation.

The Downtown Y. M. C. A. choral club will give a spring concert Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in the association building, 1528 Locust street. Dorothy Coates Coe, harpist, will be guest artist. A dance will follow.

Lions' Club Address.

Frank R. Eldridge, chief of the commercial intelligence division of the Bureau of Foreign & Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce, will address the Downtown Lions' Club at luncheon Wednesday at Hotel Statler.

Screen Does 'Charge of Light Brigade'—Hollywood Version

Title and Two Lines From First Stanza Still Intact but It Hurt Holding Troops to 600 When 6000 Men Were Available.

By H. H. NIEMEYER

HOLLYWOOD, May 16.

WE were invited to be at a studio at 9 o'clock the other morning to go out on location, somewhere or other—it was supposed to be India, but it actually was a little closer, by some five or six thousand miles—and see them making camera shots of the gallant 600 in Tennyson's "The Charge of the Light Brigade." The late Mr. Tennyson's poem has been altered for movie purposes. About all that remains of the original is the title and two lines from the first stanza. You remember:

All in the valley of death
Rode the six hundred.

A love story, some dancing scenes and things, like that have been added in the Hollywood manner. Mr. Tennyson is in no position to object and his heirs-at-law have apparently been sufficiently appeased. Some even wanted to change the gallant 600. Six hundred horsemen is a small affair in modern picture spectacles and the studio held out, a long time, for 6000, who would have been readily available, but finally, with many misgivings, let the departed poet, and history, to a certain extent, have its way.

We arrived at the studio, at what is practically daybreak for us, to go to the valley of death—and ran, slap bang, into a Charge of the Light Headed Brigade. A charge which roared through Cahuenga Pass out of Hollywood and decended upon the studio casting office in all sorts and conditions of motor cars. Girls. Six hundred or more of 'em, their marcelled heads gleaming in the sunlight. "We called for 400," the casting office clerk said, "and look what we get. We'll let them all in though for Bobby Connelly's inspection, and out of this lot, and more to come, he'll make his pick for the first number in 'Stage Struck'."

Outside they were still coming, in droves, by roadster, sedan, truck and taxicab. Every car delivered two, four, sometimes six or eight breathless, bright-eyed passengers and the crowd before the casting office soon overflowed from the sidewalks to the lawn.

"Where do they all come from?" we asked.

"They come from all sorts and classes of homes and apartments," said the clerk. "Many of them are girls who have been working as dancers in pictures more or less steadily for several years. They are the ones who get most of the jobs. They have looks and ability. The directors spot them every time."

"The others?"

"They're the girls who graduated from high school last year. Some of them are from New York, where there seems to be less chorus work now than there is in Hollywood. A few are the old timers. They drop out after a few failures.

A TELEPHONE rang and the young man answered it, listened briefly and then went to the window that looked out into the waiting room of the casting office.

"Mr. Connelly's ready, girls," he said. "Go to stage sixteen."

He opened the electrically controlled door and blocked it with a wedge so that it would stay open, and the girls filed in. They were, to be honest, a happy looking lot. There were blondes and brunettes, red heads and raven locks—but the blondes predominated.

"Two years ago," said the clerk, "they were all platinum blondes."

"How many of these will Mr. Connelly pick for 'Stage Struck?'" we asked.

"Connelly wants 150. He ought to get 40 or 50 out of the 600 who just went in. That'll be high."

"Where will he get the rest of the 150 girls he wants?"

"There'll be another call tomorrow morning, and the morning after that, and every morning until he has picked as many as he wants," said the clerk.

"Is the supply unlimited?"

"Almost. The world is full of pretty girls—and most of them have an eye on Hollywood. Connelly generally interviews a couple of thousand before he fills a chorus."

"And will they all be as well dressed and marcelled as these?"

"Sure. There's a new marcel a minute in Hollywood."

"How long will it be before those that Mr. Connelly doesn't want know the bad news?"

The clerk grinned. "Half of them are probably on their way back here right now," he said. "Those will be the ones who are eliminated after Connelly's first 'once over' down the line."

"You seem to know a lot about these girls and their problems," we said.

"I ought to," said the casting clerk gently. "I'm married to one of them. But we have a new baby and she doesn't work any more."

In our set—W. C. Fields is a pretty sick man again. He got through with "Poppy" but his next film is a long way off . . . Inez Gorman, former soloist with the Cincinnati Symphony, has been engaged for the lead opposite Lawrence Tibbett in the screen's musical version of "The Mark of Zorro" . . . Irving Cobb, who has done about everything else in his lifetime, will sing in "Public Nuisance No. 1" which may be the reason for the title . . . Ruth Chatterton is going to turn director after she finishes her new picture, "Girl's Dormitory."

Rehearsals for Opera Principals Start on May 25

PRINCIPALS who will appear in "Kid Boots," the production that opens the Municipal Opera season on June 5, are scheduled to begin arriving this week for rehearsals, which start May 25.

There will be seven newcomers to the opera, "Kid Boots"—Vicienne Segal, June O'Dea, Ray Middleton, Janet Reade, Bertram Peacock, John Cherry and Helene Denizon. Georgia Price, comedian, who was seen at the Forest Park Theater for the first time last summer in "Woopee," will play the name part that was created by Eddie Cantor. Other players of previous seasons who will return for the show are Joseph Macaulay, Audrey Christie, Detmar Poppen, Earl MacVeigh and Carl Randall.

Rehearsals will be under the direction of Producing Director Laurence Schwab and members of his staff, including Zeke Colvan, general stage director, who was an aid of Ziegfeld, who originally produced the piece, and O. J. Vanasse and Edward Saulpaugh, associate stage directors.

The system founded last year of engaging principals only for specific roles and introducing new faces in the casts each week will be continued during the 1936 season. More than 33 stars already have been obtained for the season. Besides those mentioned the season's roll will include for the first time: Helen Gleason, Metropolitan Opera saprano; Norma Terris, prima donna; Billy House, Armida, Eddie Garr, Billy Rayes, Albert Mahler, Noel Francis, Nina Olivette, Zamah Cunningham, Rosie Moran, June Havoc, Stuart and Lee and Inez Harvot. Others of former seasons who are returning are Gil Lamb, Ruby Mercer, Edward Nell Jr., Carl Randall, Detmar Poppen, John Clarke and Al Downing.

The designing of the sets for the 12 productions was begun by Art Director Raymond Sovey on his arrival here last week. He spent most of his winter in New York, where he was actively engaged as scenic artist for several productions.

Laughton Scheduled to Play Rembrandt Under Direction of Korda

A screen dramatization under the title "Rembrandt" of events in the life of the great Dutch painter has been announced from London with Charles Laughton as the artist and Alexander Korda directing. The arrangement, made possible by last-minute changes in London film schedules, caused postponement of the "Lion of Mayfair," which had been about to go into production with Laughton as star.

One-Acters at Sheldon Memorial.

The Young People's Association of the Ethical Society will present two one-act plays, "Art and Mrs. Palmer," by Glenn Hughes, "The Incurable Optimist," by Noel Walters, and a sketch, "All's Vanity," at the Sheldon Memorial Auditorium on next Saturday evening.

William Powell and Jean Arthur in "The Ex-Mrs. Bradford," at the Orpheum.

Little Symphony To Hold Contest For Pianists

The Music Committee of the Little Symphony Concerts Association has announced that entrants in a contest for pianists must signify their intention of competing before May 25. The contest is part of the association's program intended to give opportunities to young musicians. Elimination auditions will be held during the second week in June by a special committee, but the final winner will be selected by Hans Lange, associate conductor of the Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra of New York. Lange will conduct three of the Little Symphony concerts at the John Burroughs School outdoor theater during the coming season. The winner will be soloist at Lange's final concert on July 14 and will also be awarded a nominal prize.

Rules governing the contest are as follows: Contestants must register with Mrs. C. Powell Fordyce, 7751 Kingsbury avenue. They must be prepared to play a concerto of Bach, Haydn or Mozart with an accompanist of their own selection or with one provided by the Auditions Committee. Both advanced students and professional musicians may compete. Applicants need not be residents of St. Louis.

New York Stage Ends Season With Fame and Money

By a Special Corespondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 16.

THIS theater year of 1935-36 is not only distinguished for the number of money-making ventures on New York stages but for the high quality of the writing, direction and acting in many productions. It has also been a season marked by the experimental pieces of the Federal Theater Project and independent group theaters.

In spite of the advent of warm weather which usually brings the New York theatrical season pretty much to a close, 28 shows are still enjoying a brisk business and producers generally are congratulating themselves on the most successful winter in several years.

There were 122 first nights this season, embracing every type of dramatic endeavor. More than three-quarters of these presentations received favorable critical comment and at least half enjoyed fairly good runs.

Foremost among the successful producers is the Theater Guild, which finds itself with three outstanding hits still on the boards. "Idiot's Delight," Robert E. Sherwood's Pulitzer prize drama, has elicited a greater demand than any entertainment in which Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne have appeared. Unanimously praised by the critics at its opening, Mr. Sherwood's play, behind a spectacular surface, examines the grave ills of modern society with especial reference to war and Fascism. "Call It a Day," a Dodie Smith comedy with Gladys Cooper and Philip Merivale, also is under the Guild banner, and provides its stars, as mother and father of an English family, with a bright medium for their talents. The Guild's third blue ribbon production is S. N. Behrman's eloquent and provocative comedy, "End of Summer." In it the stunning Ina Claire and the gifted Osgood Perkins handle the brilliant dialogue in a manner most satisfying even to the critical Guild audiences.

OTHERS among the season's money-makers which have apparently settled down for the summer are "Boy Meets Girl," the Spewack's hilarious satire on Hollywood; "Dead End," Sidney Kingsley's beautifully produced drama of the New York sidewalks; "Correspondent Unknown" and "Moon Over Mulberry Street."

One of the best received offerings was Maxwell Anderson's "Winterset," which is now on tour and which was the choice of the New York Drama Critics Circle for its first annual award as the best American play of the season.

Other shows which were included in an inventory of attendable productions by the late Percy Hammond, New York drama critic in one of his last columns, were "Ethan Frome," an adaptation by Owen Davis and his son of Edith Wharton's despairing novel; "Victoria Regina," a skillfully arranged pageant of the life of Queen Victoria, admirably portrayed by Helen Hayes; "Saint Joan," Katharine Cornell's revival of the Shavian drama with herself in the title role; "Pride and Prejudice;" "The Postman Always Rings Twice," James M. Cain's own theatrical version of his modern novel; "Libel," a courtroom drama with Colin Clive, and "First Lady," by George Kaufman and Katherine Dayton, in which Jane Cowl portrays one side of a feud between two of the Capitol's most dignified stateswomen.

LAST winter also witnessed the entry of the United States Government into the ranks of producers. Of the eight plays already presented at popular prices one — "Murder in the Cathedral," by T. S. Eliot—has been acclaimed one of the most meritorious efforts of the season, and three others — "Chalk Dust," "Triple A Plowed Under," and "Macbeth"—are definite hits, judged by the attendance records. The last, presented in Harlem with a Negro cast, draws a Broadway crowd every evening.

Considerable criticism favorable in tone was bestowed on "Let Freedom Ring," a vigorous protest against the treatment of workers in the Carolina textile mills, which was presented at the Broadhurst last fall and later revived by the Theater Union on Fourteenth street. It was the members of this same company who presented the much-talked-of anti-war drama, "Bury the Dead," here last month, and so impressed Alex Yokel, the producer of the smash hit, "Three Men on a Horse," with the merits of the one-act play that he backed them for the current production at the Ethel Barrymore Theater.

"Bury the Dead" is an impressive play by a new dramatist, Irwin Shaw. It is an honest indictment of a vicious institution and not hysterical propaganda.

"Show Boat" Still Keeps Rolling Along

FOR that large and enthusiastic body, the Association of "Show Boat" Fans, the newest version of the Jerome Kern-Oscar Hammerstein II musical play, now on the screen at the Fox, should be extremely satisfying. Enacted by a cast which includes many noted figures of stage and screen, this dramatization of the Edna Ferber novel gives full opportunity to revel anew in the bitter-sweet romanticism, the unsubtle humor and the melodious music whose appeal has survived ten years of repetition. One follows again the tender love story of Magnolia and Gaylord Ravenal and the tragedy of Julie and Steve, chuckles at the drolleries of Cap'n Andy and his acidulous wife, feels a faint nostalgia perhaps (if one is old enough) at the scenes of life on the Mississippi in the 80's and in Chicago in the 90's. But the new edition of the show has more than this. It carries the story up to the present, with a happy, if tear-jerking ending; it contains two or three new songs, written especially for this production; it makes effective use of cinematographic possibilities in showing the river in various moods and in providing background for song numbers, and it offers the rich moving voice of Paul Robeson. His singing of "Ol' Man River" is something to remember.

THERE are deadly doings at Loew's this week. In "A Message to Garcia," John Boles, young American lieutenant, is hampered by bullets, treachery, alligators and a peculiarly venomous Spanish agent in his efforts to hand the Cuban patriot of 1898, Gen. Garcia, a paper saying the Yanks are coming and be sure to meet them. The fact that the perils of the Lieutenant's journey through the Cuban jungles are shared by that comely patriotess, Senorita Barbara Stanwyck, and a slightly verminous but amusing scalawag easily identified as Wallace Beery, gives romantic and humorous embroidery to the adventurous narrative. Berry gives a characteristic performance which alone is sufficient to lift the picture above the run-of-the-mill class.

"Moonlight Murder," on the same bill, is a capably handled mystery thriller which has a special interest for St. Louis from the fact that in it Leonard Ceeley, a Municipal Opera star of several seasons, makes his film debut. Ceeley, as the singer who steps into the role of Leo Carrillo when that operatic tenor is done to death on the stage, is one of those suspected of his murder and of the succeeding murder of Carrillo's sweetheart of the moment. Chester Morris, a detective, and Madge Evans, his girl friend, do a lot of puzzling before the double mystery is solved.

MURDER continues to provide one of the very best backgrounds for fun in the movies. In "The Ex-Mrs. Bradford" at the Orpheum, William Powell saunters charmingly and amusingly through three fine killings, nicely aided by the pert Jean Arthur as the ex-Mrs. who insists on dragging him into murder mysteries as an amateur detective, and, of course, eventually back to the altar. The comedy is fine, but you really shouldn't try to follow the plot. It's too involved, and the solution isn't quite cricket as far as the spectator is concerned. And it has one of those endings where all the suspects are gathered in one room and each has a close-up registering guilt. Bill has moving pictures showing the murderer at work, which is a new high mark in sleuthing, even for a Hollywood detective. But he doesn't simply take a look at them himself, find out who the fiend is, and have him jugged out of hand. That would be crude. No, he shows the films to the suspects en masse, so the culprit may draw a pistol and try to shoot his way out, endangering the lives of some of Hollywood's best and most innocent character actors.

THE two tales being unreeled at the Ambassador are set in opposite corners of the map, but are as congenial as the apparently naive attitudes of their makers. "And So They Were Married" takes up the unnecessary problem of bringing romance into the hollow existence of misogamist Mary Astor and misogynist Melvyn Douglas. This is accomplished by the mischievous machinations of two juveniles (Jackie Moran and Edith Fellows).

"Champagne Charlie" is little better, but being an account of the killings of two of its participants, is likely to be pleasanter for the audience. The dramatic device is a long-winded flashback, which makes the thin plot more obvious. Competent work by Herbert Mundin (an old favorite character actor) and James Tinling, the director, serve to salvage the first scene and send the play downhill with more momentum. Paul Cavanagh, Noel Madison and Helen Wood head the bill.

"TIMES SQUARE PLAYBOY," at the Shubert, taken from George M. Cohan's old play "The Home Towners," creaks a little in spots with preaching about small-town narrow-mindedness and is too glib about its ending, but moves quickly and is fair entertainment. Warren William, the star, hasn't much more to do than be hearty and wrestle with his butler. It would have to be better than it is to make up for "Forgotten Faces," the other half of the double bill, a dreary thing in which the excellent Herbert Marshall is wasted and Gertrude Michael proves that smearing heavy dark makeup under the eyes does not make a competent dramatic actress. If you must know, it's about a bitter struggle between a father and mother over their daughter, who is left happily crooning with her boy-friend at the drawing room piano while mother shoots father upstairs and then falls out the window.

Science Studies AERONEUROSIS —the Newest Occupational Disease

Captain Harry G. Armstrong of the U. S. A. Medical Corps Analyzes This Highly Nervous Disorder Which Affects Airplane Pilots, and Says It Is Caused by Physical Strains, "Ego Deflation" and Economic Fears.

By a Member of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

SINCE aviators are conceded to be the white-headed boys of this machine age, looked up to by the pedestrian public as more or less heroic adventurers and respected by the air traveler as genuinely competent and devoted to a picturesque duty, considerable news interest attaches to the recent announcement that their calling is afflicted by a strange new occupational disease. There are literate people who still think occupational diseases are mostly a racket; even silicosis (one of the ghastliest of them) is stigmatized as the commercial asset of a lot of shyster lawyers. That this is an absurd point of view becomes apparent when such an affliction applies to a class of worker conspicuous for unselfish and conscientous devotion to a dangerous occupation. It becomes even more so when it is pointed out that this particular disease preys only on the most desirable men in the profession.

Aeroneurosis, as it has been dubbed, is the discovery of a plausible and articulate young Army surgeon, Captain Harry G. Armstrong of the Medical Corps, attached to Wright Field in Dayton, Ohio. His presentation of the known facts has drawn attention, not only because it is persuasively written and provocative, but also because it carries the prestige accorded spacious leading articles in the Journal of the American Medical Association. The writer is 37 and a native of South Dakota; he served with the Marines during the World War, and was graduated from two Army medical corps schools before taking his B. S. at the University of South Dakota and his M. D. at the University of Louisville.

While it might be taken for granted that a writer on such a subject should advocate abolition of the conditions responsible for the disease and should consider this more important than a cure, what is decidedly unusual about Captain Armstrong's approach is that he finds the chief cause to be economic and social insecurity. Inevitably this recalls the thesis of Paul deKruif's latest book, "Why Keep Them Alive?" This book expresses a conviction that it is futile for science to find preventives for poverty and disease when society persists in artificially prolonging general poverty and consequent disease.

Although Captain Armstrong's conclusions are based on observation of only 163 "unselected airplane pilots" and 18 cases of aeroneurosis, he expresses the conviction that the disease "is not under the control of the medical profession, is a direct responsibility of the medical profession and as such should be subject to proper regulation for the protection of the individual and the flying public."

The term aeroneuroses (sic) was coined during the World War and used as a general tab for functional nervous diseases brought on by the stress of war service in the air. As Captain Armstrong explains, this did not imply that the disorders differed from neurosis brought on by other causes and found even in civilian life. Other terms were used to describe the same symptoms and were discarded in favor of this special one, now used to signify "a chronic functional nervous disorder occurring in aviators, characterized by gastric distress, nervous irritability, fatigue of the higher voluntary mental centers, insomnia, emotional instability and increased motor activity." The present sickness is not the same as those brought on by the hectic habitual contact with death and dogfights that characterized the lives of war aviators.

In the small group of flyers studied by Captain Armstrong, four cases were discovered in men in their late twenties. This represented only three per cent of the men in that age group. Fifty per cent of the men in their thirties were afflicted and 57 per cent of those in their forties. These figures can't be given too much importance owing to the small number of cases involved, but they do bear out the doctor's theory that the anxiety caused by fear of growing unfit has something to do with the case; naturally this would increase with age.

The fact that a nervous disease of this sort should attack aviators in the first place is peculiar, since they are chosen for physical and temperamental fitness for the job and rigorously examined and observed.

The 163 studied in this case were all above the average in intelligence and lived in comfortable surroundings. All but eight are young men (under 40) and the majority were married and have children. They all had enough money "for the comforts of modern life." Every one of them was "predominantly extrovertive"—in other words not given to hypochondria, not abnormally self-centered or unduly concerned with imaginary ailments. "Professionally," says Captain Armstrong, "they constituted the finest type of pilot, having a great amount of courage, alertness, energy and vitality. Personally, they were intense, generous, warm hearted, friendly, devoted to duty and family and, in general, a high type of individual. Their actions were frank and vigorous, their feelings ruled the intellect more than good judgment, and their feelings were devoted to those about them."

It is the severity of the weeding-out process with which pilots are chosen that makes it obvious that this type of neurosis is necessarily brought on by the conditions peculiar to their lives. Those who do not possess a marked nervous stability, says Captain Armstrong, are quickly detected in training and eliminated. The writer finds it true, however, that every flyer possesses some instability. "Otherwise he would be nothing more or less than a clod."

Although he doesn't say so directly, it seems that Captain Armstrong's experimental subjects were all members of the flying corps, for he writes, "A simple comparison of the ratio between the accident hazard and the monetary compensation with regard to either commercial flyers or officers of the services offers nothing to the individual but the obvious conclusion that his worth is lightly valued. The accompanying ego deflation, resentment and sense of injustice add their burden of emotional stress. The higher the intelligence, the more this holds true. The high type appreciates the value of safety; the moron is unconcerned." The essential causes of aeroneurosis would, however, apply equally to military and civilian aviators.

Nevertheless the report throws an interesting sidelight on the conditions involved in military flying. The 163 men observed flew only about an hour a day on the average. During the three years they were being observed, 10 of these died, nine in accidents. The hazard of flying was estimated to be 216 times the hazard, hour for hour, when they were not flying. And in addition to the deaths there were 19 emergency parachute jumps, seven collisions in midair and 77 aircraft accidents resulting in the injury of 39 individuals. One of those who died suffered from aeroneurosis.

Captain Armstrong's description of the psychological effect of seeing an accident or being involved in one is not reassuring to those who are timid about flying. "Pilots are frequently," writes the doctor, "a witness to the crashes of others. Crashes undoubtedly produce the most violent known deaths, and rescuers usually find a mangled corpse with brain tissue spattered over the instrument board, naked bones projecting through flesh, and the body a jelly-like mass confined to shape only by the clothing. Frequently gallons of spilled gasoline turn the twisted mass of wreckage into a concentrated hell of searing flame while the victim writhes and curls amid the stench of burning flesh.

"To witness one of these scenes is never to forget it. To witness one and fly one must forget it, repress it; and thereby a new conflict arises."

Yet this is not the paramount cause of aeroneurosis. There are numerous possible contributory causes, among them seven physical agencies, five of which are known to destroy nerve tissue. These are carbon monoxide poisoning, lack of oxygen, inhalation of pure oxygen, head wounds, centrifugal and centripetal forces, speed, and barometric pressure changes. The last two are not known to destroy nerve tissue or to have any immediate effect. Captain Armstrong suspects that they do, and is carrying on tests with laboratory animals to find out. In fact he has subjected animals to all the conditions encountered by aviators to test the physical effects.

ONE of the news magazines describes it in this manner: "Dr. Armstrong thinks flying injures the actual tissues of the brain. He is trying to demonstrate this hypothesis by rattling rats in baskets until they go crazy, then examining their brains under the microscope." But experts say this is misleading. Captain Armstrong isn't prepared to say that victims of aeroneurosis exhibit any physical changes so far as the nervous system are concerned. The proof of this is still lacking.

Physical effects are prominent, however, in victims of the disease. Irritable fatigue of the higher brain centers is bound to have some relation to physical state of nerve tissues. The patient complains of insomnia and nightmares having to do with plane crashes. He wakes up depressed and fearful and remains so until late in the day, when this mood is replaced by irritability. His eyes burn and tire rapidly and the eyelids itch. Since all pilots suffer eventually from gradual loss of hearing, this is not considered symptomatic of the disease, but aeroneurosis patients seem to demonstrate increased unsteadiness in balance and whirling tests. They are active and fidgety and have abnormal muscular energy regard-

"The aviator usually enters the service (or did up to recently) filled with the notion that his calling is a high and adventurous one; the change in the attitude of the public with the increased use of the airplane has caused him to lose faith, however slightly."

Can Be Set Up in Ten Days and New Rooms Can Be "Buttoned on" at Will.

PITTSBURGH, Pennsylvania.

THE latest word in homes for average Americans has just been demonstrated here. It was "modern," of course, and "fabricated"—turned out at the factory, ready to put together. It was air-conditioned and all-steel. It required only 10 days to set up and furnish complete in a Pittsburgh department store. And a five-room "California" bungalow—two bedrooms, living room, dining room, kitchen and bath—designed by William Van Alen, New York architect of the Chrysler tower, was estimated to cost $4500, including ground.

The exhibition attracted thousands of prospective home builders. Van Alen says it illustrates an outstanding trend in American needs and tastes. To be intensely practical, he says economists figure such homes—convenient, inexpensive, attractive, livable—have a waiting market of about $5,000,000,000.

Construction is of steel panels, each a sheet of steel set in a steel frame. A concrete foundation is sunk below the frost line, with anchor bolts for the wall panels. The method allows other rooms—or even a second floor—to be bolted on at will, and the entire house may be folded up and moved to a new location with a loss, Van Alen says, of only about 20 per cent.

The steel is surfaced with aluminum to prevent rusting. The outer wall is finished in an egg-shell white, well fitting the simple, clean-cut design. The finish is guaranteed against ordinary weathering for five years, and may be renewed at small cost.

INNER walls may be also of steel, or of sheet rock or other wall board, papered or painted without plaster. The four-inch space between inner and outer walls is filled with an insulating material described as "exploded" mica—expanded to as much as 16 times its original thickness by intense heat in some natural process and for a long time regarded a mineralogical curiosity, but now coming into industrial use as a non-conductor of heat or electricity. It's use, Van Alen explains, will provide an eight-degree difference in indoor and outdoor temperature in summer, and a corresponding difference in winter.

He says it will save 40 per cent in winter fuel costs, and enable efficient summer air conditioning by the circulation of unrefrigerated air.

Heating and air conditioning apparatus, the water heater, and so on, are housed in a utility room tucked away beside the back hall, since as in many late houses, there is no basement.

As it stands, for the demonstration here, at least, the all-steel house would not seem out of place in any neighborhood one would be likely to select for any style of small residence.

The finished walls convey no hint of the metallic or — since "Modern Times" — Chaplin equal, but seem rather attractively cool and clean. The style runs to windows at the corners, but not, as in the more vehemently modern, to windows curving around the corners; and if one finds the flat roof impossible, he can have any other sort of roof that he wants to pay for.

THE very modest style exhibited here provides for a beautifully roomy living room, 12 by 20 feet; two comfortable bedrooms, 10 by 12 and 12 by 12; a bit of a dining room, 6 by 7 1-2, and a kitchen, conveniently if not spaciously, 7 by 10—furnished all-metal, with an electric stove, indirect lighting, a built-in exhaust fan, a window over the sink and everything in reach.

There are five windows in the living room, two in each bedroom and one in the dining cubicle.

From the door a hall runs the depth of the house. On the left of the corridor are the bedrooms, the larger in front and the smaller opposite the bathroom.

On the right, the living room occupies the front of the house, extending out beside the porch with windows on three sides.

Back of it is the dining room and then, at the rear right-hand corner of the house, the kitchen.

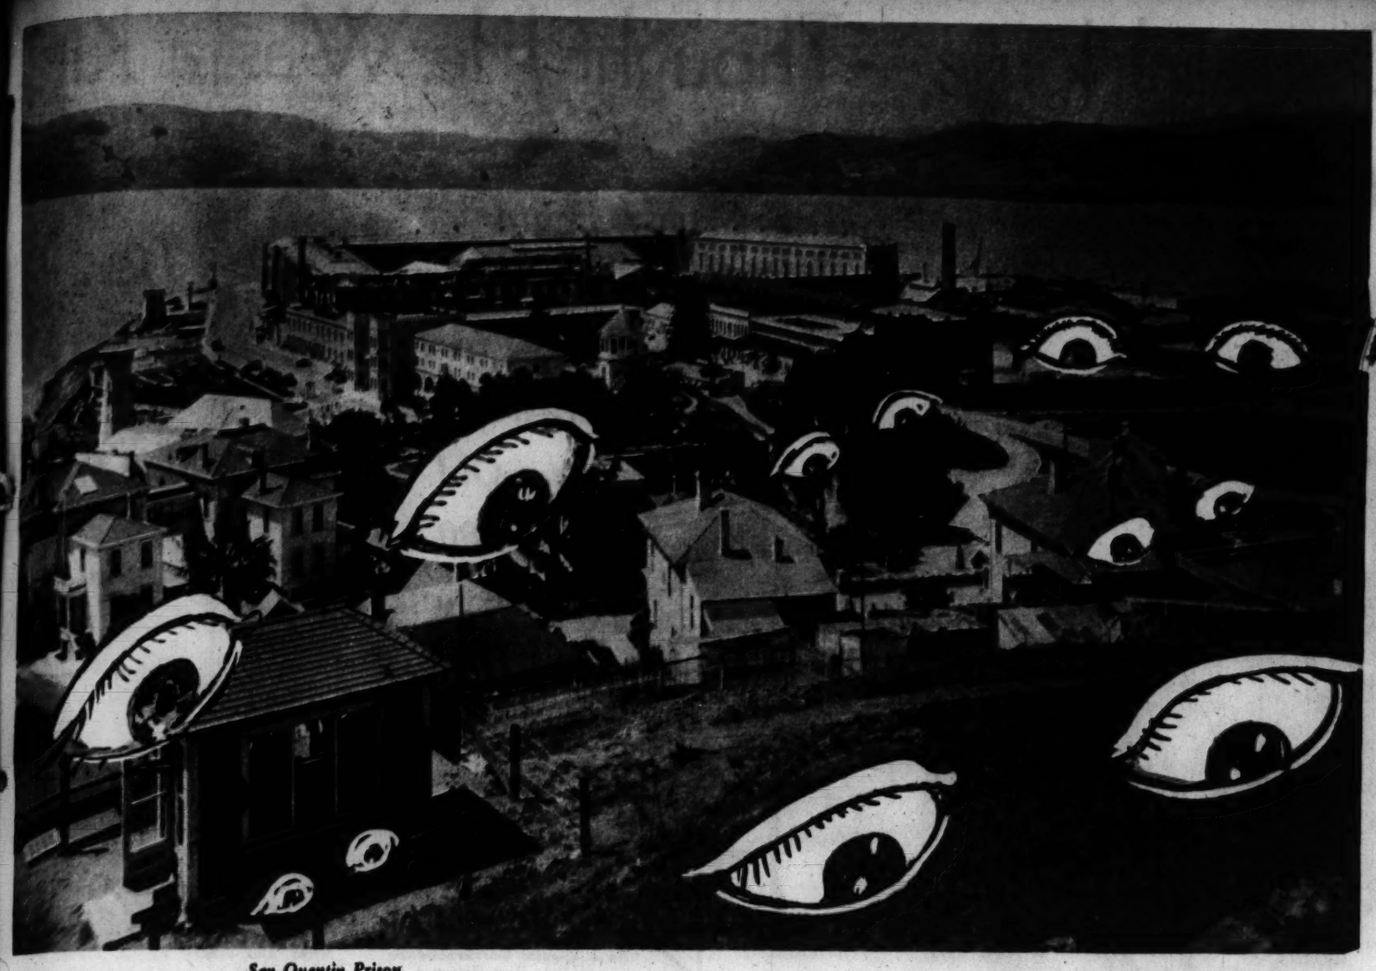
In the Strange HALF-WORLD Behind PRISON WALLS

Former Warden James B. Holohan of San Quentin Gives the Highlights of His Eight and a Half Years as Ruler Over This Famous Convict Community.

Clara Philips.



San Quentin Prison.

With this article the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine begins publication of a series on intimate aspects of prison life by James Bernard Holohan, who retired April 15 after eight and a half years as warden of the California penitentiary at San Quentin, largest institution of its kind and, in part of his term, one of the most dangerously overcrowded.

Within those walls, almost side by side with the "normal" everyday life of free men and women, exists another world. The unavoidable restrictions, the enforced contacts in crowded cells or swarming prison yard, the hope of freedom or the certainty of doom or the imminence of death—all alike give it another-world psychology, standards of conduct and a construction of "fair play" incredibly remote from life outside the walls. Actions that would be condemned outside may there become the inevitable human reaction to the conditions of the place. Incidents that outside might be dismissed with a smile have, in cold fact, led more than once to riot and bloodshed.

Of this half-world, James B. Holohan is exceptionally well equipped to write with insight and authority, not only by his San Quentin years, but through earlier studies of crime and its problems as a United States Marshal and a California State Senator. In this revealing series he tells of murderous explosions of prison psychology—one of which almost cost his life; gives his own views on the vital and debated question of how to deal with it; and he shows, with the intimate touch of first-hand experience, the workings of the human mind in friendship and feud and in the dash for freedom, in Condemned Row and even on the steps of the gallows.

Warden Holohan, who felt 3500 pairs of eyes on him when he first walked through the prison.

By JAMES B. HOLOHAN

THIRTY-FIVE HUNDRED pairs of eyes were boring through me. It was my first official round of San Quentin Prison. In a few days I would be the new boss of the California Big House. I was looking over the walled citadel of gray stone buildings that housed unwilling gray-clad stone-faced men—that was to become during my wardenship the largest institution of its kind in the world.

But the 3500 men in gray were eyeing me a lot more piercingly than I could pry into the outward and hidden life of San Quentin.

There was a tense undercurrent among the men I passed in the yard, the jute mill and the industrial shops. Their searching eyes asked "What'll he do? Is he a straight shooter?"

And on each of the three exploring trips I made preliminary to becoming the new warden I could see out of the corner of my eye that my every gesture was being watched, any chance remark, once overheard, would be known throughout those masses of prisoners with the speed of telegraphy—by grapevine. I was on trial.

Warden Frank J. Smith, son-in-law of former Governor Friend W. Richardson, showed me around. He was worn out and a sick man from his two years and eight months of putting his mind and body into managing crime's city.

"Jim, you'll have a bellyfull by the time you've been here that long," Warden Smith said. "It's a tough job."

But the job looked easy to me then. I became warden on September 1, 1927. The Republican administration that picked me, a Democrat, to be warden did not attach one string to the appointment. Governor C. C. Young did not even see me.

The first I heard from my chief was nearly three months after I took the post. We were having a big Thanksgiving Day field meet. The convict population was taking out its pent-up feelings in roars of laughter at the clowns, the female impersonators and athletes cavorting on the sports field.

I was chuckling at the antics, getting some new slants, incidentally, on how fun ought to be sandwiched with punishment, when a guard whispered, "the Governor calling, urgent!"

Governor Young's voice was strained, anxious.

"A big riot at Folsom—very bad," he said. About 120 miles away at California's other Big House blood was being spilled.

"Any trouble brewing at San Quentin?" the Governor asked—"be careful! It may be a plot to break open Folsom and San Quentin simultaneously."

Nine convicts and two guards were killed, 21 men wounded in that Folsom uprising of Thanksgiving day, 1927. It was my first glimpse, from a distance, into what might tear loose at San Quentin. What could a new warden do to prevent an explosion? Well, I soon learned, realizing that what he did not do might be every bit as important.

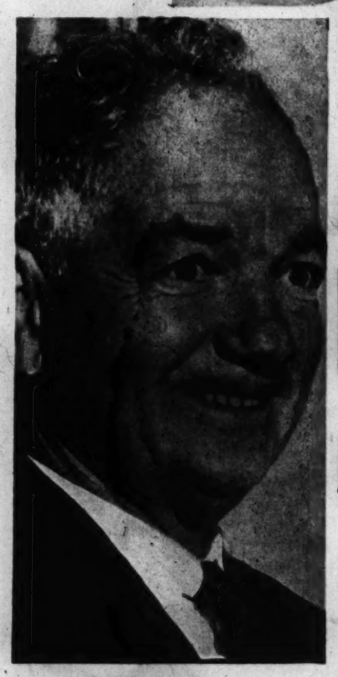
Massed prisoners are restless when a new warden takes charge of their lives. As United States Marshal and Sheriff, I had learned something about criminals. But it takes years to get "con wise." I had to learn prison. It's lucky I didn't go in with preconceived ideas of prison reform. I soon was deluged with tips on sweeping changes that ought to be made at San Quentin.

Some of the ideas, from old heads in Big House management, looked good. I was of a mind to try them. But the restless eyes of caged men sizing me up told me, "take it easy."

When a young robber or a man doomed to die comes into the prison, usually kind of dazed and awfully scared, friendly convicts — "cons" for short—will whisper to him, "take it easy, son." So I took it easy about making the kind of changes that would be like a revolution to this compact city. In the code of imprisoned men, I must shoot straight with them; that was the main thing.

San Quentin's population had just gone over its intended limit of about 3000 prisoners when I took charge. The deluge had only started. A year later it was up to 4434, with 548 of them out in road camps. But we hadn't seen any overcrowding yet. The depression years packed them in by droves, but didn't take many out. Men with paroles could not take their freedom because they had to have jobs lined up before paroles became effective, and they couldn't get jobs outside.

The climax of "bursting-over" years at San Quentin came in 1934. There were 6339 men enrolled at one time at our Big House. This was more than twice as many men as were incarcerated in New York State's largest prison, Sing Sing. It was twice too many for some 3000 single cells that had to be crammed with extra beds.



Norman Selby, better known as "Kid" McCoy.

The men milled in a veritable human stockyard, elbow to elbow awaiting the calls to mess and evening lineup in the prison yard. Now and then, bloodlust was bound to flare up—the flash of a knife, a sudden fight that might lead to a wholesale explosion.

Fifteen thousand men and women in handcuffs were brought to San Quentin during my eight and a half years' wardenship. Each became a new number. In closing my books on the Biggest House I was signing in Prisoner No. 58,897, No. 58,898, No. 58,899, getting nearer and nearer to the day when San Quentin will have its 60,000th prisoner. The convicts' own sports newspaper notes under the heading "Stir-tistics" that 5682 men are still on San Quentin's rolls.

Those massed men can give a warden a new experience and discovery every day. . . .

We have racketeers inside the prison gates, preying on the weak, exacting their tribute from the criminal elements just as the racketeer preys on the honest citizen in the world outside.

We have fought long and ruthlessly against this menace and we have been successful in smashing the gangs. But the fight is endless, for new groups spring up as rapidly as the old ones are driven to earth.

Big shot gangsters, men of the Al Capone type, seldom give us trouble. The "smart" gangster, the man who has risen to leadership in the underworld, generally wants but one thing when he comes to prison—he wants out. And he has the sagacity to realize the only way out (aside from escape) is to behave himself.

Prison gangs recruit their membership from the young hoodlums, the type you see hanging around pool rooms and street corners. They have delusions of grandeur. Even in prison they want to be big shots. And they are easily led by some older, more cunningly vicious prisoner.

Prison gangs (there is seldom one widespread group, but usually bunches of six or eight) can let hell loose on hundreds of men — men whose lives wouldn't be worth a plugged nickel if they complained openly against this oppression. And this breeds fear and discontent—the twin evils that may touch off the "dynamite" ever present in all prisons.

The convict gangs work in numerous and devious ways. There is, for instance, the "Lead Pipe Collection Agency" an unholy league for the collection of gambling debts. For you must understand that the inmates will bet on anything, using their commissary credits, and the little things those credits will buy, as legal tender.

No sporting event or election passes without heavy betting. Men will lay several sacks of weed (tobacco) on the Stanford-California game, or any other big game. They will mortgage their dearest possessions—mufflers, fountain pens, tobacco—on a championship, prize fight, big league baseball game, an election.

We don't allow card playing, for it would only be an added breeder of discontent. But the inmates will bet heavily on the dominoes and chess games which we do allow them to play.

A GOOD many welch on their gambling debts. And this is where the Lead Pipe Collection Agency springs into action—for a consideration, of course. Three thousand men are milling around in the yard. A welcher feels something hard and sharp pressing against his ribs. A quick, frightened glance tells him a knife, razor sharp, is being held against his side.

A hoarse voice whispers, "Pay up, or else." He generally pays up.

(In subsequent chapters I shall tell how it is possible for them to possess weapons in prison.)

More vicious than this "collection agency" are the hijackers who resort to out-and-out robbery, depriving the young, the frightened and the helpless, of their little possessions. Each inmate is allowed to spend up to $5 a month on goods from the commissary—tobacco, candy, stationery, stamps, fountain pens, occasionally books and magazines. The money is provided by friends and relatives on the outside and it buys things which make prison life livable.

The average monthly drawing credit of a prisoner is below $3, for there are hundreds who get nothing to spend. But the men with the difference of $2 or $3 or $4 a month are usually good-hearted enough to share some of their commissaries with the penniless fellows. And then along come the hijackers to steal or extort these few luxuries, brow-beating their victims with threats of violence and death, and putting the threats into effect with knuckles and knives if the victims have the courage to refuse.

Breaking rule in prison is a sure path to arrest and revolt. Any man who complained openly against it would run the risk of injury or death. But we have ways of knowing what is going on among the 6000 men behind the walls.

Every time I walked through the yard, any inmate who had a complaint, who wanted to talk to me about credits or the chance of being transferred to a road camp, could do so openly.

Frequently there was a line waiting. Sooner or later one of the men in gray would glance around quickly, then whisper a few words out of the side of his mouth. It was enough. I never let on that anything unusual has passed between us. I made it a point to say, loudly, "Well son, I'll see what I can do for you."

THEN too, there are letters to the warden. The word "personal" in one corner of the envelope is sacred. These letters came to me unopened. And it is a rule that the identity of an informer shall never be disclosed.

We lose no time in smashing the gangs. The gangsters are shifted from one cell to another. Some of them we move to different jobs. Sometimes it is necessary to send some of the hardened ones to Folsom, and Folsom in turn transfers a few of its gang leaders to San Quentin. And when all else fails, there is always "Siberia" (solitary confinement) and the dungeon, which cons call "the hole."

If you think "Siberia" and "the hole" sound like cruel punishment, remember this—we are dealing with a few cruel and vicious men.

(Abandonment of "the hole" after 30 years was announced on April 21 by Mr. Holohan's successor, Warden Court Smith.—Ed.)

There was a time when the racketeers carried on a flourishing trade in commissary credit cards, forcing their victims to turn over the cards, then cashing them in themselves. We broke that by requiring the photograph and fingerprints of every man on his card. And when a man obtains goods from the commissary, he must take them to his cell at once, forestalling any attempt of racketeers to "collect" in the yard.

Yes, our gang-smashing has been successful. Years ago there were bloody "race wars" among San Quentin's polyglot population, and a con could hardly call his life his own when those broke. Then came attempted gangsterism. But the power of the prison gangster has faded fast. . . .

The Grimly Fantastic Accident in Which a Falling Tree Hurled a 12-Year-Old Boy 300 Feet to His Death.

Stanley Parish.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

LONDON.

STANLEY PARISH'S mother stood in the doorway of her home in Carshalton, Surrey, gazing toward the distant knot of figures where Stanley was at play. But there was no trace of anxiety in her face; she was, in fact, not even watching him, for Stanley was 12 years old and a self-reliant lad, well able to take care of himself.

Rather, like the group which included the boy himself, Mrs. Parish was watching the tree-felling which had added something unusual and dramatic to the annual dressing-up of streets and gardens for early spring. The workmen had been sawing away for hours at a huge elm that, after none knew how many years of luxuriant and grateful service, had reached the sorry end of its days. One by one they had removed its rugged limbs and lowered them carefully to the ground until the trunk stood bare, cut off at its topmost fork like a shattered column. Now they had attached the ropes high up on the trunk, and they had been sawing a great while at the base. Mrs. Parish knew they were about ready to bring it down, and that would be a sight she did not mean to miss.

The tree stood near an intersection, among smaller trees and in front of a row of houses, and her view from her house in Wrythelane was not the best in the world. She half wished she had walked down to the scene with Stanley and his playmates, Eric Carpenter and Harold Thomas Jameson. She couldn't make them out with any certainty — indeed, she couldn't distinguish any one figure in the group, but she could see three smaller and less quiet than the others, she could hear three voices shriller and clearer than the others, and she knew one of the busiest figures and one of the busiest voices was Stanley's.

The tree was just abou. to topple. They had rigged up the ropes, Mrs. Parish saw, to bring it down in a clear space between the surrounding trees, directly in front of the row of dwellings. They weren't trusting it to fall straight alone. One thick rope had been made fast near the top and pulled out parallel to the row of houses, and workmen were busy about a set of pulleys at the other end, as though to leave off sawing at the last moment and haul the tree down by main force.

An elm only a little smaller than the tree to be felled stood near it, a little farther out from the houses and a few feet to the side toward which the trunk was to be brought down. A secondary guide rope had been made fast just below the main rope, and led over a high branch of the second elm. This, Mrs. Parish supposed, was made fast at the ground to prevent the trunk from swinging in toward the houses as it started to fall. The workmen would have to release it on the instant that danger was past, thought Mrs. Parish, if they didn't want the falling tree to snap the rope or take that fine branch of the living elm right along with it.

They were busy now at the pulleys on the end of the main rope. The great trunk wavered, cracked prodigiously, and toppled down, thudding safely in its proper place as the tail of the guide rope flickered into the air above the elm-branch like a giant whip-lash.

MRS. PARISH'S attention was distracted momentarily by some dark object that sailed over the line of the roof-tops against the sky, at just the moment, curiously, of the crash. She had only a glimpse of it, not enough for any sort of recognition.

"I wonder what it is," she murmured; "a kite, I suppose."

It was the body of her son.

The tail of the guide rope had been coiled loosely on the ground. Stanley, completely engrossed, stepped on it as the tree began its fall. Released as the tree passed the critical point, it slackened through a third or half the fall, only to haul taut and flicker through the elm-fork with smoking speed just as the falling trunk, nearing the ground, gathered its most irresistible momentum.

It shot the boy into the air like a catapault. It was in fact a catapault, in which the weight of his slight body was a mere pellet as against the weight of the huge trunk, multiplied by the terrific energy that had been stored up, while the rope slackened as surely as though it were the coiled spring of some primitive, fiendish instrument of war.

Witnesses said the boy's body was flung above the tree-tops and across the street to fall behind a house there, 300 feet from where he had stood. They hurried him to the hospital, but he died in 15 minutes.

Perhaps the clearest statement of how the tragedy occurred was given by Stanley's horrified playmates. This is how one of them, Eric Carpenter, described it:

"The guide rope ran out towards the road, away from the front of the houses. It was slung over the fork of a big tree near the one that was being pulled down.

"Harold and Stanley and I were playing near the end of the guide rope as the tree fell. Stanley was furthest from the tree. He trod on the end of the rope coiled on the ground.

"I heard someone shout, 'Let go!'

"The rope snapped taut and the end curled round Stanley's feet, lifting him over our heads as the tree crashed down."

How 'Pops' Parker Got His Back Scrubbed

And Had to Pay $250 for the Privilege

"I got into a large anger," said Mr. Farber.

Mrs. Georgia Farber.

Michael Farber.

Charles E. "Pops" Parker.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

CHICAGO, Illinois.

MATTER of fact, there were only two people who seemed not to get any fun at all out of the Farber versus Parker suit—Michael Farber and Judge Michael Feinberg. The latter was trying the case without a jury and found it incumbent on him to save (as for as possible) the dignity of his Circuit Court. The former had to muster the frame of mind convention expects of an outraged husband. Neither, it might be added, showed any conspicuous sense of fun. As might have been expected, this didn't bring them any closer together.

And so far as Judge Feinberg was concerned, none of the company that assembled in his courtroom that day was precisely congenial to him. He regarded the defendant askance—"a man of no shame, no decency and no self-respect." The plaintiff and his divorced wife appeared scarcely less despicable in Judge Feinberg's sober view—they were all people "devoid of the fundamental principles of decency." Nothing but principals without principles; it was a tough week for the Judge.

Aquiline and bespectacled Michael Farber was suing the jovial Charles Parker for alienation of his pretty ex-wife's late lamented affections. Same were valued by the plaintiff at precisely $25,000—a pretty figure taking everything into consideration. But then, so was Mrs. Farber's.

Farber is a shipping clerk in a big mail-order house; Parker a party loving steel worker and former cabinet maker, a johannes factotum who can install a sink or repair a water heater at an off moment's notice. Farber is 32, Parker 64. Farber is slim and pale, Parker pudgy and rosy—a humorous little man thatched like a new baby. Farber had a comely, auburn-haired fun-loving wife and two small girl children; Parker has a grown son and lives by himself in a basement. ("It's the best place for sleeping I've ever found," he explains; his bedroom is the coal bin.) The Farbers and the Parkers used to be the best of friends; they aren't any more. So far as Michael Farber and Charlie Parker are concerned, at least, it's all over. It hurt Parker deeply to have his old friend call him Mister at the trial.

It all happened on a night in July. None of them happened to recall the date. Parker was in the habit of stopping at the Farber's anyway. He says he spent 75 nights there in 1934, liked to take care of the children.

As a matter of fact there are thtree opinions as to what actually went on there that night. Farber had the first say and Parker wasn't much upset by the disparities. Actually they were nothing more than details. The round little defendant sat there beside his attorney, nodding and grinning, thumping the table, and leering mischievously at the Judge from time to time. The courtroom took to him immediately and started calling him "Pops."

Farber began his account of the events that brought about his separation from his wife innocently enough. He had just returned from a hard day's work, that unidentified hot day in July—tired and perhaps a little irritable, only to find his wife and their old friend Parker there. He was surprised.

"What did you do?" asks Herbert Aschin, his attorney. "What DID you do when you found your wife scrubbing Mr. Parker's back?"

"He was in the bathtub?" Judge Feinberg ejaculated in dismay.

"Yes," Farber answered ruefully. "He was absolutely undressed." And he leaned his head wearily on his hand.

"But," the Judge asked, too eager to await the next question, "what did you do?"

"Nothing," said the disconsolate Farber. "I just put up a large protest. But then my temper arose. I got into a large anger. I said, 'Get the devil out of here, you!' . . . They thought it was a joke. They told me I was crazy and to shut up. Then, pretty soon Mr. Parker put his clothes on and left. And I used language to my wife and told her she wasn't a lady." Here the audidence got unmanagable with laughter.

"Didn't this occur at a party at your home?" the defendant's attorney asks.

"No," said the plaintiff, and Parker shook a pudgy finger at him. According to Parker's version the whole episode was merely part of a party. His version came out a couple of days later.

"NOW let's get to this bathtub," his attorney said, after eliciting the information that Mike Farber had given him a latch key himself, after he crawled in through the window one night to sleep off a drunk.

"What bathtub?" Charlie replied, pretending puzzlement, although the Chicago papers had already spread the tale on their front pages. Then, "Oh, when my back was scrubbed?" And he chuckled and shook a roguish finger at the Judge.

"Tell us about it," the attorney commanded.

"Mike was right there all the time," Parker answered. "We had a party. About 11 I said I was going to bed, and filled the bathtub. I got in and I yelled, 'Won't someone come and scrub my back.' Mike said, 'I will,' but no one came. So I hollered again, 'Won't someone come and scrub my back.' And Mr. Farber said to Mrs. Farber, 'Go in and scrub his back.' So she did."

"And did you have your back scrubbed?" queried the attorney.

"Certainly my back was scrubbed," he answered righteously. "It was a Saturday night."

According to all the testimony, this wasn't the only party the three had together. In her testimony Mrs. Farber related how a young woman who had been with them one gay evening had the nerve to suggest that she, Georgia Farber, was man crasy. "And I just lifted my hand like this," the

SKETCHES FROM LIFE

High Lights on Unusual Personalities

ERIC VON LUDENDORFF
ADMIRAL W. H. STANDLEY

The PAGAN GENERAL COMES to the FORE ONCE MORE in GERMANY

MUNICH.

THERE was a time in Germany when to say, "Ludendorff ist dafuer," was like rubbing Aladdin's lamp. "Ludendorff is for it" had a power for bringing "it" to pass that sometimes resembled the magical. The only magic involved, though, was that which lies in the human brain, and which carried General Eric von Ludendorff to a position of dictatorial power in the latter part of the World War.

And now there are indications that such a time may come again. After years in which Ludendorff, soldier and monarchist, has been at odds with his world, railing at republicanism, disarmament and compromise, his world is changing, forces are appearing which might well carry this man once more to high place, perhaps, pre-eminence, in his nation.

For one thing, Germany is re-arming and the martial spirit is strong in the land. Ludendorff is a militarist, and, more than that, has a reputation as a military genius; as Field Marshal Hindenburg's principal counselor in the war, he was widely considered the "ruling intellect" of the German general staff. He is well suited, too, to the present German cult of strength and fortitude. In a May day speech before a rally of young people, Reichsfuehrer Hitler told his audience, "You must be hard." Ludendorff is a hard man.

After many Russian soldiers had been saved from drowning in a battle in East Prussia, at his orders, he coldly explained, "We needed their boots."

Some observers think that the German Government will eventually divorce itself from the church. This, it has been pointed out, would give Ludendorff a good chance to make effective his long warfare on the prevailing religions in his country, both Protestant and Catholic.

He is a pagan, and he considers it essential for Germans, if they are to achieve spiritual unity, to break away from Christianity. On this front, too, opportunity seems to beckon to the retired warrior.

So politically-minded Europeans have a speculative eye on General Ludendorff, the only man in Germany who has the title of Feldherr (field commander.) He is 71 years old, but his friends say he retains vigor of body and mind, and is fit and ready, should the tide so run, to assume the role of man-of-the-hour.

His origin furnishes scant explanation of Ludendorff's career and personality. He comes of a North German merchant family; his father was superintendent of a farm in Pomerania. On his mother's side, his descent has been traced to a royal apothecary of Frederick the Great. In his early studies the boy Eric was far from brilliant. Even then, though, he displayed a pronounced quality of fastidiousness. He held aloof from other children of the village, not, it seems, because of any notion of social superiority, but because he disliked contact with rough manners and soiled persons. He was a very neat and clean little boy; somehow he avoided the grubbiness common with small boys even when playing the customary games of childhood with his brothers.

At 12 he enrolled in military school, showed aptitude for the study of war, and at 17 entered the army. Later he spent three years in the military academy at Berlin, specializing in study of the Russian language. Then he went to Russia for a year. In 1895 he became a captain, in 1902 a major, and served for a time as instructor in tactics and military history in the military academy. Just before the World War he was given the title of General Major and an infantry brigade.

Ludendorff was a part of the gray fighting machine that forced its way into Belgium at the beginning of the war, and, assuming leadership of the troops assailing Liege when the general commanding was killed, led the victorious invaders into that city. Shortly afterward he was rushed by special train to the Eastern front to serve as chief of the general staff under his old friend, Hindenburg. Under Hindenburg and Ludendorff the Germans crushed the invading Russians at Tannenberg and the Masurian Lakes, sweeping them out of East Prussia. These and subsequent victories in the east made both of these commanders popular heroes.

Then Hindenburg was made chief of the Great General Staff and Ludendorff was kept by his side as Chief Quartermaster-general. In that position Ludendorff contributed to the strategy of active warfare—the most brilliant part, many think — and also organized the resources of the nation to back the fighting forces. It was in directing the behind-the-lines war measures, which touched almost every phase of life in Germany, that this cool, austere soldier wielded an authority that was virtually that of a dictator. And from his office came the public statements issued by General Headquarters—including those which sought to explain to the German people the failures of German arms in the last months of the war.

Eric von Ludendorff.

A couple of weeks before the Armistice Ludendorff resigned from the army, as a result of political change in the Government which meant the end — for the time — of military ascendency in German affairs. No one could guarantee his safety then under the republican regime, and he took refuge in Sweden. A German journalist, commenting on his fall, said he had ruled Germany for two years like a dictator. The writer attributed to him a domineering personality and a desire to make his power felt in all directions.

The next year Ludendorff returned to Germany. While living quietly in Berlin, engaged in writing a book, he was interviewed by an American newspaper correspondent, who elicited from him the opinion that "France and England would have been beaten in 1918, but for America," and that the Argonne-Meuse offensive was the American Army's greatest performance in actual fighting. The old warrior did not pretend to have a friendly feeling for Americans.

Ludendorff apparently has never been able to reconcile himself to a German Republic, and life under it has been full of vicissitudes for him. He has been at least suspected of a part in almost every plot to overthrow it. He took part with Hitler in the beer putsch of 1923, but whereas Hitler was sent to prison for participation in that uprising, Ludendorff was tried and acquitted of treason. He broke with Hindenburg, a personal friend for many years as well as a comrade-in-arms, because of his old commander's acceptance of the Republic. A few years ago he attacked Hindenburg bitterly in his paper Volkswarte, saying that Hindenburg — who was President at the time — "betrayed the Kaiser and delivered Germany into the enemy's hands." He declared he made Hindenburg a national hero.

In 1924 Ludendorff was elected to the Reichstag as a German Fascist but did not distinguish himself as a legislator. In 1926 he organized the Tannenberg Bund, whose members rejected the Christian faith; and in 1933 the Prussian Government ordered it dissolved.

From time to time Ludendorff has broken into the news in ways that perhaps reflected his lack of harmony with the times. He was fined for libeling an army photographer by calling him a Frenchman in an article entitled "Examples of the Immorality of Freemasons." He was reported to have been swindled by a former plumber's assistant and a bar maid in a scheme for making gold. He was sued for slander for asking a steampship line to change the name of a ship bearing his name because he thought it was dilapidated. He bought a private cemetery for himself and family, as he didn't want to be buried in ground of any of the established religious organizations.

There has been discord also in his domestic life. In 1909 he married Margarethe Pernet, a wealthy widow, daughter of a Berlin manufacturer. They were divorced in 1926, the decree stating that both were to blame. Ludendorff then married Dr. Mathilde von Kamnitz, a nerve specialist, who had been associated with him in his post-war political activities.

It is Ludendorff's political philosophy that spiritual unity of its people is necessary to make Germany the powerful nation it should be. And to achieve this unity he contends it is necessary to suppress Jewry, Freemasonry and Christianity. It is assumed that he broke with Hitler because the latter would not carry out this program in its entirety; Hitler has used repressive measures against the Jews and Masons, but has failed to wage the stern fight on the church which Ludendorff desired. In an address not long ago, Ludendorff said: "The prevailing Christian faith is not apt for regenerating our people. . . . Every race must have its own indigenous conception of God." In an interview about the same time he was quoted as saying: "As for me, I am not merely an opponent of Christianity, but I am literally anti-Christian and a heathen — and proud of it."

Many members of his Tannenberg Bund were worshipers of the ancient pagan gods.

MUCH was made of Ludendorff's seventieth birthday, April 9, last year. Thousands of people, including many notables, gathered in the village of Tutzing, on the shores of Starnberg Lake, where he lives, occupied with writing and organizing. Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm was there, and the Government was represented by General Werner von Blomberg, Minister of Defense, who made a speech in praise of the retired soldier. A company of infantry paraded and two squadrons of airplanes dropped roses on the assemblage. Hitler had issued a proclamation for the occasion, calling Ludendorff Germany's "greatest field commander of the World War," and ordering flags flown on public buildings in his honor. The Catholic Church and the Protestant Confessional Synod declined to display flags on their houses of worship. At the birthday celebration Ludendorff's followers sang a song which had the refrain: "Save our people from the power of priests."

Ludendorff thanked Hitler for the demonstration, but apparently the breach between them has not yet been healed.

The old World War strategist is a tall, broad man, still erect in carriage and still neat and fastidious in dress. His forehead is high and his eyes are blue. In manner he is cool, suave and polite

But he is strictly a non-compromiser. In making war he sought to annihilate. Nevertheless, he used to be very fond of Heine's poetry, and of dancing.

He rebels at being a creature of circumstance; the way of life, as he insists on viewing it, he has expressed in these words: "A firm will commands fate."

The RANCH BOY WHO BECAME an ADMIRAL

WASHINGTON.

A SQUARE - JAWED, open faced man, the crows' feet about his keen eyes deepening as he grinned, leaned forward slightly as the squat little Oriental, his face a moon-shaped mask, stiffly insisted that the United States Navy was, under present treaty conditions, far superior to that of Japan.

"Admiral Yamamoto," he broke in, "We'll trade fleets with you and still lick you."

Suave diplomats gasped at the blunt remark of this uncouth sailor man who had through some gross error, they were sure, been allowed to attend the naval conversations at London. Here they had been oiling the machinery with the greatest of care and now this fellow—Admiral William H. Standley—had gaily tossed a monkey wrench into it.

Then they suffered another shock. Admiral Yamamoto actually was laughing. The laugh spread around the gloomy, high-ceilinged room and the tense atmosphere was broken. In the many prolonged sessions that followed, Admiral Standley, chief of naval operations for the United States, was recognized as a clear thinker that could not be diverted by even the most adroit diplomat of the old school.

Much of his success was due to his fondness for golf and his theory that a wholesome light could be thrown on serious matters during a friendly game. His foursomes on the British links where he established a reputation as a charming man are credited with doing much for international relations.

Soon after his return to the United States after the final parley and signing of the three-Power pact at London, Admiral Standley found himself Acting Secretary of the Navy as a result of the continued illness of Secretary Swanson. During the past few weeks he has been hurrying back and forth between his Navy Department office, Congress and the White House as important navy bills and proposals are being considered.

Standley, now within a few months of the retirement age of 64, still likes to tell how he came to cast his lot with the navy. The son of a Sheriff-rancher of Ukiah, in the northern redwood country of California, he read one day that a competitive examination for admission to the Naval Academy would be given at Santa Rosa. Just as an excuse to go to Santa Rosa, he told his father he wanted to take the examination.

So the youth who was educated to be a school teacher rode his cow pony along the trails to Santa Rosa and took tests for something about which he had little conception. He thought he had failed until word came for him to report to the academy.

Admiral William H. Standley.

During the Spanish-American War he served on board small ships without much chance for action. In the Philippine Insurrection, however, he won commendation. When the fleet was in the Gulf of Lingayen, seeking information of the rebels, Standley and a quartermaster volunteered to go ashore and map the rebel stronghold in the jungle.

As soon as it was dark, they were rowed ashore and landed without a guide or any knowledge of the country. Wading and swimming, they made their way through a snake-infested swamp. When they reached solid ground they had to fight their way back through brambles and dense thickets. Then they slowly climbed the boulder strewn side of a mountain until they were on the outskirts of the enemy camp. Hoping that Filipino sentries would not see him, Standley climbed a tree and sketched the camp.

For this exploit he was commended in an official report that read: "Your conduct in thus bravely venturing into a territory occupied by a cruel and unscrupulous enemy merits and receives the highest commendation of the department."

He again was commended and awarded a silver star "for highly meritorious service" during the World War.

Failing to get overseas duty, he worked so hard at training midshipmen and 90-day officers at the Naval Academy that he won recognition for his results.

In 1927 he became a rear admiral and served three years as Assistant Chief of Naval Operations. After three years of that he went back to sea where he established a reputation for his handling of the new heavy cruisers. During maneuvers he made such excellent use of the speedy, hard-hitting ships that the fleet soon knew him as the man who was both a strategist and a fighter of the first degree. His superiors recognized him as a man in whom they could have confidence.

THIS "No. One" job of the Navy fell to him in 1933 when he became Chief of Naval Operations, charged with the fundamental policy of maintaining the navy "in sufficient strength to support the national policies and commerce and to guard the continental and overseas possessions of the United States."

When he took over this post he announced that he wanted "a business man's navy," with "a replacement program—not a building program." He helped to frame the Vinson-Trammell bill which will build the navy to treaty strength by 1942 and provided the first replacement program that the navy has known.

He asserts that he is a real pacifist, explaining that "since we have to fight the wars, we don't want them."

He Had Often Played at Being Abducted So That When the Real Thing Happened He Knew Exactly What to Do.

PARENTS dislike even to think about kidnaping. Since the abduction of little Charlie Ross in the last century stirred the nation, there has been in the hearts of mothers and fathers a special fear of this heartless form of extortion. The increase of kidnaping in recent years, brought to a climax by the tragedy of the Lindbergh baby, has intensified this feeling.

It's different with the children themselves. Many have been instructed to be on guard against abduction and probably most of them who are old enough to understand the term fear kidnapers—but only as they fear burglars or lions. The idea of kidnaping is not so dreadful to them as to prevent their making play of it. Just as they used to play Indians and pirates, they now draw on modern gangsterism and related criminality for their blood-and-thunder dramatic improvisations. And "kidnaping" is one of their games.

Ten-year-old Tommy Koch—Henry Thomas Koch Jr. on formal occasions—liked to play the kidnaping game. He liked particularly to be the victim and try to escape. He got to be pretty good at it, acquired some reputation among his neighborhood playmates as a kid it was hard to keep prisoner. Then, the other day, he encountered the real thing. Kidnaped by a man who hoped to extort $20,000 from his father, Tommy had opportunity to enact the part of prisoner in earnest. How he acquitted himself makes a story which properly begins with the decline in financial fortunes of Richard D. Taylor.

Taylor was a member of a well-to-do family of Plainfield, New Jersey. For years he traveled as a salesman in the Middle West, and made a comfortable living, his earnings running as high as $700 a month. But adversity came. He lost his job and became estranged from his wife and two children, and from his mother, brothers and sister as well. Not long ago he found himself, at the age of 42, reduced to a capital of about $60. He was living then at Akron, Ohio.

One day last month Taylor drove from Columbus, Ohio, to Allentown with a woman whom he had known for some years, a resident of this city. Conversations with her and her family elicited some information about the family of Henry T. Koch, a local department store executive who was supposed to be "pretty well fixed." That night Taylor returned to his hotel and worked out a plan to rehabilitate himself financially by kidnaping Koch's son for ransom. He prepared five ransom notes, lettered on wrapping paper.

The next morning Taylor was waiting outside the Franklin School, where Tommy was a fifth-grade pupil, shortly after 8. He had never seen the boy, but he knew about how old and big he was. He stopped two boys with a question, but neither one was the lad he was looking for. Then Tommy came along. "Are you Tommy Koch?" Taylor asked. Tommy said he was.

"Well, Tommy," the man said, "your father sent me to take you to the farm to see a colt. But the accelerator of my car is stuck. Sit there and press the pedal while I fix it."

Tommy obligingly got in the automobile and followed instructions. He had been warned not to get into cars with strangers, but it didn't occur to him to be suspicious of this matter-of-fact man. Besides, the prospect of seeing the colt was a powerful inducement. Tommy is exceedingly fond of horses; riding is his favorite entertainment. Tommy knew that on the farm—which is owned by the family group which operates the department store—there was a colt, but it had died. Taylor said the one they were to see was one which had just been bought. This, incidentally, was true; the family was considering turning the new animal over to the boy.

Tommy wondered, before they set out, if it was all right to miss school. Taylor assured him it was, his father had said so. As might be inferred from his record as a salesman, Taylor was glib and persuasive. The boy was glad to accept without too close scrutiny this unexpected outing.

But when they came to the farm, on the outskirts of town, and, instead of turning in, sped on past, Tommy realized something was wrong, and began to ask questions. At first Taylor was evasive. Finally he informed his young companion that he was being kidnaped.

Tommy accepted his plight quietly. He and his captor talked about this and that—about guns, for one thing. Taylor said his automobile was equipped with bullet-proof glass. The boy was not impressed. "That doesn't mean anything," he said. "My pop's machine has bullet-proof glass, too, but he lost the key and the car was locked, so he smashed the glass with a rock."

They traveled on, through the Little Lehigh Parkway, a scenic development at the southern end of Allentown, past bridle paths and on to country roads that wind along a creek, finally into a wooded section.

THE car stopped, and Tommy was taken out and led into the woods. The man took along a blanket from the automobile. They reached a secluded place. "Lie down, Tommy," the captor ordered, and the boy had to obey. Taylor then bound his prisoner's hands behind his back and fastened his feet together, using adhesive tape. He put a wide strip of the tape over the lad's mouth. Finally he wrapped the blanket around the youngster.

"Now stay there till I come back," the man said. Tommy didn't say anything to that; he couldn't very well, with adhesive tape across his mouth.

Taylor hurried back to Allentown; he had a good deal to attend to. First, from a drug store pay station he telephoned Koch that his son had been kidnaped. The merchant thought at first it was a joke—that some friend was trying to "get a rise" out of him. But soon the father realized that the matter was deadly serious, was convinced that the man at the other end of the phone line had actually abducted Tommy. The kidnaper asked where he should send the messages concerning ransom, and Koch told him to send them to the store. Taylor then hung up.

The abductor's next move was to call at two telegraph offices, leaving at each a ransom note to be delivered by messenger. One of them demanded $20,000 for the return of the boy, and contained the dreaded threat, "Remember Lindbergh."

So much accomplished, Taylor started back to the lonely spot in the woods where he had left his prisoner.

Things had been happening there during his absence. As soon as his captor was out of sight, Tommy began trying to get loose. He hadn't promised he wouldn't.

Bringing into action the escape technique he had developed in play, he wriggled and pitched and squirmed with all the energy that a supple, wiry boy is capable of. Presently he was free of the enshrouding blanket. He rested a few moments and looked about. Not far away he spied a stone with a jagged edge protruding from the ground. That was his next objective. With many contortions, he bumped along until he could touch the stone with his feet. Another hitch or two and he had the tape binding his ankles across the jagged edge. Then he sawed with his legs. In a few minutes the tape was frayed through. Tommy got to his feet and hurried from there.

His hands still fastened behind him and his mouth taped shut, the boy came to a field where an elderly man was plowing. Tommy approached him but for some reason couldn't make the man understand his plight. The boy later explained, "He didn't know what I wanted; he was kinda old."

Tommy went on until he found another man working in a field. This man—he was Charles Moyer, employed on the farm of William Clauser—gave prompt assistance. He took out a knife and cut the tape binding Tommy's hands, then pulled the strip of adhesive off his mouth.

The boy wasted no time on hysterics or anything of that sort. "I've been kidnaped and left in the woods," he told Moyer. "Get my mother on the phone and tell her I'm all right and the man that kidnaped me is coming back."

Moyer took Tommy to the Clauser farmhouse and Mrs. Clauser telephoned to his mother. It was the first information Mrs. Koch had that Tommy was not safe in school. She said she and her husband would start for the farm at once.

SHE then telephoned Koch. He had received the first ransom note only a few minutes before, and was trying to decide whether to notify the Allentown police or call on J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Bureau of Investigation of the United States Department of Justice—leader of the famous G-men—to help him. All that was forgotten with the news that Tommy was free and unharmed. In a few minutes the father and mother were speeding toward the Clauser farm to reclaim their son.

A short distance behind them drove two Allentown policemen, apprised of the situation by a park policeman stationed near the Clauser farm. When the officers reached the farm they quickly found Taylor in the nearby woods, directed to him by Clauser, who had been keeping watch.

Simultaneously Taylor saw the policemen and discovered that his prisoner was missing. He started to run. "Let him have it!" shouted one of the officers. At that Taylor surrendered.

Tommy came up to the group. "I think he had a gun," he told the policemen. "He reached for cigarettes several times and I thought he was hiding something. Maybe he threw it away."

But Taylor said he had no firearm, and search of his clothing and the vicinity failed to disclose any. He did have in his pocket, however, a deputy's badge from his home town.

At the county jail Taylor said, "I'm ready to plead guilty and take my medicine." He declared he had no confederates, and added, "I was a fool to do it." It appeared that his character did not match the desperation of his deed. He said that before his arrest he had decided not to go on with the thing; that if he had found Tommy where he left him he would have taken the boy a little distance away and then released him.

Although his bungling betrayed the tyro, Taylor was careful not to use the mails in his attempt at extortion, which would have brought his case under Federal law. The second ransom note was delivered by messenger to the Koch home—just about the time its writer was arrested. It said the third note would be found at a certain highway intersection. The third note told of arrangements for the child's return on payment of the ransom.

THE two other notes were found in Taylor's automobile. They were "final warnings," to be sent if negotiations did not proceed smoothly. They contained threats to abandon the boy and "let him starve . . . you would not find him in a thousand years."

Tommy was naturally a center of attention on his return from his brief captivity. At the police station he was interviewed by reporters and photographed by camera men, and later, at his home, he was photographed for a news reel. He answered questions calmly and frankly, but seemed to be somewhat concerned when he learned that some of the questioners were reporters—he had seen one making notes. Very earnestly Tommy said, "Please don't have this in the paper; I don't like publicity." He consented to pose for a picture at school the next day when promised his schoolmates could also be in it.

The boy showed interest in the fate of his abductor. "How long will they keep that guy in the cooler?" he asked. Someone answered, "He can get life for this."

Tommy whistled. "Whew, that's a long time," he said.

Brought before Judge Richard W. Iobst less than a week after his arrest, Taylor pleaded guilty and was sentenced to a term of from 25 to 50 years in the penitentiary. In imposing this sentence, the Judge said: "Kidnaping is the most horrible of all crimes. I would rather see my son dead than kidnaped."

For the rest of that exciting day on which he was kidnaped Tommy was on vacation—no school until tomorrow, by special dispensation of his parents. After the midday meal, which he ate with his usual appetite, he practiced marble shots in his grandmother's back yard and told other youngsters all about his adventure.

There is one aftermath of his experience that Tommy is rather uneasy about. He may not be allowed to play the victim and use his escaping skill in the neighborhood kidnaping games any more. There has been a good deal of talk among the other kids of barring him as a professional.

The HANDSOME JUVENILE WED the FOLLIES BEAUTY

But It Lasted Only 24 Hours And Now She Is Saying "Too Much Mother-in-Law."

NEW YORK, N. Y.

My wife, Jessica Pepper Janney, having left my bed and board, I will not be responsible for any debts or obligations incurred by her. Leon E. Janney, 120 W. 45th st.

THAT kind of notice being one of the most common in the agony columns of the New York Times, few devotees of that bizarre and conglommerate bulletin board recognized this one as anything out of the ordinary. Possibly a few recalled Leon Janney as that remarkably pretty youngster who was a child star in the movies five or six years ago. Many more remembered that he was the grinning young man who has attracted attention this year in the role of the half-breed in Langston Hughes' play, "Mulatto." Jessica Pepper, who has been glorified in the current version of the "Follies" also has her admirers, being a lovely, starry-eyed brunette of singular beauty.

There weren't many in a position to know just how much of a novelty this was, among "bed-and-board" notices. As a matter of fact it was the first public announcement of the wedding. . . .

The ceremony itself was in the best Gretna Green manner. It took place at dawn in the village of Armonk, Westchester County, the latest elopement resort for Broadway runaways. And the bed and board referred to in the announcement were only hypothetical, since both bride and groom remained the guests of their respective mamas and had been married only about 24 hours when the separation was announced.

What is most curious about this presto chango marriage, this "I do," "We don't" episode, is not so much its breath-taking suddenness as the fact that both parties to it profess to be still very much in love with one another — and have been for several months past.

"I love Leon," says the bride, "and if you ask him he'll tell you that he loves me." Her pretty eyes brim over as she remembers their romance. How can he have been so cruel? Why are the young so heartless? Is there, as James Thurber once asked, any life after marriage?

Cynics are prone to point out that Leon and Jessica remained man and wife only long enough to get the wedding pictures made. The Janney attorney remarks that the marriage lasted long enough for Jessica to make a quick shopping tour with her mother and run up about $400 worth of bills, charged to Leon's account.

Leon Janney, and the former Jessica Pepper.

"WHY, I only bought some necessary spring clothes," she said afterwards. But the explanation came too late to prevent that item in the personal notices column. The young husband had decided, for better or for worse, to seek bachelordom again and keep his mind on his momentarily interrupted career.

It has taken Leon's mother years to start him on that career. She began her work in Hollywood when he was a cherubic, tousle-headed youngster, decidedly winsome and as pretty as a girl. By 1930 he was well launched and the possessor of a long-term contract. But adolescence interfered with his progress and he was brought back to New York after a short time and sent to school. Afterwards he was doomed to start again. He wanted to make a name for himself on the stage.

And this year, just as he was approaching his coming of age, he seemed to have made good. The role in "Mulatto" was his first big part since leaving Hollywood.

Mrs. Bernice Janney, his mother, has planned his career and managed it. Jessica says she has opposed their love affair from the start. Her own mother hasn't been exactly a scheming matchmachinator, either. She hasn't any pronounced illusions about Jessica's career; it may be artistic, and then again, it may be just marriage. But if the latter is to be Jessica's choice, Mrs. Pepper is going to be pretty darned sure her son-in-law can support the young woman in the style to which she has been accustomed. More of that later.

Leon Janney celebrated his twenty-first birthday just a few weeks ago and invited a party of friends to help him come of age in the Empire room at the Waldorf. It was a very gay feast and the longer it lasted the more tender and amorous grew Leon and his fair light of love, Jessica Pepper. Finally, along towards 4 o'clock, somebody suggested that the cure for their particular malady was a wedding. Why not right away? Leon looked at Jessica and Jessica looked languishingly at Leon. Why not?

And so they rented a car and scored off to Armonk. The bridal party included four of the supper guests. The drive took over an hour and Leon had time to do a little thinking on the way. As the car pulled into the driveway, marked by an electrically lighted sign: Julius A. Raven, Justice of the Peace, the groom turned to his bride-apparent.

"There's still time," he said, "if you want to call it off."

"Don't be silly," answered Jessica.

They were married at 5 o'clock, Armonk being in a position to provide all the trimmings on short notice. And shortly after 6 they were back in town explaining it to their mothers. On the way home they invited their attendants to come back for a wedding breakfast at noon. This was destined not to come off. Mrs. Pepper had too many things to discuss with the newlyweds. She wanted to know, first of all, where and how they were planning to live.

As a matter of fact almost immediately after receiving the marriage announcement and greeting her new son-in-law, Mrs. Pepper asked him whether he wouldn't like to take over the lease on her apartment. She knew, she said, that Leon was living at a hotel. Surely that was no way to start off.

A couple of hours of her arguments mixed up with the after-effects of a coming-of-age party and wedding, all in one, was enough to persuade Leon that he needed some sleep. He stumbled off in search of his bachelor's bed. By the time he was ready to assume the duties of married life, he was informed of the $400 in trousseau bills.

SOMEHOW he never got around to looking Jessica up again. He just went to his lawyer with Mrs. Janney. On the attorney's advice they inserted the aforementioned advertisement in the Times.

Asked for an explanation, Jessica buried her pretty face in her hands and sobbed. "He said I was interfering with his career," she wailed. "Someone has told him I might be a hindrance to his future. Because I am a Follies girl, I suppose." She blames her mother and his for her disappointment, certain that Leon Janney still loves her. And she refuses to consider the separation final.

SCIENCE STUDIES AERONEUROSIS

less of the lack of rest and mental fatigue. Their mental state resembles that found in pneumonia patients. Their digestion suffers most markedly and to such an extent that the characteristics of this type of disturbance have come to be known as "aviator's stomach." Symptoms of aviator's stomach occur from one to four years before the disease is fully developed. They consist of a gnawing pain, gurgling intestines, diarrhea and incomplete digestion of food.

Although superficially somewhat similar to neurasthenia, hysteria, hypochondria, the early stages of dementia praecox and psychasthenia, there are obvious differences between them and aeroneurosis. Of the seven cases of these diseases in the test group, all were free from the symptoms most characteristic of aeroneurosis.

The disease is primarily emotional in its origin and the causes of this sort are pretty uniform. First of all pilots are kept continually apprehensive about their physical condition by the periodic tests they are forced to undergo. As they grow older they realize that it is more difficult to qualify for tests they passed with ease at 22. Secondly, the aviator usually enters the service (or did up to recently) filled with the notion that his calling is a high and adventurous one; the change in the attitude of the public with the increased use of the airplane has caused him to lose face, however slightly. Thirdly, aviators reach their peak of efficiency at a comparatively early age; during their thirties their efficiency begins to decline and keeps on, regardless of increased experience and judgment. Fourthly, they are constantly exposed to two fear evoking agencies which Captain Armstrong considers the only ones capable of producing manifest fear in young infants—hence instinctive fears. These are loud noise and falling. In sum, the aging aviator is constantly preoccupied with "thwarted ambitions, biologic pattern distortions, disqualifying physiologic changes, disqualifying nervous and mental changes, ego deflation, economic insecurity, social insecurity, psychic trauma, self-preservation."—A grim picture.

THE chief cause of apprehension, however, is the fact that the flyer is continually in jeopardy of his economic and social position. While his pay is sufficient to permit him to live comfortably and he can expect periodic raises, there are an abnormally large number of reasons why it may be discontinued or decreased at any time and he may be demoted to ground duty for reasons wholly beyond his control. He is continually faced with disability and death and the normal effects of age are inevitably heightened in his mind.

Curing the disease by treatment is not especially difficult, though the effects of the cure are unsatisfactory. Diets, rest, hydrotherapy and psychoanalytic methods proved futile. Removing the patient from his environment without loss of pay was successful, but within three months to a year on duty, the symptoms were back, usually aggravated. Captain Armstrong believes that the only effective treatment is preventive. While reduction of hazards would be one way of assisting prevention, it is not necessary provided the pilot is given better assurance of security, "adequate pay for the risks involved" and the understanding that ground service would not constitute a humiliation.

Captain Armstrong has been dissatisfied with the cures he has been able to achieve and with the lack of preventive "treatment." Four of his 18 patients have been permanently removed from flying —one by death, one for physical disability, two for aeroneurosis. Three others are about to be retired as permanently disabled, four are on ground duty and seven are permitted to fly under close supervision.

He is convinced that these 18 men could have been eliminated during their preliminary examinations. He is equally convinced that they were among the most admirable and suitable men in the service.

'POPS' PARKER Got His BACK SCRUBBED

witness said, waving it daintily. "And she had a nose bleed. Then my husband hit me. He knocked me unconscious."

Such little quarrels, as she called them, were not unusual in the family after 1931 (long before Parker got the latch key). Her husband was "always quite masterful." During one of the little quarrels they started to argue in a tavern and didn't stop until they were all the way home. They stopped there; Mrs. Farber was unconcious again, and Junior Parker had to take her home to his house. Junior Parker also took her to Wisconsin for a couple of weeks. When her husband's lawyer asked Junior how many times Farber had told him to keep away from his home, the young man said three or four. She now occupies an apartment over the Parker coal bin.

Apparently Attorney Aschin wasn't satisfied with his masterful client's displays of positive annoyance. He brought him back to the stand for another try.

Mike said it burned him up the way Charlie kept staying at his house. "What is this," he had asked his wife, "a habit?"

"And why did he stay with you and your wife so much?" Farber's attorney asked.

"Personally I never could figure it out," the plaintiff answered unhappily.

And didn't he resent it?—the attorney wanted to know. "Why," answered Farber, "the third time he stayed all night, my dander was aroused."

And Arthur Werner, who had been Farber's best man, testified.

Werner told of accompanying his friend to the home of the latter's sister-in-law on a visit in 1934. When they arrived they found that Parker and Mrs. Farber had gotten there first and were having a little beer party in the kitchen. And when Mike Farber "started arguing," Parker observed that he was a damn fool; why he, Charlie Parker, had just been buying clothes for Farber's own children. Whereupon, the witness continued, "They got into a little fight. It didn't amount to much. Parker got two black eyes out of it. He made a pass at Farber and Farber blocked and hit him between the eyes. Two blows and two black eyes. That was all."

When the trial came to an end Judge Feinberg was ready with an explosive opinion. He found Charlie Parker guilty of alienating Georgia Farber's affections, but didn't seem to value them as highly as Mike had. He lopped two zeros off the amount and awarded the divorced husband $250. The reason:

"This case calls for a character scrubbing rather than a back scrubbing. These things might have happened in 'Tobacco Road.' It is hard to conceive of a husband coming home from a hard day's work and discovering his wife scrubbing another man's back.

"But he registered only a mild protest. A red-blooded husband would have acted entirely differently.

"Because of this I will not allow him to enrich himself in this law suit."

In the HALF-WORLD BEHIND PRISON WALLS

der case, but as one of America's greatest boxers. His fame as a fighter had waned when in 1924 he killed his sweetheart, Mrs. Theresa Morse, at Los Angeles in a drunken rage.

McCoy (whose real name is Norman Selby) had been wearing prison gray for three years when I came to San Quentin. He had been working "inside" (they all must serve a long time behind the walls before they can get the coveted jobs beyond the walls) and his goal had become the prison fire department, situated next to the warden's office.

I think he must have dreamed of a fireman's job until it seemed greater than any glory he ever won in the ring. Anyway, his good conduct entitled him to an outside job. And one day he sent a form application to our clerk petitioning for a fire department job.

A study of his record convinced me he could be trusted outside the walls, so I approved his application. And was he proud!

A big, affable fellow with an infectious grin, he had always been popular with the boys inside. And when he became a fireman that grin threatened to split his face in half.

The fire house became his baby. He got himself a regulation fireman's helmet with a bell jigger on top. He cleaned the apparatus until it sparkled. And because he wanted to keep in training, he set up a punching bag in the fire house. I could hear the rhythmic rat-tat-rat of the bag outside my window or look up to see the Kid pitching ball. But he never neglected his beloved fire wagon.

We couldn't let the Kid teach boxing to the other inmates. The boys could use the punching bag, but we had to bar sparring—too much of an opportunity to take out grudges on each other!

You couldn't see a spark of viciousness in Kid McCoy. He once told me that if he hadn't been crazy drunk he never would have killed Mrs. Morse. He was paroled in 1932 and became physical instructor at the Ford Motor Company in Dearborn, Michigan.

Clara Phillips, the Los Angeles "Tiger Woman," whose hammer murder of Mrs. Alberta Meadows and subsequent jail break furnished the West with one of its most sensational crime cases, was anything but tigerish in San Quentin.

To revert to prison lingo, she "did her time as hard as anybody," that is, behaved herself and was most industrious. She went to work in the prison dental laboratory, learned rapidly and made herself quite handy. Headlined as hard-boiled, she proved kind and sympathetic.

Then Clara got in bad—quite bad. In 1932 a matron intercepted a note she had slipped to Thomas J. Price, a young Los Angeles convict working as an electrician. That note was certainly —well, shall we say glowing?— and it lost Clara six months "copper" (time off for good behavior.)

I might explain here that prior to the opening of Tehachapi Women's Prison we had 142 women in San Quentin; and we had to watch them like a hawk. The most amazing mashes grew up between men and women who didn't even have the opportunity to whisper to each other or to know each other's names. Few men got inside the women's quarters, but those that did—convict electricians, plumbers and garbage men—were the center of attention.

THE women were always trying to slip them love notes. They would drop them in passing, secret them in cracks on the walks, in garbage cans, in the hedge, even in the wash stands.

But to get back to Clara Phillips. Her behavior, except for that one slip, was excellent. She wrote occasionally for The Bulletin (the prison magazine) and put all her talent into the annual New Year's show.

Finally, in June, 1935, she was paroled. The trial jury had convicted her of second degree murder, not of first as has often —and mistakenly—been stated. There were loud protests, but I'm convinced it was a wise move. Clara murdered under the greatest provocation—she was maddened by the belief that her home had been violated and that "the other woman" was about to elope wih her husband. I believe she will make a useful citizen. You won't hear of her in crime again.

Dorothy (Dot) Ellingson was a jazz girl of the 1920s. Only 16, she shot and killed her mother in San Francisco because Mrs. Ellingson objected to her wild ways. Dot was sentenced to one to 10 years in prison for manslaughter and came to San Quentin in August, 1935.

She was rambunctious at times in the women's quarters, but she did manage to get deductions for good behavior, according to law. The parole board consistently turned down her applications for parole, so she had to serve her full time, minus the credits she earned.

The day before her release she came to me and begged me to see she left prison alone and unnoticed.

"I intend to lead a clean life and make something of myself," she told me.

I believe the girl meant it.

("I've often heard people liken a prison wardenship to the unenviable position of sitting atop a keg of dynamite," says Warden Holohan. Next week he writes on "Food and Riot.")

MICE STRO'S MUSIC SCHOOL

THE CHARACTERS

WILLIE WEBFOOT—An unfortunate little duck.
WILMA WEBFOOT—Willie's proud mother.
MICE STRO—A very musical mouse.
HIPPERTY HOP—A jolly little frog.

Little Willie's life would be a lot happier if his mother weren't so sensitive. The other day a squirrel neighbor told how well her son was learning in Professor Hammerhead's tree school and expressed her sorrow for the duck folks because they couldn't learn anything but swimming. Willie's mother-pride was badly hurt and she decided right then and there to send Willie to tree school. The poor little duck was horribly out of place. Imagine a duck climbing a tree. But that is just what Willie was expected to do. Of course Willie couldn't do it, so the professor sent him home. Gosh, but Wilma was mad and she is still mad when we see her talking to Willie as

THE PLAY BEGINS

WILMA WEBFOOT—Aren't you ashamed of yourself for not being able to climb a tree. Just think how that silly old squirrel, Mrs. Hoarder, is going to laugh when she hears about it.

WILLIE WEBFOOT—But, mother, I did the best I could.

WILMA WEBFOOT—Don't you tell me anything like that. If you had really tried you would have climbed that tree. We ducks can do anything a squirrel can do, and more. We've got brains. And I'll prove it to that stuck-up Mrs. Hoarder if it's the last thing I do. I'm going to send you to Mice Stro's singing school right now. Go get your cap, and hurry. (Poor Willie! His heart sinks when he hears his mother says this. But being an obedient little duck, he does what his mother tells him. And he is soon on his way to Mice Stro's singing school.)

WILLIE WEBFOOT—(Walking.) Mother is unreasonable. She knows good and well I can't sing. (He stops.) I've a good mind not to go. No, I promised her I would. Gosh, but I dread it. (He keeps on walking and in a little while he looks over a hill and sees Mice Stro conducting his class. He pauses and then goes up to the great singing teacher, who comes down to see what Willie wants.)

WILLIE WEBFOOT—My mother wants you to give me singing lessons.

MICE STRO—Hm-m. I never had a duck in my class before. Let me hear you sing something. (So Willie quacks as loudly as he can, while Mice Stro claps his hands over his ears to shut out the discordant sounds.)

MICE STRO—(Flying into a rage.) Terrible, terrible. Positively the worst voice I ever heard. Go away—I never want to hear it again—Go away!—Go away!!! (Poor Willie starts for home and on the way he meets Hipperty Hop and tells the frog all his troubles.)

HIPPERTY HOP—Come with me to our swimming school. It's lots of fun and I know you can sing in our singing class. All you have to have is a loud voice. Come on.

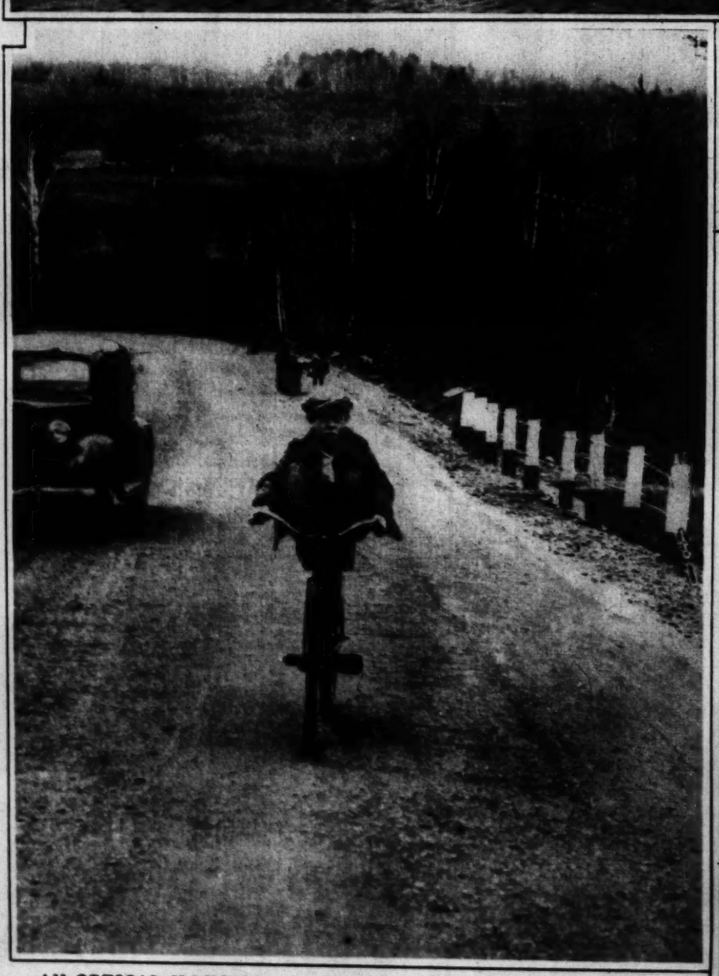
COMMEMORATING SEPTUPLETS

A monument raised more than a century ago in Hamelin, Germany, to Mrs. Anna Romer who gave birth to seven children at one time. The children, five of whom were girls were born January 1, 1600, and all died on the following January 20.



MOVING HIS WHOLE HOUSEHOLD—

The Seminole buck who is shown paddling a canoe hewn from a tree in Southern Florida is evidently pulling up stakes for his wife and possessions are aboard. A bed sheet is being used for a sail.

AN OPTICAL ILLUSION—This part of a road at Wilton, Maine, is seemingly an uphill grade, but boys on bicycles, as shown above, or other vehicles find themselves coasting drawn by force of gravity. The thrill of "coasting uphill" has drawn thousands to the spot.

AN IMPROVISED FERRIS WHEEL IN THE HOLY LAND—It was made by a handy man in the shadows of Mount Carmel, at Haifa and a small charge to the children who are delighted to ride in it repays him for his ingenuity. It is propelled by hand. —Publishers' Photo Service.

SHAPE OF THINGS TO COME—The dirigible Hindenburg casts a giant shadow on the waves of the Atlantic. This photograph was made during its trial voyage to Rio de Janeiro, before the more recent triumphal crossing to this country.

A "HANG-GLIDER"—That's what Bob Morse, who spent four years developing it, calls this contraption, shown ready for a flight at Redondo Beach, California. It weighs 90 pounds, and the pilot takes it into the air by running with it. His feet serve as the landing gear.

WASHINGTON IN SPRING

WHAT PEOPLE THINK THEY KNOW ABOUT A NEW KIND OF CAR

MOTORISTS who have been accustomed to higher priced cars (and have traded them in on LINCOLN-ZEPHYRS) are the most generous in their praises of this new kind of automobile. Quoting from a few of many letters recently received:

"It takes 70 as smoothly as 45 in any other car." . . . The V-12 engine in the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR develops 110 horsepower. The next car with a twelve-cylinder engine costs more than three thousand dollars.

"My LINCOLN-ZEPHYR has gone over two thousand miles and I am pleased to report 15 to 16 miles to each gallon of gas." . . . Economy as well as stimulating performance is built into the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR.

"When they say a car has everything, this must be the one they are talking about.". . . The car is full of forward-reaching ideas in designing and engineering. The beauty of complete streamlining is evident at a glance. But those graceful, flowing lines are determined by steel trusses, as in a bridge. Body and frame are one, welded together. The resulting rigid structure is cradled on soft transverse springs. All six passengers are balanced "amidships." Seats are like divans. There is plenty of leg room and head room and visibility. Passengers step directly onto the floor of the car. There are no conventional running boards.

"Any one with any knowledge of automobiles will buy the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR after driving it." . . . Even a short ride will introduce you to the new rhythm of motoring. Ownership of the car will make going places a new joy. The Lincoln Motor Company. Builders of LINCOLN and LINCOLN-ZEPHYR motor cars.

V-12 motor develops 110 horsepower. Wheelbase 122 inches. Spring-base 133 inches. Room for six passengers and luggage. Seven colors. Safety Glass throughout. Owners report from 14 to 18 miles per gallon.

1. Xtrulock Molded Construction—no stitches to break—no seams to chafe the feet or wear out stockings . . . and longer wear in the bargain!
2. Ventilated Uppers that keep feet cooler.
3. The Hygeen Insole that prevents excessive perspiration odor.

GOODRICH BASEBALL CONTEST

DETAILS OF CONTEST

Write your answers to the following questions which appear on the official entry blank, available at your Goodrich Sport Shoe dealer:

1. What player will lead the American League in home-runs hit up to and including August 1, 1936?

2. What pitcher will lead the National League in strike-outs up to and including August 1, 1936?

On the back of this entry blank, write a short essay of not over 150 words, explaining the reasons for your choice of these players and then, after studying a pair of Goodrich Sport Shoes, state in a few words which feature you like best in Goodrich Sport Shoes—and why.

The Goodrich dealer can explain these features—which are listed at the left—to you. Your entry blank must be signed by him, for if you win first prize, he, too, gets a free trip to a World Series game in consideration of the help he has given you.

Awards will be based on the reasoning logic displayed in your essay.

Send in your completed entry blank (signed by your dealer), together with the front of a Goodrich Sport Shoe carton or a facsimile thereof. Mail to Contest Judges, B. F. Goodrich Company, Footwear Division, Watertown, Mass. Entries must be postmarked not later than midnight, Saturday, June 20th.

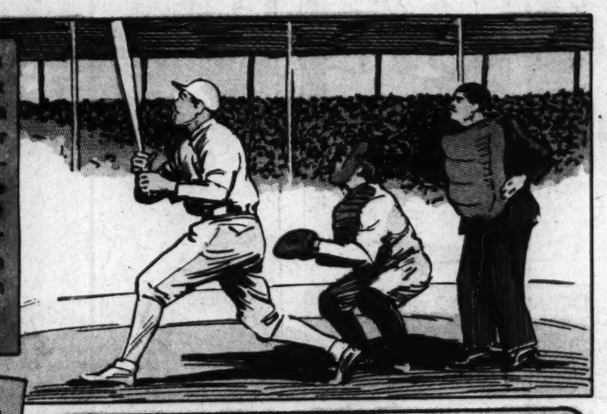
THEY'RE STILL TALKING

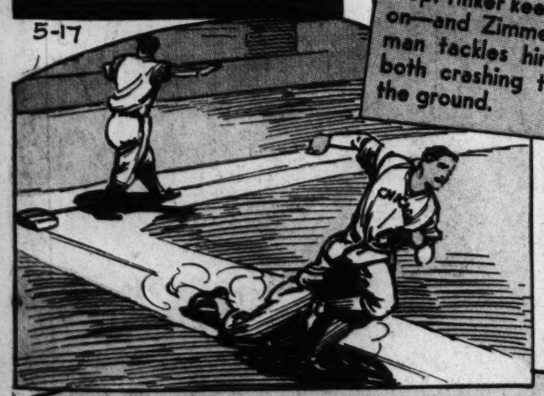
About the Time Zimmerman Tackled Tinker at Third

The Chicago Cubs and the New York Giants have played a scoreless game for four innings. Mathewson is pitching for the Giants. In the first of the fifth Joe Tinker starts things off with a screetching smash to center.



Zimmerman, coaching at third, is afraid Tinker won't be able to make home. He signals for him to stop. Tinker keeps on—and Zimmerman tackles him, both crashing to the ground.

But Tinker isn't that easily stopped. Rising, Zimmerman tries to drag him back to third. They struggle furiously.



Finally Tinker frees himself with a lurch and races for home. He makes it, despite the delay—and his home run proves to be the only score of the game.

Today that homer of Tinker's, which beat the great Christy, wouldn't be allowed. That was in 1908. Nowadays the baseline coach cannot touch a base runner.

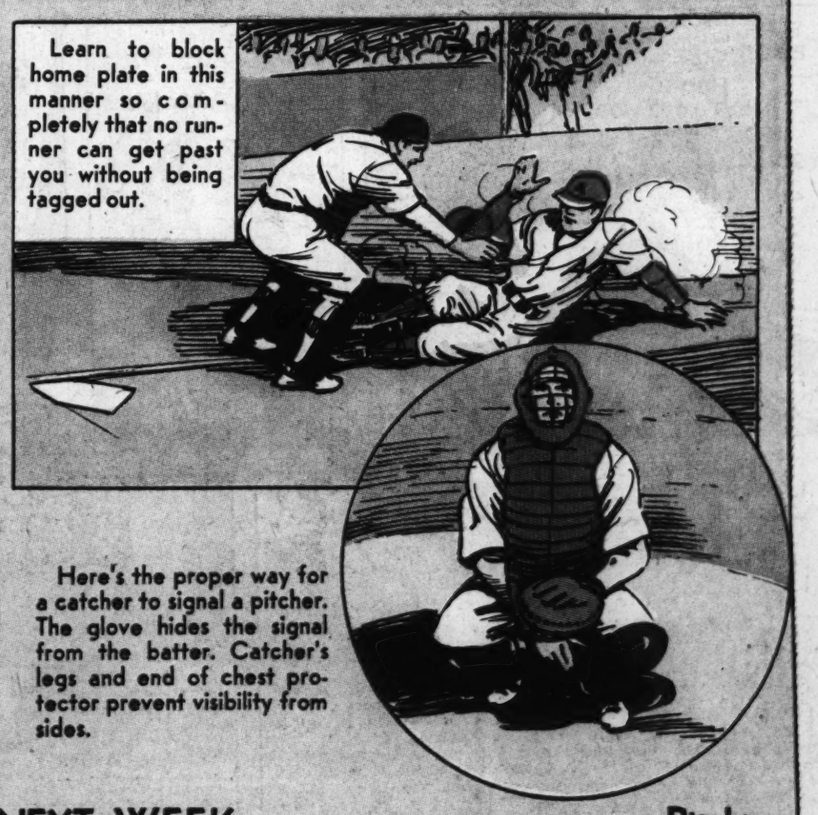
Learn to block home plate in this manner so completely that no runner can get past you without being tagged out.



Here's the proper way for a catcher to signal a pitcher. The glove hides the signal from the batter. Catcher's legs and end of chest protector prevent visibility from sides.

WHY CAN'T MOTHER SEE —a guy can't take Molly to a dance...

- BUT SAM'S MOTHER DID SEE— AND GAVE MOLLY A HELPING HAND

DON'T LET ADOLESCENT PIMPLES PUT YOU AT A DISADVANTAGE

YOUNG people—during the years between 13 and 25, or even longer—are frequently humiliated by unsightly skin eruptions.

At this time, after the beginning of adolescence, the body is changing, maturing. Important glands develop, causing disturbances throughout the system. The skin, especially, becomes extra sensitive. Waste poisons in the blood irritate this sensitive skin—and pimples break out.

Thousands of boys and girls have found Fleischmann's Yeast helps to get rid of adolescent pimples. It clears them up by clearing these skin irritants out of the blood. Then—the pimples disappear.

Eat 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast daily—one about ½ hour before each meal—plain, or dissolved in a little water. Start today—and keep on eating it regularly until your skin is entirely clear.

WOMAN HATER?

THAT'S WHAT MEN THOUGHT -BUT GIRLS KNEW BETTER!..

MOST BAD BREATH BEGINS WITH THE TEETH!

WHY let bad breath interfere with romance—success—happiness—when it is so easy to root out the commonest cause . . . improperly cleaned teeth.

Leading dental authorities point out that decaying food deposits, lodged in the hidden crevices between the teeth, are by far the most common source of unpleasant mouth odors—of dull, dingy teeth—and of much tooth decay.

Ordinary cleaning methods, which merely polish exposed surfaces, fail to remove these deposits. Use Colgate Dental Cream. It has a special penetrating foam that gets into every tiny crevice—emulsifies and washes away the hidden food and acid deposits that cause offensive breath.

And at the same time, Colgate's soft, safe polishing agent gently, yet thoroughly, cleans and brightens the enamel—makes teeth sparkle—gives a new brilliance to your smile.

Be safe—be sure! At least twice daily brush your teeth . . . your gums . . . your tongue . . . with Colgate Dental Cream and have cleaner, brighter teeth and a sweeter, purer breath! If you are not entirely satisfied after using one tube, send the empty tube to COLGATE, Jersey City, N. J., and get double your money back.
